RYAN WAS HANGED.

Went to Gallows Protesting His Innocence—His Brother the Victim.

NORTH BAY, June 3.—A bright, beautiful morning, with not a cloud in the sky, greeted Maurice Ryan as he was awakened from an apparently peaceful slumber to pay the penalty of the crime he had been convicted of—the murder of his brother, Francis Joseph Ryan, at North Bay, in November, 1907. His last night on earth was passed calmly in consultation with his spiritual adviser, his Lordship Bishop Scollard, in conversation with his jailer, and in giving a statement to the press. He retired shortly after midnight and slept peacefully until awakened one-half hour before his execution.

At fifteen minutes to 6 o'clock Radcliffe proceeded to the cell of the condemned man pinioned his arms behind his back, and the procession to the scaffold began, led by Bishop Scollard reciting the service, Ryan being supported by Radcliffe and the turnkey. Coming in sight of the scaffold Ryan weakened and cried bitterly, his agitation increasing in violence as he ascended the scaffold. As he took his position on the trap he cried out, "I am innocent!" As the black cap was quickly drawn down over his head his sobs continued, and, fearing he would collapse completely, Radcliffe adjusted the noose, and without waiting to pinion his legs, pulled the lever, and Maurice Ryan was shot into eternity. Life was declared extinct eleven and three-quarter minutes after the drop, an unusually long time, nine minutes being the average and twelve the maximum. The lever was pulled at six minutes to six.

Maurice Ryan made the following statement to the press on Wednesday evening, with the full knowledge that his fate was certain, and that his time on earth was limited to a few hours:—"I am not guilty of the crime which I have been convicted of, nor do I know anything about it, and I thank Mr. Bull, my lawyer, for what he has done for me, as I did not have one dollar to pay him for fighting my case. If I had had another trial I could have proved where I got the money, but I did not know I would have to account for it; and, not being able to see my lawyer until the last few days, I was unable to give him the information I wanted, consequently he had nothing to work on for a new trial, nor had he any money to work with. I had several witnesses, but did not have money to get them here, and I did not know where they were before the trial, finding out afterwards, but too late. I hope that people will soon learn that I died an innocent man. I forgive my enemies, and die with a clear conscience, so help me God."

FRILLS AND FURBELOWS.

Half of the new straws have a plaited effect, and some are of the coarsest description.

The pointed waistline is a novelty after the straight across effects of the Empire cut.

Moss roses with their attendant buds and foliage are being very much used in hat trimming.

Hat styles demand that the hair be flat at the front, wide at the sides and full at the back.

One of the fancies of the hour is for coats made of net to wear over silk princess gowns.

Peacock colors lead with the scarfs, and they are more frequently than otherwise, embroidered.

Myriads of flowers will be used in millinery, from the tiniest of roses to the most exaggerated.

Silk and wool ottoman of sheer texture is making up some very handsome costumes for summer.

Net sleeves are still in good and regular standing and probably will hold out through the season.

In spite of the great flower vogue, ribbons seem to have usurped first place on the spring hats.

On tailormades the sleeves are plain and severe, but on dressy gowns they are puffed and ruffled.

A new pongee ribbon in dashy designs is intended not so much for hat decoration as for women's neckties.

Blouses, almost without exception, are being chosen to match the gowns with which they are to be worn.

The snowy frills in sleeves and down the fronts, at wrists, and jabots, are to be very smartly this spring.

Foulards, after having for several years been a drug on the market, are now coming smartly to the fore again.

Mixtures of grays and browns with deep tones are still, as in the winter, among the very popular fabrics.

Spring costumes show a great deal of embroidery and braid, the latter appearing in odd patches in unusual places.

Many of the newest coats show a hint of returning fulness in their skirt parts, but the increase is very slight.

A great many ornaments are worn in the hair, but the bands of ribbon or shell or jewelled kind are the most used.

Few taffetas appear among the new imported gowns. Nets, tulles, striped mousselines and plain chiffons predominate.

There is now no doubt that the waist line, which has so long been hovering near the empire line, is rapidly descending.

Black pipings, black cord edges, black girdles and jet buttons are found together on many simple little gowns and suits.

Hatpins are enormous about the head and terrifically long about the pin, necessarily, with hats the size they are now.

It is decreed that lines must be very straight up and down, and that neither skirt nor jacket shall show the slightest coquetry.

One-piece frocks and jumper dresses are best for girls under fifteen. If a girl is stout she will look best in a one-piece frock.

Although many people consider crepe de chine too old for children, it certainly wears well, and in light shades makes up into lovely little dance frocks.

Dangles, tassels, fringes, are all in order, and passementerie drop trimmings may be found in all the modish colors and in the metallic, pearl, jet and crystal effects.

Many of the imported gowns are trimmed with silk covered cord that is very effective and necessarily somewhat exclusive, since it cannot be bought in the shops.

A new silk hat for men has a very little bell and is smaller at the top than at the bottom. It is embellished with a rather wide cloth band, but has no bow.

The craze for bronze has been embodied, so far, in shoes, stockings gloves, belts, bags and parasols. The latter are of a lovely shade of bronze pongee.

Some of the dainty or natural-colored batiste and pongee waists are embroidered in soft Persian tones and patterns and have frills that are edged with little bands in the leading shade.

There is a decided tendency toward oversleeves reaching just to the elbow, and continuing from there to the hand by a close-fitting gauntlet affair of lace and embroidery.

The princess gown, with skirt cut sufficiently short for walking, has gained considerable success, in spite of the dictum of dressmakers that such a gown was ungraceful.

Bunches of artificial fruit are seen made of satin, taffeta and velvet. They are tied to parasol handles, worn in the corsage or pinned around the hat where the veil is lopped off.

An ivory white satin may have several tunics in various pale shades of gauze, or in silver or gold tissues, which will give to it the appearance of an entirely different gown.

The duller metallic effects are gaining speedily in favor. In fact, the metal laces are dyed or veiled with net, so that all that is left of their brilliance is a soft sort of incandescent shimmer.

The latest umbrella has the signs of the zodiac woven into the border, the handle has a tasselled loop through which to thrust the wrist, the tips of the frame are gilt, and the handle is the color of the silk.

The coat either with the cap sleeves in the sleeveless style makes a very effective summer wrap and may be worn over lingerie dresses or be used to complete a suit, its use really depending upon the material chosen.

The cuirass is a bodice that fits the figure closely but that does not suggest any construction of the waist. It is carried down beneath the natural waistline straight and still closely fitting, to the edges of which is added a skirt.

SOLD WITHOUT A LICENSE.

Four salesmen for the "Old Homestead" range appeared before Police Magistrate McGregor, of Dundalk, a week ago Saturday on an information laid by Constable Hemphill, charging them with breach of a county by-law in selling their wares without a license. The "Old Homestead" salesmen have been making their headquarters in Dundalk for nearly two months. Evidence was taken as to the sales made and the connection of the salesmen with the manufacturers. The Magistrate imposed a fine of $20 and costs against each salesman. Mr. Van Norman, the manager, intimated his intention of appealing against the decision.

GENERAL NEWS ITEMS.

Action has been entered to cancel the hotel license held by the Fort Erie race track. Welland County license commissioners, at their last meeting, granted a license provisionally to the Fort Erie Jockey Club, and adjourned until Friday, June 11th, to name the manager, though it is thoroughly understood that T. and J. Crooks, of Hamilton, will get this plum. The license is a yearly one, but the place is only open during the race meets. An admission fee is charged to reach the license establishment, which is inside the track property, and this is believed to be illegal.

Taking an ounce of carbolic acid in mistake for medicine, Mrs. William Piper, 133 Lennox street, Toronto, nearly ended her life Monday night about 7 o'clock.

Mrs. Piper had been ailing for some time with heart trouble. She had been doing a hard day's washing, and after supper she went to take the medicine which had been prescribed for her.

In mistake, she took a bottle of carbolic acid from the shelf, which was used for disinfecting purposes, and took that for her medicine. After she had done so she realized her mistake.

Dr. Couch and Dr. Wells were sent for, and they soon arrived. They used a stomach pump and gave her emetics. Tuesday morning she had regained partial consciousness.

Suggesting that Miss Susan Bradley and her brother, H. A. Bradley, can come to settlement of the litigation between them, the Divisional Court has reserved judgment.

H. A. Bradley, a Windsor jeweller, appealed from the decision of the local judge of Essex County awarding Miss Bradley $1,500 damages for breach of contract. Miss Bradley, who had sued for $6,000, cross-appealed.

When H. A. Bradley's wife died in 1895 he sent for his sister, a Toronto dressmaker, to keep house for him and his two children. She demurred about giving up her business, as he might marry again, but he undertook not to do so.

In August, 1906, Miss Bradley feared he was about to marry and warned him that she must be provided for. He married on January 15th, 1908, and the action followed, the sister refusing a house in Windsor worth $2,200, on which there was a $800 mortgage.

MATRIMONY AND TRAINED NURSES.

There have been a number of instances lately of prominent men who have married their trained nurses, circumstances having favored a preliminary courtship which has led right up to the altar.

A widower may call a trained nurse in to take care of his children, a bachelor may be nursed back to life by one of these indispensable adjuncts to modern civilization.

Our literature has taken account of this, and in at least two books published within the past year the trained nurse has taken a prominent part.

It is oftentimes cheaper to marry a trained nurse permanently than to pay her salary. These delightful people—when they are delightful — are likely to be wasteful when drawing a salary. They make large washings, disturb the servants, use up a lot of expensive food and cannot be expected to take the same economical interest in a household that they would if the principal they succeed in saving may in time advert to themselves. Therefore, it is often better to marry them at once and to get the thing off one's mind.

The fact that the trained nurse is becoming so prominent in matrimony does not argue well for the average girl brought up in a boarding school, and who has learned all of the accomplishments, but none of the necessary attributes. It shows that in the economy of life, men are likely, other things being equal, to move along the lines of least resistance and choose the most desirable partners. If trained nurses were proverbially homely creatures, there would doubtless be no show for them, even under these favorable practical auspices.

But trained nurses are not homely. Their garb also favors them. An average woman, so far as looks go, seems to be transformed into a sort of every day angel the moment she puts on the dress of a trained nurse. She becomes immediately invested with that sweet, tender, womanly temperament that suffuses a gentle glow over every man's heart, and awakens that latent sentiment, which is quite indifferent to the bridge playing, smart, millinery aspect of so many of our modern women. The trained nurse also has another advantage by no means to be despised. She always looks clean. Many well dressed women convey an indefinable impression of having been thrown together, and this in spite of the fact that they may carry upon their heads any number of pounds of carefully selected hair, and may have been fussed over for hours by a dressmaker. Their vanity, or possibly a certain looseness of moral structure, is often revealed in this way to the masculine eye.

Is the deflection to the trained nurse by so many of our leading citizens in reality in the nature of a revolt against those conditions which produce the smart, sophisticated, over-athletic bridge playing girl?

Certainly the experience which a trained nurse gets is infinitely more valuable to a household than that of the average "finished" woman, and the fact that this very training does not seem to take from, but rather add to, her sentimentality, is a potent argument in her favor.—Thomas L. Masson, in Life.

RECIPES.

NOEL CAKES

Cream together half a pound of butter and half a cupful of pulverized sugar, adding when of the consistency of whipped cream the whites of six stiffly beaten eggs, alternating with a pound of sifted arrowroot; continue beating with an overhand motion for fifteen minutes, flavoring very slightly with almond extract and bake in small heart shaped pans in a moderate oven for thirty minutes. Ice when cold with a vanilla fondant frosting, decorating the top of each with tiny crystallized cherries and angelica, arranged to represent holly sprays.

SUGARED SOUFFLE NUTS

Beat three eggs until thick and foamy, adding a quarter of a teaspoonful of salt and half a teaspoonful of extract of anise, sifting in sufficient flour (blended with a heaping teaspoonful of baking powder) to allow of the batter being rolled out; work and knead to a very elastic dough, rolling very thin and cutting into small circles; drop into very deep, hot fat and fry to small golden balls, frosting with the following: Make a syrup of two cupfuls of sugar and one of water, boiling to the "thread degree," and throw the nuts a few at a time into the boiling syrup, stirring carefully until the frosting forms a rough coating.

PLUM PUDDING

Here is a good plum pudding recipe. The ingredients are one pound butter, one pound suet, chopped fine, one pound sugar, two and one-half pounds flour, two pounds raisins seeded, chopped and dredged with flour, two pounds of currants, one-fourth pound of citron shredded fine, twelve eggs, whites and yolks beaten separately, one-half ounce cinnamon, two grated nutmegs. Cream the butter and sugar, beat in the yolks of the eggs, whip smooth and light, add the milk, then flour alternately with the beaten whites. Add the spice and lastly the fruit well dredged with flour. Boil five hours, turn onto a hot platter and serve with hard or burned brandy sauce.

TAPIOCA FRUIT JELLY

(For the convalescent)

Soak over night a handful of evaporated apricots, cooking them the next morning until tender, covered with a cupful of cold water; then skim out the fruit, adding in the proportion to each cupful of fruit juice, a pinch of salt, one tablespoonful of pearl tapioca, a heaping teaspoonful of sugar and a little orange juice; again return to the fire and simmer gently until the tapioca is transparent and very thick. Allow the mixture to cool but not harden and then beat in the chopped fruit, a tablespoonful of minced figs and a cupful of sweetened whipped cream beaten solid; turning immediately into chilled jelly tumblers and setting in the ice chest to chill and harden.

NOVEL INDIVIDUAL PUDDINGS

Pass one pound of stoned dates and half a pound of suet through a meat chopper, sifting in two cupfuls of flour, three-quarters of a cupful of brown sugar, half a teaspoonful each of ground ginger and allspice, one teaspoonful of powdered cinnamon, and half a grated nutmeg, mix thoroughly and then add one cupful of softened graham bread crumbs, a liberal pinch of salt, a quarter of a pound each of chopped raisins and currants, two well beaten eggs, three tablespoonfuls of New Orleans molasses and a half cupful of hot water in which has been dissolved a scant teaspoonful of baking soda; turn into buttered individual timbale molds and steam for two hours; when cooked cover the tops with rounds of white paper dipped in brandy (to keep fresh).

GENERAL HINTS

The secrets of beauty and good health are plenty of natural exercise, good plain nourishing food at regular intervals, daily bathing, and proper breathing—not one in fifty uses good judgment with regard to either—and a healthful occupation for the mind.

"These things are not new," my readers will say, for I have written of them before—not once, but many times in these columns—and I shall write of them again and again, for so great is the need of women to understand and practise them, that it would be but seemly if they were reiterated from every housetop throughout the world.

Just the many simple things woman can do to preserve and enhance her charms, such as the daily bath, the daily walk, plenty of ventilation in rooms, partaking of plain, good food, and avoiding wines, spirits, beer, strong tea and coffee, she will not do, and the things she ought not to do, such as eating sweets, taking meals at irregular hours, sitting indoors day after day, etc., etc., she insists upon doing, and then wonders why her skin is sallow, her eyes dull, her figure not developed, etc.

Beginning with the feet it may surprise those who have never investigated the subject to be told that a healthful condition of the feet is as closely connected with happiness, and a sound condition of the whole body, and patticularly the brain and nervous system, as a healthy state of the teeth. The feet should be bathed every night, if not night and morning in tepid water, to which has been added a few drops of ammonia. The feet need more attention in the way leather cages in which they are encased for hours at a time, and it is astonishing the amount of neglect which the poor feet get, and which they will bear.

Change the stockings daily, and the boots or shoes as often as the feet are tired.

Remember too that good nourishing food, plenty of baths, and outdoor exercise will do more to give a good complexion than all the artificial aids put together.

Try a bath daily for a month, and prove for yourself the immense improvement in the complexion, while daily friction with a firm towel will give you flesh like unto velvet and add much vigor to the frame.

For your face use tepid water and a pinch of borax, bathe well; then if flesh is flabby, bathe with cold water to which add a pinch of borax and a few drops of eau de Cologne, or a squeeze of lemon juice; bathe thoroughly, as this will ensure firmness of flesh, and in time rid you of lines, etc.

SON HURT, ASSAILS MOTORMAN

London Father Crazed by Sight of Boy Crushed by Car

London, Ont., June 1.—Vincent, the year and a half old son of M. Famulara of 761 Dundas-street, was perhaps fatally injured tonight while playing in front of his father's laundry, being run over by a street car.

The father, seeing his child lying on the tracks, bleeding, went temporarily insane, and made a desperate attempt to attack the motorman, but he was forced into the laundry building, where he was held on the floor until a physician was brought.

The child had been playing in front of the laundry at about 7 o'clock.

The first intimation the family had of the accident was when of his sisters saw the car backing up, and went to the window to see her brother on the tracks. At Victoria hospital his left leg was amputated at the thigh and the other about two inches below the knee.

IMPORTANT TO LADIES.

It is not often an opportunity occurs at your door to see the latest Parisian and New York styles in Hair Goods, yet such is the case, as Prof. Dorenwend, of Toronto, is visiting this town, and invites your inspection of these goods at his private apartments reserved at the Hotel.

These Hair Goods styles, when properly adjusted protect and ornament the head, soften and beautify the expression of the face, and consequently tone up an aged appearance. Be sure and see them at Queen's Hotel, Orangeville, Thursday, June 24

—We have something particularly good in scribblers this year. Do not fail to see our lines. McGuire & McKitrick.

ATHLETIC NOTES.

The series of games arranged between juvenile lacrosse teams from the different Wards commenced on Thursday evening with a match between the North and East Ward teams. The boys from the North showed that they were worthy to inherit the mantles of the Henrys, Irvines, Tucks and Menarys, by worsting their opponents by 6 goals to 1. On Tuesday evening the West Ward team defeated the South Ward representatives by 9 to 0. Mr. J. W. Aiken refereed both games in a satisfactory manner.

—Writing to The Banner from Ridgedale, Sask., on June 5th, Mr. A W. Armstrong says, "We have had a very late spring here this year, but seeding of all kinds is now practically finished. The programme will be provided by Mr. Will White, humorist, and Miss Frances Wright, soloist, assisted by local talent. Watch for posters giving full particulars.

TO SET ASIDE WILL.

Wm. G. Moore, of Toronto, a son of the late James Moore, of Mono Mills, who died last October, has commenced an action against his sister, Susan Adeline Fagan, of Mono Mills, executrix of his father's will, set aside. Some of the reasons alleged are undue influence on the part of the executrix and age and mental incapacity of the testator. The action will likely be tried at Brampton at the coming Fall Assizes. Jackes & Jackes, of Toronto, are acting for the plaintiff and Mr. Geo. Robb, Orangeville, is defending the action.

CONDUCIVE TO LONGEVITY.

That the salubrious climate of Orangeville is conducive to longevity is evident from the great age to which some of our citizens have attained. Amongst a few of the elderly gentlemen may be mentioned:—Mr. Jas. Cooper, 94; Mr. John Stephenson, 93; Mr. Robert McKeown, 91; Mr. Thos. Temple, 90; Mr. John Claxton, 88; Mr. Sepha Donner, 86; Mr. Thomas Farnell, 83; Mr. J. King Fisher, 82. Most of these have resided here upwards of half a century and may they be long spared is the wish of The Banner.

A GOOD SCHOOL.

The Fall Term of Orangeville Business College, which is a link in Canada's Greatest Chain of High Grade Business Schools, will commence Aug. 30th. It will be well for young people desiring advancement to investigate closely the success of its graduates and learn the advantages of being connected with this Chain.

As this College is affiliated with the Spotton Correspondence Schools, students may study at home altogether or in part, and then finish at College, thereby saving considerable board bills.

HOME FROM THE WEST.

Deputy-reeve W. A. Simpson, of Amaranth, has returned home from Regina, where he went with a car of horses about three weeks ago. While favorably impressed with the West, Mr. Simpson thinks that a man is better off on 100 acres in Ontario than he would be on a quarter section in the West. It is farming on a large scale that brings the opportunity to make money. Mr. Limpson visited Mr. John Hinton's place near Condie, Sask. Mr. Hinton and his partner, Mr. Bennett, have 300 acres in wheat and 100 acres in oats. The crops are later than usual at this season, but are looking healthy and vigorous.

GENTLEMEN WHO ARE BALD.

Investigate and see for yourself the Art covering in Wigs and Toupees. Prof. Dorenwend Patent Toupes are now worn on over 90,000 heads by all classes in all stations of life.

In this particular structure the ventilation is perfect; as light as a feather; is securely adjusted to the head; can be combed just as your own hair; they make any man look ten year younger, besides the protection you get from Catarrh, Colds, Neuralgia, etc. Call and see them at Queen's Hotel, Orangeville, Thursday, June 24th.

POLICE COURT.

Samuel Street had John B. Rusk, his next door neighbor, before the Police Magistrate yesterday afternoon for threatening to put the complainant out of business with an axe. Four witnesses were examined. Further particulars will be heard on Tuesday.

ELECTROLYSIS.

Miss Helen L. Bremner, graduate in Dermatology, has opened an office over Howard's drug store, where she may be consulted privately on Monday of each week and on fair days. Miss Bremner will treat by electrolysis for the removal of superfluous hair, moles and all other facial blemishes.

LARD FOR BUTTER.

A few days ago a local merchant bought what he supposed was a 20 lb. crock of butter from a farmer, who lives a number of miles east of Orangeville. On taking it to the cellar and emptying it, he found that the crock was filled with lard with a thin covering of butter. The seller settled the matter by agreeing to taking 10 cents a lb. for the contents of the crock. Evidently all the mean people are not dead yet.

KEEPING CHILDREN WELL.

Every mother should be able to recognize and cure the minor ills that attack her little ones. Prompt action may prevent serious illness—perhaps save a little life. A simple, safe remedy in the home is therefore a necessity, and for this purpose there is nothing else so good as Baby's Own Tablets. They promptly cure all stomach and bowel troubles, destroy worms, break up colds, make teething easy and keep children healthy and cheerful. Mrs. Jos. Levesque, Casselman, Ont., says:—"I have used Baby's Own Tablets and have always found them satisfactory. My child has grown splendidly and is always good natured since I began using this medicine." Sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

BROTHER TOLD BROTHER

One Suffered for Fifteen Years, the Other for Thirteen.

The convincing powers of a testimonial were never more clearly shown than in the case of Mr. Hugh Brown, A brother, Lemuel Brown, of Avondale, N.B., read in the paper about Hon. John Costigan being cured by "Fruit-a-tives." Knowing the Senator would only endorse a medicine which had cured him, Mr. Lemuel Brown tried "Fruit-a-tives." They cured him of Chronic Indigestion and Constipation, so he urged his brother to try them.

Hartland, N.B., Oct. 28th, 1907.

"Three doctors told me that I had Liver Disease and serious Stomach Trouble. My stomach was very weak. I took their medicines for thirteen years and grew worse. My brother (who was cured of terrible Indigestion by "Fruit-a-tives" after suffering for 15 years), recommended me to try these wonderful tablets. I bought half a dozen boxes and have just finished the sixth. I eat all kinds of hearty foods without distress and am greatly improved in every way. "Fruit-a-tives" also cured the Chronic Constipation which was so distressing in my case."

(Signed) HUGH BROWN.

50c a box, 6 for $2.50; a trial box, 25c. At dealers or from Fruit-a-tives, Limited, Ottawa.

LAWRENCE ANDERSON.

Profound sympathy is felt for Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Anderson, Zina St., in the trying bereavement they have sustained through the death on Monday night of their only son, Lawrence, a fine boy between 5 and 6 years old. The little fellow, who was a general favorite, was taken ill six weeks ago with scarlet fever, which seemed to strike inward and affect the heart and other vital organs. His condition became critical and Dr. W. P. Caven was called in consultation with the local physicians. The services of two trained nurses, Miss Brett and Miss Anderson, were also procured, and one or the other was with him constantly day and night. Always a strong, healthy and vigorous child, the stricken boy made a brave fight for life. Time and again there would be a gradual improvement for a few days, but this was always followed by a dangerous relapse that left the little patient weaker and diminished his chances of recovery. Through all his suffering he showed a patience and cheerfulness not to be looked for at his age and always seemed happy with his father or mother at his bedside. About nine o'clock Monday night he passed peacefully away, having been conscious and able to speak almost to the last. The funeral was held to the Forest Lawn Cemetery on Tuesday afternoon, Rev. G. A. Rix, conducting the services. A large number of beautiful floral offerings bore mute testimony to the sorrow of the many friends of Mr. and Mrs. Anderson and the general sympathy that goes out to them in the hour of their great trial.

MRS. THOS. G. WELLS.

Mrs. Thos. G. Wells, a former resident of Orangeville, passed away at her home at Jessopville on Monday, May 24th, at the age of 28 years. The deceased lady, who was a daughter of Thomas Black, of Black's Corners, is survived by her husband and one daughter, Bernice, a girl of three years. She had been in poor health all winter with heart trouble. There was a large attendance at the funeral, which was held to Shelburne cemetery on Wednesday, May 26th. Rev. W. J. Tribble, of Corbetton, held the services at the house and grave. Mr. Wells and family moved from Orangeville about a year ago. Mrs. Wells was a member of Orangeville Council No. 85, C.O.C.F. in which she carried $1000 insurance. Much sympathy is expressed for the husband in his trying bereavement.

MRS. ALEX. SMITH.

Mrs. Alex. Smith, formerly of Orangeville, died at her home in Thorndale on Tuesday, June 1st. The deceased lady had been in ill-health for two years or longer. She was 48 years of age and is survived by her husband and two daughters, Mrs. McCutcheon and Miss Verly, both of Thorndale. She was a member of the Methodist Church. Mr. Smith was a miller in Watt's grist mill up Orangeville last summer. The bereaved husband and daughters have the sympathy of many friends in Orangeville.

Let Me Tell You Something

A woman who is sick and suffering, and won't at least try a medicine which has the record of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, is to blame for her own wretched condition.

There are literally hundreds of thousands of women in Canada and the United States who have been benefited by this famous old remedy, which was produced from roots and herbs over thirty years ago by a woman to relieve woman's suffering.

Read what these women say:

Belleriver, Que.—"Without Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I would not be alive. For five months I had painful irregular periods and inflammation of the uterus. I suffered like a martyr and thought often of death. I consulted two doctors who could do nothing for me. I went to a hospital, and the best doctors said I must submit to an operation, because I had a tumor. I went back home much discouraged. One of my cousins advised me to take your Compound, as it had cured her. I did so and soon commenced to feel better, and my appetite came back with the first bottle. Now I feel no pain and am cured. Your remedy is deserving of praise."—Mrs. Emma Chatel, Valleyfield, Belleriver, Quebec.

Erie, Pa.—"I suffered for five years from female troubles, and at last was almost helpless. I tried three doctors but they did me no good. My sister advised me to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and it has made me well and strong. I hope all suffering women will just give Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial, for it is worth its weight in gold."—Mrs. J. P. Endlich, R. F. D. 7, Erie Pa.

Since we guarantee that all testimonials which we publish are genuine, is it not fair to suppose that if Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound had the virtue to help these women it will help any other woman who is suffering from the same trouble.

For 30 years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has been the standard remedy for female ills. No sick woman does justice to herself who will not try this famous medicine. Made exclusively from roots and herbs, and has thousands of cures to its credit.

Mrs. Pinkham invites all sick women to write her for advice. She has guided thousands to health free of charge. Address Mrs. Pinkham, Lynn, Mass.

DOG SAVED LITTLE GIRL.

OTTAWA, May 31.—To the instinct and strength of a large collie dog a little Ottawa girl owes her escape from death by drowning. While some children were playing near the St. Louis Dam on the Rideau canal one of them fell off the dock into the water. The others set up a scream of terror, which attracted the attention of an automobile party on the driveway and also of some men in the locality. Meanwhile, however, a large collie dog, which happened to be on the dock, leaped into the water, grabbed the little girl by the dress and kept her up till one of the men pulled her out.

Pains of women, head-pains, or any pain stopped in 20 minutes sure, with Dr. Shoop's Pink Pain Tablets. See full formula on 25c Box. Sold by T. Stevenson.

GIRL'S HAIR IS PULLED OUT.

One day last week Mabel Pearson, the 7-year-old daughter of John Pearson, met with a painful accident at the residence of James Pearson, cross. The little girl was operating a where she has been residing, at Glencream separator and in some way her hair, which was hanging loosely, got caught in the shaft and was wound around it. Before the machine could be stopped nearly all the hair on one side of her head was pulled out with a portion of the scalp, but it was fortunate that her hair was not in a braid or she might have been scalped. Dr. Carson attended to her injuries and no permanent disfigurement is ex-

LOST LIFE FOR MONEY

One Man Killed and Three Injured in Fire on Steamer

Vancouver, May 28.—Trying to save money and clothing, Hans Larsen, a deck hand, perished in a fire which gutted the saloon and staterooms of the steamer Coquitlam, owned by the Union Steamship company.

The steamer left here for Massett, Portland Canal, at 2 a.m. yesterday, and put back to port seven hours later. She carried a full cargo of cannery supplies and settlers' effects.

In a two-hour fight by the ten passengers and crew of eighteen against the fire, Second Mate C. W. Watts was overcome by smoke, and Fireman Sato and Second Engineer George Black were badly burned.

RED-HAIRED CALEDONIANS.

Scientist Has Been Studying Pigmentation in Scotland.

Red hair is found in distinct areas north of the Grampians, and especially in the northeast of Scotland. Mr. Tocher, Peterhead, who has made the question of pigmentation a special study, and has just been helped to conclude a color survey of the school children—over 500,000—of Scotland, announced this as one of his results in a lecture to the Educational Institute at Dumfries.

In most European countries, he said, there is a distinct predominance of one type over the others. In North Germany and Sweden, it is the blonde type; in Italy the brunette. No such predominance is found in Scotland. Dark hair and fair are present in equal proportions. The dominant color among Scottish children is brown, and it has to be shown how far brown is really a blend of fair and dark. If it is so there is evidence of the formation of a new type in Scotland.

The proportion of red hair throughout the country is a little over 5 per cent.—high compared with the continent. One cannot overlook the reference of Tacitus to the red-haired Caledonians. Some curious facts brought to light suggest that red hair is not entirely or strictly a racial trait. It may have some peculiar physiological if not pathological connection.

Mr. Tocher has found a distinct difference between the color distribution of children in densely populated parts and in rural and less populated districts. Emigration has also produced an apparent tendency to excess in certain forms of mental and physical defects. In the main the difference between the distribution of color in Glasgow and the general population is due to children of both Irish and foreign nationality.

Lord Roberts on Rifle Shooting.

Lord Roberts presided over the annual meeting of the Society of Miniature Rifle Clubs held at Grosvenor House. The annual report, which was adopted, referred to the past year as a memorable one, as in it the first competition of the Queen's Cup was held, and the year was also that in which the number of affiliated clubs first marked 1,000. The total number of clubs was now 1,235. Lord Roberts spoke of the great value of training the young in shooting, if only by the aid of miniature clubs. Even a winner of the King's prize had found benefit by practice in such ranges. In olden times we were known as the best shots with the bow in all Europe, but he was afraid they would not hold their own nowadays as shots. The conditions of war had entirely changed since he first entered the army, for nowadays the fighting was in open order, and when a man lay for hours, perhaps in the hot sun, without a man to speak to, it was a great strain. A man could only fight under these conditions if he had great skill with his weapon and had the self-reliance brought about by discipline. That was why he had been so anxious to bring before his fellow-countrymen the necessity for dealing with these matters properly.

Why it costs so much to send a small parcel by express became apparent at the sitting of the Dominion Railway Board in Toronto last week.

The money is needed to pay from 92 to 150 per cent. profit on the capital stock of the companies.

Mr. W. S. Buell, who is associated with Mr. G. F. Shepley, K.C., in investigating the rates charged by the express companies, submitted an array of interesting figures showing the progress of the three companies since their organization.

"The late Judge Killam, when he was chairman of the board, expressed the opinion that such figures as I am about to submit should not be made public," said Mr. Buell, "I would like your Lordship's ruling on that point."

"I have no objection to the press taking a note of the figures," said Mr. E. Lefler, K.C. representing the Canadian Express Company.

Mr. F. H. Crysler, Dominion Express—"I think in fairness to the companies these figures should be kept private."

Chairman Mabee—"Where is this to end? In giving reasons for anything we do, are those reasons to be kept from the public also? What are the objections to proceeding in public? In a moment of weakness I once consented to hold an enquiry in camera and one of the parties to it secured the judgment and had it published. I don't believe in these hole-in-the-corner enquiries at all."

After a short conference with Commissioner McLean, Chairman Mabee said:—

"My fellow Commissioner and I are of opinion that the capitalization of a public utility corporation is a question of as much public concern as are the Express rates. This inquiry should not be shrouded in mystery. There is no reason, that I know of, why the inquiry should not be conducted in a public manner. This is a public tribunal, and the people have a right to come here and hear all the proceedings. We have no sympathy with proceedings in camera."

Mr. Buell—"The financial results to the express companies of the present tolls are enormously disproportionate to the amounts invested. The present rates are as high or higher than in the past, so it is clear these results have been produced by the present tariff."

The figures submitted by Mr. Buell were as follows:—

The Canadian Express Company was organized as a private concern in 1865, with a nominal capital of $500,000, of which $275,200 were subscribed, and $27,520 paid up. In 1892 the Grand Trunk Railway Company bought out the Canadian Express Company paying for it $660,000, which was placed in the hands of trustees for pro rata distribution among the shareholders.

These shares were transferred to certain officers of the G. T. R. and there was no doubt that the company belonged to the Grand Trunk. In 1892 an inventory of its property showed a valuation of $60,000, which had now been increased to $212,719,-03, and this represented the actual value of the property used in giving the express service, and formed the basis on which the profits should be figured.

The capital stock had been increased to $3,000,000, but there was nothing to show that any more had been put in than the original $27,520, as the increase in the value of the property had been made out of the earnings. It was said that the property of the railways used in the business should be included, but it had been shown that the railways got 50 per cent. of the earnings, which represented their return on the investment.

The total net earnings of the company for the past seven years averaged $179,638, which was equal to 83 per cent. on the value of its property in 1908. Deducting the ocean receipts and money orders which the company said should not be included in the returns of express business, the percentage was 85, and deducting the ocean receipts only, the net earnings were 100 per cent. on the actual value of the property at the end of 1908. If there were added to the sum of $660,000 paid by the Trunk, the property accumulated since the purchase, the amount would be $812,719, and the average earnings on that basis, 26 per cent. But what was the $660,000 paid for? It might have been for the franchise, and this must be considered in arriving at the value of the company's property.

The Dominion Express Co. was incorporated in 1882 with a total paid-up capital of $100,000, of which $04,500 was in cash and $75,500, in C.P.R. land grant bonds.

Mr. Crysler—"There has been no evidence regarding land grant bonds."

Mr. Buell—"The statement from the treasurer's books shows that the bonds were paid off out of the earnings of the company. The company was compelled to show a paid-up capital of $100,000. Twenty-four thousand five hundred was paid in cash, and $75,500 was transferred from the C.P.R. in these bonds."

Mr. Shepley—"The figures were prepared with the concurrence of accountants on both sides."

Chairman Mabee—"The figures can be put in, and if we find they are incorrect they can be stricken from the record."

Mr. Buell then proceeded.

The total property at the end of 1908 amounted to $592,239, and the average profits for the last five years were $529,320, or, excluding money orders, $458,719, giving a percentage of 92 per cent., or without the money orders 75 per cent. The company paid $15,000 per month to the C. P. R. for station accommodation. It argued that the fish and money order business should not be included in the gross receipts, but counsel did not see that there was any difference between them and other classes of business.

The Canadian Northern Express Co. was incorporated in 1902, said Mr. Buell, with a nominal capital of $1,000,000, and the actual cash paid up was $5,000. Stock was issued to the amount of $300,000, but $295,000 worth of paid-up shares were retained by the vendors of the express business, these being Messrs. Wm. Mackenzie, D.D. Mann, Z. A. Lash, R. A. Mackenzie and Mackenzie, Mann & Co. Limited. Its property account at the close of 1908 showed a valuation of $38,396 while the earnings had mounted up from practically nothing to $57,402, the net profit in 1908. The C.N.R. Co. last year got $130,000 for transportation, about 40 per cent of the gross earnings, but no contract, it was reported, existed between the two corporations. The average net earnings were about 100 per cent.

Mr. Buell gave further statistics, showing the earnings of cars of different classes on American roads, and indicating the high percentage earned by express cars. He maintained that the rates of American express companies were not nearly as high as those charged in Canada, and proceeded to quote liberally from the Inter-State Commerce Commission and State Board reports in support of his contentions. Continual objection was made by counsel for the companies to the introduction of new matter at the eleventh hour, as it gave them no opportunity for verifying the figures.

BEAUTIFUL WOMEN.

Paris is Full of Them and Nearly All Use Parisian Sage.

In the beauty show at the metropolis two years ago Gold Medals were awarded to five different women.

To the most beautiful woman between 20 and 25; between 25 and 30; between 30 and 35; between 35 and 40 and between 40 and 45.

A society reporter who interviewed all five women in the interest of his papers, reported that all of them had beautiful hair, and that each of the five enthusiastically attributed her luxuriant hair to Parisian Sage.

T. Stevenson sells Parisian Sage for 50 cents a large bottle. He guarantees it to cure dandruff in two weeks; to stop falling hair and itching of the scalp. It makes any woman's hair beautiful, soft and luxuriant.

"SPECULATION" VS. "INVESTMENT"

IT must appeal to the sound common sense of every thinking man and woman, that the RETURN from an investment is in almost direct ratio to the RISK.

Stock speculation, mining, and other similar ventures PROMISE big returns, and INVOLVE big risk. Savings deposits pay small dividends in interest—but they PAY it. Safe, sure, certain—at regular intervals your interest is paid in cash; and, your money is still there, to be given back to you AT ONCE, when required.

It is this comfortable feeling of SECURITY that has induced many shrewd investors to forego the attraction of large profits on their money, offered by other forms of investment, and caused them to keep substantial sums on deposit in a chartered Bank, where the Dividend is SURE; paid every six months; and the principal available whenever required.

THE BANK OF HAMILTON invites investment deposits, and is prepared to receive them on most favorable terms.

While playing in the yard at his home in Erin, Willie the 3 year old son of Mr. and Mrs. B. Robertson, was kicked by a horse. He received a bad fracture on the back of his head and was unconscious for over 12 hours. He was operated on by Dr. McAndrew, of Georgetown, and Dr. Geer, of Erin, and several pieces of depressed skull bone were removed. At time of writing the little fellow is improving nicely and strong hopes are entertained for his complete recovery.

THE BANNER

THURSDAY, JUNE 17, 1909

A year or two ago Mr. J. J. Hill said that his railways could not build steamers in the United States and operate them successfully from Seattle and Tacoma to the Orient. A Japanese steamship line has stepped in and will supply the service in connection with the Great Northern Railway. This is a real yellow peril. The Japanese will challenge the white nations in every line of commercial and industrial endeavor. In the contest that will ensue the victors of Port Arthur have many factors in their favor. Cheap labor and adaptability are only two of these.

Most of the money borrowed in Canada, whether by the Government, municipalities, or corporations and individuals comes from Great Britain. It is therefore a matter of no little satisfaction that Canada's credit is first-class in London. Canadian borrowers are accorded specially favorable terms compared with other countries. Canadian credit is rated higher than that of any other colony or of any European State except France. Canada's three per cents. stand at 93 to 94, Germany's at 85 to 86; New Zealand's at 86 to 87; India's at 88 to 89 and Queensland's at 86 to 87. The popularity of Canadian issues if of course due primarily to the fact that Canada has proved a fine field for profitable investment. Britishers have satisfied themselves of the richness and magnitude of the country's natural resources. The growth of Imperial sentiment has also had its effect. British capitalists are hard-headed, conservative business men, who base their conclusions on business considerations. Even while recognizing this, it is a pretty safe conclusion that they are not altogether uninfluenced by the fact that the people of Canada are enthusiastically devoted to the mother land and the great Empire of which it is the head and centre.

In St. Andrew's Church Sunday night Rev. W. M. Morris delivered a thoughtful and very timely discourse on the subject of church union. The rev. gentleman did not advocate organic union, neither did he oppose it, but contented himself with presenting some of the important facts that ought fairly to be taken into account in considering this weighty problem and urging his hearers to inform themselves thoroughly on the subject so that they would be in a position to act wisely, when the time came for the congregation to make its decision on the question. One of the outstanding features of the address was the number of instances given of the overlapping by the different denominations in small communities capable of maintaining only a single church. This overlapping and consequent waste of money and energy is noticeable in the country districts all over this province. Go into almost any small village and there are two, three and even four churches, where one, or at most two, would amply suffice to minister to the spiritual wants of the community. But it is on the mission fields and in the newer and poorer country districts that the overlapping evil is met with in its worst form. Mr. Morris instanced one small field on the border between Simcoe and Muskoka, where three Protestant bodies were each maintaining a small church and supporting a missionary. One missionary could easily have done the work of the three. None of the charges was anywhere near self-supporting and consequently the home mission funds of the three churches were drawn on to supplement the pittance that the congregations paid the missionaries. This is typical of conditions that exist in hundreds of places throughout Canada. Church union presents its difficulties and even if successfully consummated would probably have its drawbacks. It would, however, prevent much waste, do much to raise the standard of the ministry and enable the smaller communities to support their churches and pastors in a more befitting manner than is practicable under existing conditions.

SUPPLEMENT TO STIPEND.

The Provincial Government has decided to supplement the stipend of Judge J. Herbert Denton, who was recently appointed junior judge of the County of York, by a grant of $1200 annually from the fees of the Surrogate Court. Apart from his share of the Surrogate Court fees, Judge Denton receives a salary of $2500 a year for the first three years and $3000 a year thereafter.

EXPRESS COMPANY WINS.

Mr. Justice Riddell has given judgment in favor of the Dominion Express Company in their action against the town of Alliston for a declaration that the business assessment for $450 upon their agency in that town is illegal and void, and granting the injunction asked for restraining the municipal corporation from making any future assessments for business assessment so long as the plaintiffs' business is not the chief or preponderating business carried on upon the premises on Victoria street, the store of one Hipwell, a merchant and druggist, and so long as they are occupied or used mainly for other purposes than those of the plaintiffs. His Lordship also grants the injunction asked, restraining defendants from selling or disposing of chattels seized by them, viz., a set of office scales and a truck waggon worth about $100. The tax for which the goods were levied upon amounted to $12.52. He also grants costs to the plaintiffs. But he cannot make any adjudication as to any future assessment.

TOWN PARLIAMENT.

Council Asked for $10,000 to Help Establish a Boot and Shoe Factory

Citizens' Band Gets a Grant of $100.

The Town Council held a special meeting in the Council Chamber on Friday night. Reeve Riddell, the victor in the bye-election on June 7th last, took his seat and throughout the meeting showed his wonted interests in the affairs of the municipality. Considerable time was spent in disposing of the accounts. On account of the length of time since the last meeting there was a larger batch of these than usual.

Payment of the following accounts was authorized:—Samuel Speers, $1.90; James Grahame, $33; Northern Electric and Manufacturing Co., $2.88; Jos. Ogston, $43.69; Jos. Corneilius, $1.50; John Hall, $2.10; Municipal World, $8.28; A. A. Hughson, $12.50; C. B. May, $5.50; Harry Worts, $4.30; The Gutta Percha & Rubber Mfg. Co., $85.40; George King, $7.50; George King, $8.56; John Gough, 75c., $16.50; James Funsten, 80c.; Cataract Electric Co., $188.30; Frank Russell 40c.

The referred accounts were as follows:—John Hammond, $20; Ontario Wind Engine & Pump Co., $24; Geo. E. Reid, $67.45; S. A. McCartney, $32.20; Adamson Hardware Co., $133.60.

The Citizens' Band made application for a grant of $100 for the purpose of purchasing additional uniforms for the members. On motion of Coun. Collister, seconded by Coun. Campbell, Council decided to grant the request. The Band was given a grant of $100 last year. The $100 now granted will, it is expected, enable them to provide uniforms and other equipment for 24 or 25 members.

A communication from Dr. T. H. Henry, Medical Health Officer, drawing the attention of the Council to unsatisfactory drainage conditions, was referred to the special committee appointed some time ago for the purpose of reporting on the question o. sewage disposal.

J. J. Richardson, of Berlin, had a communication before the Council respecting the establishment of a boot and shoe factory. Mr. Richardson is forming a company, which proposes to convert the egg warehouse on East Broadway into a factory. The town is asked for a loan of $10,000, repayable in equal annual instalments without interest. The communication was referred to the Industrial Committee for consideration and report.

A deputation waited on the Council to urge that steps be taken to open the Caledon-Orangeville townline through to Purple Hill. Councillor Cameron, of Caledon, Messrs. Hayward, Reid and W. E. Island addressed the Council briefly in support of the project. Mr. Cameron, who was chief spokesman, pointed out that the road would give farmers east of Orangeville a direct route to the Orangeville grain elevators and stock yards and would be a great convenience for delivering cattle and other live stock. He estimated the cost of opening the road, apart from the bridging of the Credit, which would be a County job, at between $300 and $400. Caledon and Mono Councils had appointed Committees and intimated their willingness to bear a portion of the cost of the work. The Streets Committee was authorized to meet and discuss the matter with the committees from the other interested municipalities.

Chairman Collister of the Streets Committee brought up the question of purchasing a team of horses, waggons and other equipment for the use of the corporation. Mr. Collister thought the Council could save money by buying a team. After some discussion the matter was referred to a special committee consisting of the Reeve, Deputy-Reeve and Coun. Collister for report.

DOMINION DAY.

Orangeville is Planning to Hold Fitting Celebration.

The Dufferin Lacrosse Club is busy making preparations for an extensive Celebration in Orangeville on Dominion Day. The details of the program are not yet fully elaborated, but visitors who come to Orangeville for the holiday are assured an excellent day's sport. The morning attractions will commence with an imposing parade of school children, headed by Brass Bands and the High School Cadets and Bugle Band. The parade will be from the Public School grounds to Idylwild Park, where there will be a juvenile lacrosse match, speaking, races and games. In the afternoon there will be a championship lacrosse match between the Dufferins and the Guelph Royals, football and baseball games and a number of foot races and other athletic sports. In the evening there will be a basket ball match between Orangeville and Shelburne girls and a grand band concert. There will be something interesting doing all the time and with favorable weather this year's Celebration should fairly surpass any other like event held here in recent years. Watch for posters giving full particulars.

CHANGES IN TEACHING STAFF

Mr. R. H. McCarten, Teacher of the Entrance Class, will sever his connection with Orangeville Public School at the close of the present term. He has accepted the principalship of Sudbury school at a salary of $900 a year. Miss Lillian Kerr, one of the lady teachers, has also accepted a position on the staff of the Sudbury school and will leave here at the end of this term. We understand also that Miss Wills, another of the lady members of the staff, has sent in her resignation.

HARPER IS PRESIDENT.

Elected Chief Officer of Toronto Methodist Conference.

Orangeville Minister Receives Distinguished Honor from His Church

On Thursday morning last, Rev. Henry Harper, M.A., pastor of Orangeville Methodist Church, was elected to the important position of President of Toronto Methodist Conference. The new President won the position on the fourth ballot, defeating Rev. W. H. Hincks, pastor of Parkdale Methodist Church, by 25 votes. Among the names proposed for the Presidency were Revs. John Locke, Henry Harper, Jos. J. Ferguson, Prof. Wallace, W. F. Wilson, J. E. Starr, J. C. Speer, F. L. Brown, Thos. Dunlop, J. H. Hazelwood, Dr. Cleaver and Philip Jones. The vote on the different ballots was:—

First Ballot.

Votes cast, 296; necessary to election, 149.
Rev. W. H. Hincks, 95.
Rev. H. Harper, 59.
Rev. John Locke, 53.
Rev. Joseph J. Ferguson.

Second Ballot.

Votes cast, 290; necessary to election, 146.
Rev. W. H. Hincks, 121.
Rev. H. Harper, 87.
Rev. John Locke, 53.
Rev. Joseph J. Ferguson, 28.

Third Ballot.

Votes cast, 184; necessary to election, 93.
Rev. W. H. Hincks, 88.
Rev. H. Harper, 79.
Rev. Joseph J. Ferguson, 10.
Rev. John Locke, 7.

Fourth Ballot.

Votes cast, 236; necessary to election, 119.
Rev. H. Harper, 127.
Rev. W. H. Hincks, 102.
Rev. John Locke, 5.
Rev. Joseph J. Ferguson, 2.

Rev. T. E. Bartley, the retiring president, presented the newly elected president with the silver-headed cane which is the token of office. In presenting the cane, Rev. Mr. Bartley said:

"You will find the Toronto Conference kind, but there will be sufficient work to keep you busy. I have had the busiest year of a life that has never been idle. I trust that the coming year will be the best spiritually the conference has ever had."

"I owe all I am and have to-day to Methodism," said Rev. Mr. Harper, in replying.

The new President went on to say that his grandfather and grandmother had both been staunch Methodists in England, and one of his earliest recollections was that of being taken by his mother's hand to the Methodist minister for his blessing.

Mr. Harper made reference indirectly to some of the theological discussions which have been shaking the Church.

"Thirty-three years ago," he said, "I stood at the doors of the Methodist Church, seeking admittance as a probationer. I agreed to obey the discipline and preach the doctrines of the Methodist Church. I think I will always do that. But if at any time I wish to do otherwise I will go somewhere where they have a doctrine congenial to my thought and a discipline I can obey. I would never remain in allegiance to a Church if I was not prepared to follow its precepts and preach its doctrines."

Mr. Harper, in referring to some of the problems the Church had to face, mentioned the overlapping with other denominations, and the criminal waste of men and money that resulted. I rejoice in the thought of the union that shall presently take place," he said.

Mr. Harper referred in strong terms to the "yellow peril."

"That is not an empty word," he said. "Unless China is Christianized, our position will be worse than that of the Roman Empire when the barbarians came down and destroyed it. We must for our own preservation Christianize China and the East."

Rev. Mr. Harper, the new President, was born and raised in Whitby township in Ontario County. He received his High School education in Port Perry and following that spent a year at Toronto University. He then took a course in the Illinois Wesleyan College at Bloomington. He entered the active work of the ministry in 1876, his first appointment being on the Brampton South Circuit. He was ordained in the year 1881 at Kingston and since then has officiated at the following charges:—Mono Road, Bondhead, Bolton, Parry Sound, Huntsville, Uxbridge and Orangeville. At the four places last mentioned he has been chairman of the district. He was appointed Secretary of the Toronto Conference in 1902 and has been Secretary of the Stationing Committee for a number of years. Mr. Harper is highly thought of by all classes and denominations in Orangeville and his elevation to the important position which he is so well fitted to fill is the subject of general congratulation.

DELAYED JUDGMENTS.

A motion was made at Osgoode Hall this week for the judgment, or retrial of an action brought by William Miller against the Grand Trunk Railway Co. and tried by Mr. Justice Magee at Brockville in April, 1908. This is the first case of the kind to come before the Courts and is brought under an amendment to the Judicature Act passed at the last session of the Legislature. Under the Act, as it now stands, where a case is tried and judgment is delayed six months, an action of this nature may be brought, but the Judge has a month's grace before the motion can be heard before the Divisional Court. Justice Magee held the Assizes here over two years ago and in a case then heard before him has not yet given judgment. The new Act seems to be calculated to afford litigants much needed relief.

LACK OF BLOOD

Is What Causes Headaches, Dizziness and Heart Palpitation.

In the blood depends the welfare of the whole body. Where good blood exists disease is unknown, but where the blood is poor and watery disease quickly seizes hold of the body—It is then headaches, backaches, dizziness, heart palpitation and other serious ailments make themselves felt. Good blood can always be obtained through the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People. They actually make good, rich blood and thus restore lost strength and banish disease. Mr. Herbert Hanson, Brewers Mills, N. B., says:—"I cannot praise Dr. Williams' Pink Pills too highly. I was troubled with headaches, dizziness and loss of strength and had a hacking cough which I feared would lead to consumption. I tried a number of medicines without benefit, but was finally persuaded to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. I did so and used these Pills for several months with remarkable results. They helped me so much that I now strongly recommend them to all other sufferers."

The experience of Mr. Hanson is that of thousands of others who have found health and strength through Dr. Williams' Pink Pills after other medicines had failed. It is through their power in making good that these Pills cure such troubles as anaemia, indigestion, rheumatism, heart palpitation, neuralgia, nervous troubles and the distressing ills of girlhood and womanhood. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People are sold by all dealers in medicine or direct by mail from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont., at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50

ATHLETIC NOTES.

East Ward juveniles defeated the West Ward boys by a score of 9 to 4 in a fast game on Tuesday night.

The Dominion Day game between the intermediate Dufferins and the Guelph Royals ought to be a hummer. The Royals are a strong, speedy aggregation and under the management of Bert Booth, formerly of this town, promise to make a strong bid for the district championship. The Dufferins realize that they will have a hard game on the 1st, but they will be in the pink of condition and are sanguine that they can do the trick. There will be a big holiday crowd on hand to cheer the green shirts to victory.

The intermediate Dufferins were scheduled to play their first championship game in Elora on Saturday afternoon. Saturday is the worst day possible to get a team to go away and at the last moment the management, finding it impossible to get together a twelve to make the trip, decided to default. Meantime Elora had decided that they didn't want a game on Saturday either. Under the circumstances it is likely that the C.L.A. Executive will order the game to be played at some future date to be agreed on by the two Clubs. The Dufferins have a fast team this season and it is very unfortunate that the schedule calls for several Saturday games. Some of the players, who clerk in stores, find it absolutely impossible to get away on Saturdays.

Shelburne Continuation School Basket Ball girls played a return game with the Orangeville High School girls on Friday evening. The High School girls were again winners, the score standing 23 to 6 in their favor. Mr. Duncan, High School Classical Master, officiated as referee and handled the game in a manner thoroughly satisfactory to both teams. Mr. Duncan, who understands the game thoroughly, has given the local players the benefit of some helpful coaching. The benefit was apparent in their superior team play both here and in the former game in Shelburne. The game was greatly enjoyed by a large gathering of spectators. After the match the players and a number of the friends of the two teams as well were entertained to a tea in the school. After justice had been done to the refreshments, the remainder of the evening was spent very pleasantly in games, music and other amusements. The teams lined up as follows:—

Shelburne—Defence, Ena Walker, Elva Carson; centre, Jennie Clark; rovers, Mina Timney, May Gabriel; forwards, Emma Davison, Maude Watson.

Orangeville—Defence, Laura Rowan, Gladys Halbert; centre, Clara Dever; rover, Mae Wallace, Minnie Stinson; forwards, Annie McLeod, Nina Bremner.

INTO WORLD OF FICTION.

Famous Writers Who At First Chose Different Careers — Many Were Journalists.

Robert Louis Stevenson was originally a lawyer. He was called to the Scottish Bar in 1875.

Sir Walter Besant started life as a professor at the Royal College, Mauritius. He embraced his later profession by a sort of accident in collaboration with the late Jas. Rice.

Grant Allen was at first a public school teacher in England; and then he went to Jamaica to fill a professor's chair in the Government College. This phase of his career reminds one of Sir Walter Besant's start in life.

J. M. Barrie, the famous short-story writer, novelist and playwright after taking his M. A. degree at Edinburgh, in 1882, became a journalist, and his brilliant articles on Scottish life and manners first brought him into notice.

Many other novelists entered the world of fiction through the portals of journalism. Among the more prominent of these were William Black, B.L. Farjeon, Rudyard Kipling and David Christie Murray.

William Black became a journalist some three years before he wrote his first novel, which brought him prominently into notice. Previous to entering journalism it is said his ambition was to become an artist.

B. L. Farjeon started in life as a journalist in New Zealand, editing a paper out there. Charles Dickens is credited with discovering that Farjeon possessed considerable talent as a novelist and accordingly he came to England and he has been engaged in turning out novel after novel with more or less success ever since.

Rudyard Kipling was also at one time an editor, or rather sub-editor, and editing, as he did, one of the most important of India's newspapers.

David Christie Murray had a hard struggle to commence with, but when the Russo-Turkish war broke out, he went to the scene of action as the general war correspondent of the Times and Scotsman. Later on he turned novelist, and the great success which attended his efforts in this direction shows that fiction was his true forte.

G. A. Henty, the famous writer of books for boys, was also in his time a war correspondent, and smelt powder in several important wars.

Thomas Hardy, who excels in his descriptions of Wessex life and manners, and whose tragic novel, "Tess of the D'Urbervilles," created such a sensation when it was published, started in life as an architect, and the house in which he lives, at Dorchester, was built from his own designs.

Hall Caine was also an architect in early life. Later on he took to journalism. Then he brought out his first novel, which proved a success, and since then he has devoted himself entirely to novelistic work and playwriting, having proved as successful in the one as in the other.

Clark Russell, one of the greatest living writers of the sea, spent most of his youth in a seafaring life, which accounts for his wonderful knowledge of all matters maritime, and shows that he writes about that with which he is thoroughly acquainted.

Rider Haggard, who is another of our "tip-top" novelists, began life as a barrister, but after his great hit with "King Solomon's Mines" became briefless—from choice, of course.

It will be seen from the foregoing summary that journalism, in the majority of cases, was the royal road to novel writing.

IN AGONY WITH PILES.

Mr. G. W. Cornell, with the Shaw Milling Co., St. Catharines, Ont., writes: "For six years I was a victim of itching, protruding piles and was in dreadful agony day and night. Doctors were unable to help me, and I was about as miserable as any creature could be. My druggist advised me to try Dr. Chase's Ointment, which I did and obtained relief from the first box and complete cure with the second. This ointment would be cheap at fifty dollars a box, in view of what it did for me."

BIT THE BIBLE

Chinaman Had a Queer Way of Taking the Oath

Ottawa, June 5.—At the trial of Wing Sang, a local Chinaman, accused of keeping a disorderly house, one of the witnesses, also a Chinaman, was called yesterday, and was given the Bible to kiss. Instead of putting the Book to his lips, he rubbed it against his nose. The police magistrate rebuked him sternly, and at the same time indicated how the oath should be taken. Thereupon the Celestial opened his mouth, thrust the Bible inside, closed his teeth, and tried his best to swallow it. A bailiff rescued the Bible, amid general laughter, and the indignant magistrate fined the Chinaman $5 for contempt of court.

A PROHIBITION EXPOSITION

Temperance workers will be delighted with the news that the great Alaska-Yukon Exposition which is being held this year at Seattle will be conducted on strictly prohibition principles. This is the first time in the history of the United States when an attempt has been made to operate one of these great undertakings without it's having liquor-selling as a prominent feature. The people of Seattle are, of course, naturally anxious to make this enterprise as successful as possible, and yet the shareholders in it, who are business men of ability, have decided that they can and will secure the success they desire without any liquor-selling, and hope thus to be able to make this exhibition the most orderly and creditable of the sort that has ever been held in the United States.

MONO MILLS.

Mrs. Ernest Duke (nee Miss Agnes Jackson,) who has spent the winter at Moose Factory in the extreme north of Ontario, arrived at her former home here on Tuesday last and was most warmly greeted by her many friends. It will be remembered that she and her husband, Mr. Duke left after their marriage last autumn for their home, which is situated on the south shore of James' Bay, where the latter has a situation as instructor and missionary among the Indians.

Sad indeed was the death of Miss Violet May Speers, only daughter of Mr. Wm. Speers, 3rd line, Caledon, which occurred on Thursday last. Deceased, who was scarcely out of her childhood, was taken ill some time ago with inflammatory rheumatism, but no fatal results was anticipated until a short time before she passed waway. The funeral was held on Saturday afternoon to St. John's Cemetery, Mono, and was largely attended. Six girl friends bore the body to the grave—Miss Beatrice Duke, Miss Pearl Speers, Miss Edna Speers, Miss Glassford, and the Misses Nelson. Services were conducted by Rev. A. C. Collier. Needless to say the sympathy of the neighborhood goes out to the bereaved father and brothers.

Miss Ethel Allen and Mrs. R. J. Mills attended the Inglewood Sunday School picnic at Stanley Park on Saturday last.

Miss Jennie Jackson and Miss Ethel Mason and Mr. Willie J. Jackson attended anniversary services at Caledon East on Sunday the 3rd inst.

A large number from this section intend going to Guelph on the Dufferin Farmers' Institute excursion next Tuesday.

INGLEWOOD.

Rain has come at last.

Mr. Ramsay is busy building his new store, which is made of cement blocks. He intends having an entrance from McDonald & Main Sts.

The anniversary services at Cheltenham on Sunday were largely attended.

Mrs. Trought has opened her ice cream parlor for the season.

Mr. Kenny, of the Crown Bank, visited friends in Cheltenham one evening last week.

Quite a number from around the Corners attended the Institute meetings in Shelburne on Saturday.

Miss Ogburn Blair spent Sunday in Shelburne, the guest of Miss Lucy Murphy.

Nearly everybody hereabouts will go to Guelph on the Dufferin Farmers' Institute excursion next Tuesday. This excursion is one of the popular events of the year and seems to be attracting even more interest this season than ever before.

LAUREL GARDEN PARTY.

The annual Garden Party of Bell Presbyterian Church, Laurel, will be held in Laurel village on Monday evening, June 28th. Orangeville Citizens' Band has been secured for the evening and there will also be a varied programme of music, addresses, etc., by outside and local talent. The anniversary services, which have been arranged for Sunday, June 27th, will commemorate the 17th anniversary of the induction of Rev. J. R. Bell, pastor of the Church. Rev. D. T. McClintock, of Grand Valley, will conduct the anniversary services.

WRANGLING NEIGHBORS.

Samuel Street, a South Ward citizen, had his neighbor, John B. Rusk, before the Cadi on Tuesday, charged with the use of threatening language. The hearing of the case and the vehement manner in which some of the witnesses gave their evidence caused Squire Pattullo no little mental disquiet and uncertainty. Eventually the Court decided to bind each one of the interested parties over to keep the peace. This decision seemed to cause some surprise to one of the chief witnesses, but was apparently a comforting morsel to the defendant.

—Excursion to Guelph next Tuesday.

WIRE WAS TOO LOW.

Ed. French, brakeman on the Superior Cement Company's marl train, met with a bad accident yesterday afternoon. The train was on its way out to the marl beds and French was standing on the back end of a box car. At the crossing on the 1st. line, Caledon, one of the Cataract Electric Co's. wires, which had either fallen out of place or else was hanging too low, caught him across the face and caused him to lose his balance and fall backward off the car. He fell head foremost on one of the ties, splitting open the back of his head. Dr. Norman Wright, of Detroit, who happened to be nearby, bandaged up the wound and the injured man was conveyed to his home on East Broadway.

Why Christie's Biscuits are the best

GOOD BISCUITS are made by more than one or two manufacturers, and can be baked from any one of a few excellent brands of flour, but the Christie way is different.

The best millers in Canada ship us samples of their flour twice a year, or oftener. We test the samples and select the best brands for our purpose.

We blend the brands which we have proved best—keep on blending and testing by actual baking until we get a dough good enough to sustain, or better, the Christie reputation.

Every ounce of raw material is carefully analysed before it can pass into the mixing room.

The best sugar, pure, fresh creamery butter, new sweet milk and delicious cream—these pure ingredients mixed with our blend of flour, in the Christie scientific way, yields that delightful, appetising crispness and delicate flavor which has made favored above all other table dainties from ocean to ocean.

Yes, Christie's are the best biscuits money can buy, yet they cost no more than just ordinary biscuits.

THE GOSPEL OF THRIFT.

"One of the most practical Gospel sermons delivered in Hamilton for many a day, and it was not by a regularly ordained preacher either, was heard in Wesley Church last night.

"The preachers tell us every Sunday how to live so that when we lie down to die we may have a safe passport into the glories of the world beyond, but Dr. Samson, the lecturer of last night preached a Gospel of thrift that will make men and women better citizens, and provide for the days when old age comes upon us and we are not able to earn even the necessities of life. The pulpit and the press should unite their forces in teaching the doctrine of a thriftier citizenship, and for the time, at least, let the question of politics and the judgment to come have a rest. Once get men and women educated up to the standard of saving and economy, and the moral tone of society will become higher and purer. It is the extravagance and recklessness of our daily lives that is responsible for the low state of morals the world over. Educate the rising generation to be thrifty, industrious and economical, and the boys and young men will have no time to squander their weekly earnings in the bar-room or in studying the dope cards of the race track. There is more money wasted every day in Hamilton in the saloons, gambling rooms, betting on the horses, and the smoking habit than would provide an annuity for every one of the victims if it were properly invested, payable after he reached the age of fifty-five years.

"With all its sins of wrong-doing the Laurier administration has done one act that will redound to its credit for all time in the future. While the British Government is providing for the Old Age of its thriftless citizens and placing a perpetual tax on the industrious with which to pay pensions, the Canadian Government comes in with a new Gospel of self-help and presents a plan whereby every man and woman can provide an annuity for the days when they are not able to earn a living. The British plan educates pauperism by providing pensions for the improvident who live from hand to mouth 365 days in the year, spending their earnings without one thought of the morrow. The Canadian plan begins with the youth and educates the boys and girls to lay by even as small a sum as 25 cents weekly so that when they reach the age of 55 or 60 years they will have an assured income that will at least make them independent of the charity of the world. It begets a spirit of pride instead of dependency. And the larger the weekly sum saved the larger will be the annuity. The plan of the Government provides that no annuity less than $50 a year can be paid, and the highest sum that any one can receive is $600 a year. It depends upon the persons themselves how much to provide between the higher and the lower amounts. Once a person begins to save money by opening an account in a savings bank the habit becomes so fixed that every pay-day finds him or her at the bank making the weekly deposit. Once begin saving for an annuity at the time of life when we need a fixed income and everything will be made to bend to that purpose.

"The plan is simple and easily understood, and the name of Sir Richard Cartwright will be a blessing in every home where advantage is taken of the annuity. It is to explain it that Dr. Samson, of Windsor, has been commissioned by the Dominion Government to spend part of his time in the field to educate the people up to the new Gospel of thrift as a provision for old age. Evidently the churches are not yet converted to it, for Dr. Tovell, Pastor of Wesley Church, is one of the first ministers to open his pulpit to Dr. Samson, and the people who attended Wesley Church last night were profited and well repaid for the hour or more spent. Dr. Samson is an earnest speaker, and he tells his story so eloquently that the hearer cannot but be convinced that the Canadian Government has hit upon the right plan to educate the people that an independent annuity, earned by one's own thrift, is preferable to a pauperizing pension roll."—Hamilton Spectator.

Suggestive Questions on the Sunday School Lesson by Rev. Dr. Linscott for the International Newspaper Bible Study Club.

June 20th, 1909.
Review.

Golden Text—With great power gave the apostles witness of the resurrection of the Lord Jesus. Acts iv : 33.

The following review is planned for all who are taking up these Bible Studied, whether having actually studied the eleven lessons here reviewed or only a part of them. Even if this is the first lesson which has captured a reader's attention it can be made a profitable lesson in itself.

The date and title of each lesson, and where found, the Golden Text and one question for each lesson follow :

April 4—Acts x : 1-48. Peter and Cornelius. Golden Text, Acts x : 35. In every nation he that feareth Him, and worketh righteousness is accepted of Him.

Verses 1,2—Can you give a good reason why God to-day, is not as well pleased with a devout Roman Catholic, as he is with a devout Protestant, or vice versa ?

April 11—I Cor. xv : 12-26. Easter Lesson. Golden Text. I Cor. xv:20. Now is Christ risen from the dead, and become the first fruits of them that slept.

Verse 12—Can you mention a single nation,or tribe,or people in the past, or the present, that has not believed, or does not believe,in life after death in some shape ?

A CENTURY OLD NEVER WAS SICK.

John Haley Has Many Reminiscences of the Early Days.

A recent issue of the Toronto News contained the following interesting historical sketch of Mr. John Haley, a well known resident of Guelph :

John Haley is 104 years old, and is a remarkable man. His memory goes back 80 and 90 years with a clearness that is amazing.

He was born in Glasgow, and when of a tender age moved with his parents to Donegal, in the north of Ireland. He came to America with his father and mother about 80 years ago, a young man. The boat, the Susie Ann, took ten weeks to make Quebec, and the rest of the journey was made by land and water to Muddy York, as Toronto was then called.

Mr. Haley proceeded, after a stay in Muddy York, to Guelph, spending the night in the Priory, the historic old structure, the first house built in Guelph, and now used as the C. P. R. station.

Muddy York was principally bush 80 years ago, so it is not to be wondered at that the journey to Guelph through swamp and forest was accomplished with difficulty.

Arriving in Guelph Mr. Haley spent some time surveying Paisley Block for the Government, acting in the capacity of finesman.

He then returned to Muddy York, where he tended bar in a hotel on the bay front. Up Yonge street was all bush, and game was fairly plentiful nearby.

Whiskey was plentiful at twopence for all a man wished to drink, and very prime brandy,gin and rum could be had for four cents. There was no such thing as lager beer known, but ale also was a favorite beverage, at two-pence, the price of whiskey.

Mr. Haley soon tired of work behind the bar, and went to Garafraxa, where his father, for $400, had purchased one hundred acres of land on concession four.

The troublesome times with which the name of Wm. Lyon Mackenzie is associated came on, and Mr. Haley left the farm and went back to Muddy York.

He engaged with a farmer near Streetsville, and hauled wheat to Oakville,for that little town had no railway, but was an important shipping point by boat.

Leaving farming he went, as he terms it, "to the Falls of Niagara," and crossed to the other side about the time that Mackenzie escaped his pursuers.

Mr. Haley has a vivid recollection of a long conversation with Mr. Mackenzie when he arrived safely in the domains of Uncle Sam.

Unfortunate in his investments, Mr. Haley is ending his days in Guelph in peace. Born before the days of lamps, he made his own candles. Arriving in Canada before the railroads, he helped blaze the trail. There were no buggies built, he jolted along in the heavy democrat. Before telephones, telegraphs, street cars, electric lights, he is in living testimony of the days of the past. Germs were not dreaded in his younger days, for they were not known. There was no appendicitis—it was inflammation of the bowels, and surgery was crude indeed. But Mr. Haley had no need of medicine, for he has never been ill a day in his five score years.

He smokes regularly, and in the old days drank much whiskey, "but whiskey was good, then, and we drank it from a dipper without the need of a chaser," he says.

ONCE MORE THE PROOF IS GIVEN

That Dodd's Kidney Pills cure even inherited ill-health.

St. George, Man., June 14th (Special).—Yet another case in which ill-health inherited from parents has been vanquished by Dodd's Kidney Pills is that of Mr. Charles Dayon, a farmer well known in this neighborhood.

"I suffered from a number of ills from an early age," says Mr. Dayon, who is now thirty-two years old. "I inherited my trouble from my parents. I was weak, nervous and run down. I suffered from Backache and my muscles would cramp. I had a heavy dragging sensation across the loins. I was always thirsty; I had great difficulty in collecting my thoughts, and my memory was failing me.

"I was altogether in a bad way when I started to use Dodd's Kidney Pills but they helped me almost from the first box. They gave me strength and helped me so much in every way that I am satisfied a little longer treatment will make me a well man."

Mr. Dayon's symptoms were the symptoms of Kidney Disease, and Dodd's Kidney Pills cure every form of Kidney Disease no matter what stage it is in or how it is contracted.

BE KIND TO LITTLE THINGS

The sunshine of life is made up of very little beams that are bright all the time. In the nursery, on the playground and in the school room, there is room all the time for little acts of kindness that cost nothing but are worth more than gold or silver. To give up something when giving up will prevent unhappiness; to yield when persisting will chafe and fret others; to go a little way around rather than come against another; to take an ill word or a cross look rather than to resent it; these are the ways in which clouds and storms are kept off and a pleasant, smiling sunshine secured even in a humble home, among very poor people, as well as in families in higher station. Much that we term the miseries of life would be avoided by adopting this rule of conduct.

FARM DRAINAGE.

In tile drainage the proper method is to make comprehensive plans for all the land which is to be drained to one outlet from the very beginning. Otherwise serious mistakes are apt to be made in the parts of the system first constructed.

There has not, as yet, been sufficient data collected to show with certainty what capacities of tile are needed to meet different conditions. However, a capacity under average conditions sufficient to remove one-fourth inch depth of water in 24 hours appears so far to have given good results. This means a maximum flow of about 6,800 gallons per acre per day. If the tile are laid at a good depth the upper few feet of soil acts as a great sponge to receive the rain as it falls and to deliver it gradually to the tiles.

Under ordinary conditions,it is best to lay the tile to a minimum depth of three and one-half to four feet. Many advocate laying the tile at three feet depth or less, but careful consideration must show that the tile laid four feet deep will drain effectively a strip much more than 25 per cent. wider than tile laid three feet deep. Moreover, the land drained will be drained much deeper than in case of the three foot depth. Tiles laid four feet deep can be planned considerably more than enough further apart than tile laid three feet deep to make up for the increased cost per foot of tile, owing to the great depth. Hence, it is economical to lay them at the greater depth if the system is intelligently planned.

Of course the soil structure will affect the depth at which the tile should be laid,to some extent. Again, there may be cases in which a very long line of the tile would have to be made deeper on account of a very small tract of low-lying land if the minimum depth of three and one-half to four feet were absolutely insisted upon. In such cases a short strip of the tile can be laid to the minimum depth of three feet.

Under average conditions of soil, with clay sub-soil, the drains can be laid eight rods apart if they are put three and one-half to four feet deep.

One often sees tile drains laid out consisting of a main line of tile with numerous short branches each only a few rods long. This is a very uneconomical plan upon which to lay out tile drains. Each properly laid tile will thoroughly drain the land for a distance of four rods each side. At each junction, therefore, of a branch there will be four rods of tile wasted, because it passes through territory already drained by the main tile. Yet how often one sees branches not more than four or five rods long, which do practically no good whatever.

So far as possible, the tile should be laid in long, parallel lines and there should be as few junctions as possible.

Another common fault in tile systems is to make the line very crooked. Every deviation from a straight line in a tile drain should be considered an evil, only to be tolerated when it is really necessary. The general plan of the system should be as simple and regular as possible.

A fair rate of grade is a good thing, because it increases the capacity of the tile, though some authorities claim that if the grade is too steep the velocity of the current will disintegrate the soil at the joints of the tile, and sometimes result in stop page.

In tile drains properly constructed, particles of soil do not enter the tile at all, except,of course, that a little soil may find its way into the tile during and soon after construction, which is reason for adopting four inches as a minimum size for all tile. Small sizes are too apt to become stopped up at first. After the earth has become recompacted above the tile, only clear water should enter. In case quicksand is encountered during construction it should be removed for a shallow depth under the tile, and clay filled in, on which the tile should be laid.

If tile drains are properly built they may even be laid on level grade and still do good work. Of course, the grade should be no lighter than is really necessary. The lighter the grade the greater is the necessity for careful work in construction.

In the construction of tile drains the grade stakes should be set, at least as close as 50 feet apart by an engineer, and the ditcher should be required to stretch a cord parallel to the grade line over the ditch, measuring from the grade stakes, and each tile should be laid by measuring from this string. Tile should be laid as closely as possible at the joints. In case sand is encountered the tile should be surrounded below and on each side,as well as above, with clay or top soil. It is often well to blind the tile with top soil as they are laid instead of with clay from the bottom of the ditch.

Each tile outlet should be very wall should be constructed to hold the last section of tile firmly in place. It is also well to use a length of iron pipe at the outlet if the size of tile is not too large. The outlet should be planned in such a way that it can be kept open.

JAPS AND THE CZAR'S STAMPS

A struggle of the magnitude of the war between Russia and Japan leaves many an echo for a long time. One of these, a minor one, is of considerable interest. It is referred to as follows by a Russian journal, The Karbin Vyestnik :

Among our good neighbors the Japanese nothing is wasted; out of all and everything they endeavor to extract benefit. Thus, for example, during the Russo-Japanese war the Japanese secured more than 1,500,000 rubles worth of Russian postage and revenue stamps abandoned by us in various post offices, branches thereof and sundry other establishments. Now the enterprising Japanese are trying to dispose of these stamps among Russians.

For this purpose they have special agents who offer them to Russian arrivals for half their value. A certain Caucasian, also of an enterprising turn of mind, proceeding to Japan on business, encountered one of these agents at Yokohama and tempted by easy gain bought various stamps valued at 2,200 rubles for 1,000 rubles only. The stamps were successfully conveyed to Vladivostok, but unhappily the agents of the detective force got wind of the affair.

One of these agents visited the Caucasian in the guise of a stamp purchaser, and in order not to rouse suspicion and for greater verisimilitude laid some money on the table. When the "merchant" left the room for the stamps the signal was given to the ambuscade and no sooner had the owner returned than the agent met him revolver in hand and arrested him on the spot, with his wife and confiscated the stamps. When it appeared that the stamps were really Russian the prisoner was released after three days' detention.

It is reported that the money will be returned to him, but that the stamps will remain for the benefit of the exchequer. It is said that in the case of a big buyer of these stamps the Japanese offer to land him safely on Russian territory with his booty, in a torpedo boat or special steamer, but whether or not this offer has yet been accepted is unknown.

EXPRESS RATES MUST COME DOWN.

Particulars brought out on enquiry before the Railway Commission, are given, on page seven of this issue, of the earnings of express companies and of the amount of cash capital originally put into these enterprises. The aggregate actual cash invested at the beginning in express companies now operated in connection with the Grand Trunk, Canadian Pacific and Canadian Northern Railways,as shown by the figures given, was $57,000; the present value of the property of these companies, with the exception of the sum stated, and amounting to $862,000, has all been created out of earnings since organization, and the present net annual earnings are almost equal to the gross value of the property now engaged in the service.

It is not surprising, in the light of these revelations, that objection was entered by counsel interested, to the publication of the figures. It is to the credit of Chairman Mabee, and his colleague Prof. McLean, that publicity was insisted upon.

But the facts just stated do not cover all the revelations. It was made apparent by the hearing that the express companies are really branches of the railway companies in connection with which they are operated. The railway and the express company are, in each case, to all intents practically the same. And the express companies as express companies, have been doing exceedingly well for the railways which provide the transportation. This is shown by a comparison of the earnings of cars owned by railway companies which carry express, and the earnings of those employed for other service on the railways. On the Grand Trunk system the average net earnings of passenger cars is $10,428 per annum, while the net earnings of cars used for carrying express is $21,400 or $10,972 more. On the Canadian Pacific express cars earn $19,195 more every year as compared with $13,[illegible] earned by passenger cars. When it is remembered, again, that the express and railway company is in each case practically the same corporation, it will be easily understood why the railways are so anxious to send as much traffic as possible diverted to the express branch of their service.

In the light of the revelations made the public have a right to demand a sweeping and immediate reduction in express earnings. It is not a question if the demand should not go further and a complete divorcement insisted upon between two corporations which, under the pretence of separation, have been using a complicated system of bookkeeping to hoodwink the public into acquiescence in rates which are nothing less than daylight robbery.—The Weekly Sun.

THE OLD BRINDLE COW.

Of all the old memories that cluster round my heart,
With their root in my boyhood days,
The quaintest is like to the old brindle cow,
With sly and mysterious ways,
She'd linger round the lot near the old potato patch,
A sentinel by night and by day,
Watching for the hour when all were asleep,
To start on her predatory way.
The old brush fence she would scale
in her course,
With turnips and cabbage just beyond,
And corn that was blooming through the halo of the night—
What a banquet so choice and so fond !
But when the stars of morn were paling in the sky,
The old brindle cow would take to cue,
And, dressing up her one, she'd strut treat beyond the fence,
For the old cow knew just what to do.
What breed did you say? Why the very best blood
That could flow in a democrat
cow;
No herd-book could tell of the pride in her horns,
Or, whence came her pedigree,
how;
She was Jersey in her milk and Durham in her build,
And Ayrshire when she happened
But when it came to storming the old "slash" fence,
She was simply the old brindle
cow.
It seems but a day since I drove to the gate
To yield up her rich and creamy prize :
For her theft at midnight home,
would yield a double down,
With peace of conscience lurking her eyes.
But she's gone—disappeared with ripened years of time,
Whose memories my heart cling e'en now
And I never hear a bell tinkle thro' the forest dell,
But I think of that old brindle
—Thomas O'Hagan

SUMMER PESTS.

The two pests of the ordinary farm home are flies and mosquitoes. Neither of them can be kept entirely out with screens; but the pests may be very greatly reduced and screens thus rendered more efficient if we understand the life-history of these two insects.

Mosquitoes are hatched in stagnant water; and hence if there are any barrels of rain water or any undrained land or pools of stagnant water, mosquitoes may be expected. In fact, rain water barrels, stagnant water and sloughs furnish the most efficient means of breeding mosquitoes by the millions. Every farmer who operates his own farm should provide a cistern for his wife instead of depending on rain barrels, and every landlord who wishes a first-class tenant should have a supply of soft water where it will not develop mosquitoes as an inducement to a good tenant.

The house fly is a scavenger; that is its mission in this world. It breeds in manure heaps. Therefore, the way to reduce the plague of flies is to keep the manure hauled out. It may be that this is one of the arrangements of Divine Providence to compel the farmer to maintain the fertility of his land. The most fruitful breeding ground for house flies is horse manure. There is no reason why horse manure should be allowed to accumulate around the barn, and thus become a breeding ground for flies to annoy and pester him and his good wife and family during the whole summer.

The following experiment suggested by the United States Department of Agriculture is an interesting one:

Place a piece of stale meat in a glass jar. Imprison a few house or meat flies. Fasten a piece of mosquito bar over the top. Observe when eggs are laid. Use care to note development until the larva or "maggot" has changed into a chrysalis. The fly will emerge full size. When this observation has been completed you have the life-history of thousands of disease spreaders—common flies.

The house fly is not merely an annoyance but a source of danger. It is the most efficient disease carrier that we know of. It is not merely that it is filthy, but it carries disease germs from one part of the farm to another, from one member of the family to another, and from one neighborhood to another.

The effective way to decrease the number is to decrease the breeding places, and the breeding place of flies of all sorts is in decaying vegetable or animal matter. It was evidently intended to promote life by removing dead matter from the earth. By our neglect we would pervert its use and make it the promoter of disease instead of the promoter of health. Don't let fly time come without screening your doors and windows and thus keep out both flies and mosquitoes.

In sickness, if a certain hidden nerve goes wrong, then the organ that this nerve controls will also surely fail. It may be a Stomach nerve, or it may have given strength and support to the Heart or Kidneys. It was Dr. Shoop that first pointed to this vital truth. Dr. Shoop's Restorative was not made to dose the Stomach nor to temporarily stimulate the Heart or Kidneys. That old-fashioned method is all wrong. Dr. Shoop's Restorative goes directly to these failing inside nerves. The remarkable success of this prescription demonstrates the wisdom of treating the actual cause of these failing organs. And it is indeed easy to prove. A simple five or ten days test will surely tell. Try it once, and see! Sold by T. Stevenson.

His Silver Bachelorhood

BY M. F. CARNEY,
In Pearson's Magazine.

After Commencement we drifted apart and I did not see him for many years, although I knew he was settled here in town and rumors reached me from time to time of his success as a corporation lawyer."

"Yes," said Wagner, "he was rated at ten million."

"Apparently a member of every prominent club," Hartshorn hurried on with the eagerness of one who has a good story to tell and discourages interruptions, "he was never seen at one; in fact, he lived alone, it was said, a recluse, with a stiff-necked 'Man Friday'. Well, one afternoon—I was on my way up here—I met him accidentally and after the greetings of old college chums he asked me abruptly to dine with him that evening at his apartments. I went, and I tell you, Wagner, it was the most charming night I recall in many years, one reminiscent of college days and all that. Quite naturally the subject of marriage came up, and as one will, I brought up his old love affair. Well, damned if he didn't go and bring out her photograph—one he had away back in the old days."

"Romantic chap," murmured Wagner.

Romantic?" echoed Hartshorn. "Why, he sat back there, and looking at her picture told me quite calmly that he had never changed in his love for her. I was astounded, then wanted to laugh, but the man's sincerity held me. There was no definite reason given why he had not married her, just an intimation that some other fellow won favor and he withdrew in his sensitiveness. I never before or since heard a man lay bare his heart's secret—and I don't want to—but there was something so ideal, so aesthetic, so pure in that man's devotion to his ideal—not fanciful, mark you, but real—that I felt like a vulgar interloper.

"Then I understood Dick Carsten's life." Hartshorn's voice was quite low as he ended.

His companion beckoned to a waiter, and catching a confirmative nod from Hartshorn ordered whiskey and soda.

"Probably figures prominently in his will, doesn't she?" Wagner never lost sight of the material. Hartshorn hesitated before he answered.

"I cannot say as to that."

"Why, some one told me you were executor."

"Well?"

"Well," persisted Wagner; "then you know."

"I do," said Hartshorn coolly. He looked his questioner steadily in the eyes.

"I beg your pardon," said Wagner, and lapsed into embarrassed silence.

The waiter returned with their order, placing the glasses on the table with a flourish. But these two sat lost in reverie.

Unnoticed, another entered the quiet cafe, and walking across to the corner table sat down. He was immaculately attired from scarf to spats, a portly man with the flushed face of a bon viveur. His eyes twitched nervously as he glanced at these two, with their liquor in the glasses untasted.

Presently he sighed.

"Hello, Billy Squires!" said Wagner, turning quickly. "Where did you drop from?"

Hartshorn nodded in evident reserve.

"I don't know, on my honor; just became in ground in a little circle all day; feel like a whole melodrama." Squires spoke with forced gaiety, but the cigar he held quivered between his fingers and he moistened his lips incessantly with his tongue.

"Hard night?" queried Wagner gaily.

"To-day was worse—much worse," he seemed to answer some inner voice.

"Won't you join us?" Wagner signaled the waiter, who brought another glass. There was no need to wait for Squire's acquiescence, it was always understood at such moments. The latter poured a generous quantity from the decanter, and waived aside the proferred vichy. He held that whiskey should be taken neat.

They drank, Hartshorn alone leaving some liquor in his glass. He had an aversion for men of this type who lived for self-gratification—and Squires hid not his light under a bushel.

"Come, Billy; on with the melodrama."

But Squires lifted a serious face and checked the other's banter. "I haven't told a soul and I must, for it's too much for me to bear alone." His listeners leaned forward.

"Grace—you knew my Grace, at least you did, Tom," he turned to Wagner. The latter nodded, surprised at the soft intonation of her name. He would have laughed ordinarily, for all clubdom knew of the doings of Billy Squires and his Grace. But the man's look forbade levity. Wagner thought he would make a test.

"Your old—" he did not finish.

"Chum," said Squires. There was a challenge in his voice, but Wagner shrugged his shoulders in an effort to hide his embarrassment and looked away.

"She's dead—a suicide." He said it so calmly that its full import to the man did not at first reach them. When they looked again, they saw not the bon viveur but the eyes of a satiated man weighing the past.

"Well, I'll be damned." Wagner spoke more to himself, but glanced quickly at Hartshorn, who had been startled into a tense, erect position. That self-contained gentleman said nothing.

"We dined together last night, at our facotite cafe;" went on Squires in a low voice; "she was her old self—you know how exhilarating she was," he added pensively. "After dinner we took a hansom—it was her wish—and we drove about rather aimlessly. Suddenly she murmured an order to the cabby I did not hear," he shook his head; "fact is, I was pretty well set-up—she felt the wine too, I guess. She laughed away all my questions and in a few moments, it seemed, we stopped before one of those old-fashioned houses, you know the kind—long lonely stair of brown stone," he indicated with a gesture, "quiet, dead place."

"Down by the water-front," suggested Hartshorn.

"I never will know" said Squires in a tired voice. "Well, I tried to hold her back, but she jumped to the curb, and with a hurried remark that her visit would be a short one, ran up the steps and rang the bell. The door opened as for an expected guest and she disappeared. I was mystified, angry, jealous."

Wagner smiled broadly. "Does seem queer, Tom, but I was. It sobered me a bit, and after half an hour had dragged by I was on the point of following her, when the hall-light streamed through the open door, and Grace came down the steps as one pursued. An order in a shrill, excited voice; she fairly jumped into the hansom, and the horse plunged forward under the crack of the whip."

Squires rubbed his forehead with a trembling hand. His listeners did not move. "But Grace, my old chum, had gone; she was all laughter, cheeriness, a creature of jest and good-fellowship, the best a man ever knew. Beside me sat another, with bloodless lips, silent to all my eager, yes, and angry, questions. Her face seemed pinched and very old, and then her eyes looked into mine. It was Grace, but uin the tragedy of those eyes I was stricken dumb. I managed to inquire after a while where we were going. 'Home,' she said, and that was a final word; my offers of theatre, opera, a dozen things—she ignored them all—in fact—" the admission hurt—"she ignored me. After a long while we came to our—to her home." He glanced at them sharply but they sat attentive, respectful. "She stepped down from the hansom at her door—refused my assistance, and bade me good-night. Something indefinable held me to my seat; her face was a dead gray under the arc light. I pleaded for her confidence, but in vain. 'It's all right, Billy,' she said, 'I'll be over it by to-morrow.' A determined shake of her head checked my attempt to rise. 'Good-night, Billy,' and she had gone. I knew her well enough to realize the futility of persistence, and so I drove uptown."

This was but prelude, but he lapsed into silence so extended that his listeners became restless.

"Devilish enigmatic," murmured Wagner as though to himself.

Squires heard, and, roused from his letharry, fumbled in his coat pocket. He drew forth a letter from the open envelope in his hand.

"So I thought," said he, as though in answer to Wagner, "until this came in my morning mail." He handed it across to Hartshorn, who took the letter with apparent hesitation.

"Do you——," he paused, looking at Squires over his glasses.

"Yes," answered the latter, "read it aloud. I have gone over it fifty times myself, but I want to hear the words spoken by another; perhaps it may help me to understand."

Hartshorn adjusted his glasses, picked up the letter and read in a low, clear voice:

"Dear Billy,—

For my conduct this night forgive me. You were ever eager to do that and you will not fail this last time. It is hard not to tell you, my old chum, very hard not to explain, but I cannot, and you would not understand. I have laughed over similar experiences in the lives of others, but to-night it was my turn; I did not laugh. I will be dead when you read this over your coffee. No, you need not search, for my grave will be in an inconspicuous spot yet inviolate. I detest publicity in such things. So you will help, too, by your silence. You were good to me, Billy, gave me everything but one, and this I found to-night. But it can never be mine now. I can only leave you my poor thanks and this last request—that you forward the enclosed letter without fail.

Good-night, Billy, and good-bye.

Grace.'

Wagner studied the face before him while the letter was read, and his worldly pessimism was at a loss. In common with most men of his class, he had his affair, but the woman had gone her way, left him for a younger man. His concern was short-lived, however, and the manner of her going made no material difference—it would have been the same had she chosen suicide. Yet Squires, sitting there, trembling, unnerved, devoid of all interest save in this weak creature's miserable end, he evidently cared, and, stripped of his usual gay nonchalance, sat as though alone with his anguish.

Hartshorn passed the letter across the table, but Squires did not seem to notice.

"Most mystifying," Hartshorn suggested in the tone of a leading question. The bent figure straightened and Squires mechanically reached for the envelope before him. Slowly he drew forth another letter, this one sealed, and holding it at arm's length read and re-read the inscription in tones quite inaudible. Their interest was quickened.

"Richard Carsten."

They heard him now unbelieving, until he lifted two burning eyes to meet theirs, and turned the envelope round that they might be convinced.

Hartshorn half rose from his chair, while his glasses fell clattering on the table. Then he sank back without a word. Wagner swore; it was his way when stirred deeply.

But Squires gave no time for comment. "I know—I know it was her last request and I've tried, God knows I have—all day, but I can't." His voice broke.

His companions stared, but no—he was terribly in earnest. He did not know.

"Billy," it was Wagner who gripped his a m, "don't you know Carsten is dead?"

He glanced at them, opened his mouth, but no sound came forth. Then he shrank back, huddled in his chair.

"Why do you tell me that lie?" he said.

Hartshorn stooped, picked up the newspaper from the floor and, with one finger marking the leading column, slid it quietly across the table. Squires glanced quickly at the headlines and gave a deep sigh. It was a sigh of manifest relief.

"It is the first paper I have seen to-day—you understand?" he added inquiringly, and they nodded.

"How fortunate I did not kill him," he said simply. There was no mistaking his tone; the man was dead; the circumstances did not matter. It was quite clear to whom Squires attributed her suicide.

They watched him as he sat twirling the sealed message to Carsten in his fingers; saw him pause as though to open the envelope; Hartshorn involuntarily stretched out a hand.

He nodded in affirmation to prompting from within and deliberately tore the letter into fine pieces, scattering them on the floor.

Wagner inhaled deeply, as one who had passed through an ordeal. "Now, what do you make of him?" he said.

Hartshorn winked his glasses from his nose and poured himself a generous drink. "He might have been born a gentleman," he said.

She Looks so Well and Healthy

That many ask her what she has been using.

It is a common thing to have people tell you how pale and sickly you look, but when they begin to comment on your healthy appearance you may be sure the change is remarkable.

Mr. Samson King, Box 15, Stratford, Ont., writes: "My wife has used Dr. Chase's Nerve Food to such good advantage that people are asking her what she has taken to make her so well and healthy looking. Her nervous system was all run down and she suffered greatly from headaches, sleeplessness and indigestion. By forming new, rich blood Dr. Chase's Nerve Food has built up her health wonderfully and made her strong and well. I have also used this treatment with great benefit in toning up the system."

There is no guess work about Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. It contains in condensed and easily assimilated form the elements of Nature which go to the formation of rich red blood and healthy nerve cells. Every dose is therefore bound to be of at least some benefit to the run down system. 50 cents a box, at all dealers or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Toronto.

SCRAPING THE STOMACH

Dangerous and Painful Operation Avoided by Taking "Fruit-a-tives."

Guelph, Ont., Aug. 6, 1908.

I suffered for many months with dreadful Stomach Trouble, with vomiting and constant pain, and I could retain practically nothing.

My doctor stated that I must go to the hospital and undergo an operation of scraping the stomach and be fed by the bowels for weeks. All the medicine the doctor gave me I vomited at once. I was dreadfully alarmed, but I dreaded an operation and had refused.

I had heard of "Fruit-a-tives" and the great success they were having in all Stomach Troubles, and I decided to try them. To my surprise, the "Fruit-a-tives" not only remained on the stomach, but they also checked the vomiting. I immediately began to improve, and in three days the pain was easier and I was decidedly better. I continued to take "Fruit-a-tives" and they completely cured me.

Mrs. Austin Hainstock.

"Fruit-a-tives" are 50c a box, 6 boxes for $2.50, trial box 25c. At dealers or from Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

RACE WAGERS IN INDIA.

The native of India wagers his money according to the colors worn by the jockeys and takes no heed of the merits of the horses, or he will back a horse ridden by his favorite jockey, no matter whether the animal is a rank outsider or not.

His ideas of gambling, in fact, are distinctly novel. Some of the more wealthy Indians (says Tit-Bits) form rings and back every horse in the race, thus gaining the satisfaction of getting a winner every time. It is really only of late years that the native of India has become an habitual gambler on the turf, and nowadays the bulk of the betting of the various racing centres in India is done by natives. Indeed, the authorities are becoming somewhat concerned about the growth of the betting which takes place among Indian natives, it being asserted that as many as thirty lacs of rupees (about £38$,000) is lost aad won in the course of a season.

The ignorant masses have not a great deal of actual money to wager, but so badly bitten are many of them with the craze for betting at race meetings that they frequently wager what little property they possess on a horse, and if they lose they simply replace their loss by stealing a neighbor's goods. The consequence is that when the racing season comes around the police are kept very busy dealing with cases of petty larceny and other crimes involving loss of property.

Constipation

Baked sweet apples, with some people, bring prompt relief for Constipation. With others, coarse all-wheat bread will have the same effect. Nature undoubtedly has a vegetable remedy to relieve every ailment known to man, if physicians can but find Nature's way to health. And this is strikingly true with regard to Constipation.

The bark of a certain tree in California—Cascara Sagrada—offers a most excellent aid to this end. But, combined with Egyptian Senna, Slippery Elm Bark, Solid Extract of Prunes, etc., this same Cascara bark is given its greatest possible power to correct constipation. A toothsome Candy Tablet, called Lax-ets, is now made at the Dr. Shoop Laboratories, from this ingenuous and most effective prescription. Its effect on Constipation, Biliousness, Sour Stomach, Bad Breath, Sallow Complexion, etc., is indeed prompt and satisfying.

No griping, no unpleasant after effects are experienced, and Lax-ets are put up in beautiful lithographed metal boxes at 5 cents and 25 cents per box.

BAD BREAK IN THE SOO CANAL

Narrow Escape of a Boatload of Passengers—Much Damage Done.

SAULT STE. MARIE, June 11.—Those who witnessed the accident at the canal claim that the boats escaped by a miracle.

The Walker came into the lower gates at great speed; and the high wall of water held between the gate came down with tremendous velocity.

The lines of the Assiniboia were snapped like strings, and she barely missed the Walker as she came out of the chamber.

The Crescent City followed, and marine men cannot understand how she escaped the sill of the lock. She struck there for a short time and teetered like a see-saw until she finally tore loose and came down, crashing into the Assiniboia and later into the Walker.

Had the Walker crossed the channel and the two boats piled into her a record wreck in the history of North American marine would have occurred. The Assiniboia was crowded with passengers, and there is no doubt that hardly a soul would have escaped.

ON HER BEAM ENDS

When the gates opened in front of the Assiniboia she shot forward, the bow going down over the incline until the stern was high in the air and the big propeller wheel out of the water. When she struck the level the force of the current sent her over on her beam ends and she took in a lot of water through the open gangway. In front of her the big Gilchrist Line freighter, which was responsible for the damage, was spinning on her axis in the centre of the channel. Miraculously as the Assiniboia swept down the twenty-five mile current the Walker had turned bow on toward the canal, and beyond a glancing blow on the quarter both vessels escaped.

While the Assiniboia was tied up at the foot of the lock a diver examined the bottom. He found half a dozen rivets started on the port side forward. This was plugged with tallow and the steamer proceeded on down the river. She soon began to take water and listed badly. Pumps were kept going all night. When off Detour the passengers became alarmed, and to avoid a panic, the officers, who felt that the boat was quite safe, had to put into Detour. She arrived there about 10 o'clock. Many passengers came ashore over night, determined to come back to the Soo in the morning. The officers reassured them and all left for Owen Sound. As a good portion of the listing was caused by the shifted cargo, much of this was unloaded and put on the dock for the next down-bound C.P.R. boat to pick up.

BOWS BADLY BROKEN

The Crescent City since the accident has rested a couple of feet lower, until now nearly her entire length touches bottom. She will have to be largely rebuilt forward. Her port bow is smashed in, and her frames 25cts. and $1.00 at all dealers. twisted out of place for a considerable distance aft. Chief Engineer Smith is busy putting on air compressors. The punctured compartment will be emptied of water and patched up with timber temporarily, so it can be taken to a lower lake drydock.

The Walker is still lying alongside, and is in bad shape. While her hull is comparatively undamaged, her rudder is twisted completely out of shape, and her shoe gone. Her stem received such a bump that an entire new piece will doubtless have to be put on. Newspaper men have been unable to secure an interview with the engineer of the Walker, and visitors are not allowed on board the Gilchrist steamer.

A launch loaded with people entered the upper approach at the lock just after the break, unaware of her perilous position, and was caught in the ripping current. Fortunately, after a struggle of several moments, during which the watchers stood breathless, the launch was able to slowly force itself up the stream and back to safety. A hundred feet further down would have meant certain death for the entire party in the falls and whirlpool below.

ALL BUT ONE LEAF IN

Dault Ste. Marie, Ont., June 11.—Shortly after midnight all but one leaf in the movable dam in the Canadian canal had been placed. The work was carried on with great difficulty all night, but slowly and surely each leaf was lowered and effectually did the work it was intended for. The movable dam is a steel frame like a swing-bridge, which is swung across the canal, and from which leaves are lowered to hold back the water. Only one failed to get into place. The work having to be carried on in semi-darkness, it is thought it was twisted so that it would not slip into place. Through this aperture water is still falling with great force. A fall of about ten feet at this point takes place, and the water races down through the canal in a whirlpool. Preparations are being made to timber this opening, after which the situation, it is thought, will be entirely under control. The work of closing the guard gates and pumping out the canals will then be commenced, and if thought necessary pig iron will be dumped in the canal from the swing bridge to reinforce the dam.

NEW GATES ARE READY

So far as the gates are concerned, and if it were the only damage done, it was said the canal could be in operation in two weeks. A new pair of gates are on hand, due to the fact that last winter a set of new gates were made for the upper end of the lock, but when navigation opened they were not quite ready, and it was decided to use the old ones this season. With these hung, work could be carried with lower guard gates, which are uninjured.

The accident is creating international interest. Local engineers are watching the progress of the work, and it is understood here that Col. Townsend, engineer in charge of this district, will arrive here to investigate the affair for the benefit of the army officials in Washington. If a similar accident should happen to the American canal, the only recourse would be to fill up the canal with rock earth or sink a ship to dam back the flood.

Had one of the lockmen opened the lower valves in the canal when he saw the Walker approaching the gates, the force of the water leaving the canal would probably have driven her back avoided the accident. No criticism is made, however, of the lockmen, as at the time the lower end of the canal was practically deserted. The men and foreman were at work tying up the Crescent City at the upper end.

RUINING BUSINESS.

We believe we have understood from certain liquor organs that business is apt to suffer when prohibition comes to town. The issue some time since noted the lament of a certain coffin-seller's convention in one of the Northwestern States, which complained that since one of the towns of its patrons' territory had gone dry it was not selling more than half as many coffins there as before. Grass seemed to be actually growing in the roads to the undertakers' establishments since the man-killing business had been measurably checked by ousting the saloons.

And now comes a dreadful tale from Carthage, Ill., that since the place has had quite a long term of "no-license," it is absolutely impossible to find washerwomen. The Bluffton Evening News has discovered another town through a commercial traveller, which has been without saloons some time, where the people are in arms against "no-license," because the washerwomen are giving notice that since their husbands are bringing home their money they don't need to wash any more. Prohibition is indeed an awful blow to business. —American Issue.

THE CANADIAN ORDER of FORESTERS

High Court Held Thirtieth Annual Session in London Last Week.

Last Year Was the Most Prosperous in the History of the Society.

The thirtieth annual session of the High Court of the Canadian Order of Foresters opened in the city of London Wednesday afternoon, June 9th, with a large number in attendance, including High Court officers and delegates representing subordinate courts of every Province of the Dominion. It is just twenty years since the order last met in the Forest City, and the event was an important one, not only on that account, but also owing to the fact that in London just thirty years ago, the society first saw the light of day. There it received the name Canadian Order of Foresters. Its founders were fortunate in the choice of a name, at once euphonious and patriotic. Since then the order has steadily grown in importance, until its interests are now firmly established in every Province of the Dominion, and its record a splendid testimony of what can be accomplished by Canadians in Canada.

After the usual opening ceremonies and the appointment of the several standing committees, the High Court officers submitted their reports, which showed the order to be in the most flourishing condition.

The High Chief Ranger, J. A. Stewart, of Perth, Ont., after extending a hearty welcome to the representatives present, submitted his report, which was replete with facts and figures relating to the growth and extension of the order during the last year.

The year closed with a membership of 70,757. The increase in the insurance reserve during the year amounted to $302,249.67. On January 1st, 1908, the amount on hand in this branch was $2,426,690.87, and at the close of the year 2,728,940.54. There were 391 death claims paid, amounting to $396,861.62.

The sick and funeral benefit department is also in a flourishing condition. During the year no less a sum than $134,371.88 covering 5,836 claims, was paid in this branch. The amount to the credit of this fund at the close of the year was $142,806.70.

The High Chief Ranger, in concluding his address, expressed the hope that the meeting would be a pleasant one for the members and a profitable one for the order, and felt that if ever there was a time in the history of the order when the members should all feel inspired with hope and confidence in the future of Canadian Forestry, that time was the present. In an inspiring address, he urged upon the representatives to do all that in them lay to make 1909 the banner year of the order.

The report of George Faulkner, High Secretary, covering the general work of the society, was next in order, and showed in detail the large volume of business transacted through the head office in Brantford.

The amount of insurance premiums received during the year was $597,273.16, which, with the large sum of $101,583.33, derived from interest earned on investments, made the total receipts in this branch $699,131.49. There were 391 death claims paid, amounting to $396,861.62, leaving the large sum of $302,249.87 to carry to the reserve fund, which, at the close of the year was $2,728,940.54.

The sick and funeral benefit branch of the order also showed a marked advance. The amount of fees received during the year was $159,139.61, and interest earned $5,174.49. The total receipts, therefore, amounted to $164,314.10. There were 5,836 sick and funeral benefit claims paid, amounting to $134,371.88, leaving $29,942.22 to carry to the reserve fund, which at the close of the year amounted to $142,806.70.

There were 70,757 members in good standing at the close of the year, carrying $71,175,500 of insurance, and the membership in the Sick and Funeral Benefit Branch was $43,654.

There were issued from the High Secretary's Office 6,758 insurance certificates, and 6,047 membership certificates, or a total of 12,805, and in addition there were endorsements made on 1,368 insurance certificates.

The report of Robt. Elliott, High Treasurer, showed the funds of the order to be in a most satisfactory condition. The receipts in the several funds were: Insurance, $699,131.49; sick and funeral benefit fund, $164,314.10; general fund, $91,948.27. Total receipts, $955,394.56. The total expenditure in these funds amounted to $625,697.29. The surplus income over expenditure amounted to $329,497.27.

The surplus insurance funds are invested as follows:

Municipal and School Debentures	$2,538,169.05
Dominion of Canada Stock	150,000.00
Deposits in Chartered Banks	20,000.00
Current Accounts in Chartered Banks	20,771.49
Total	$2,728,940.54

The total assets of the order amounted to $2,928,399.39, and its liabilities $38,660.59. Assets over liabilities, $2,889,738.80.

The report of Dr. U. M. Stanley, who has been chairman of the Medical Board since the inception of the order, shows that the death rate during the past year was only 5.53 in the thousand. The average death rate for thirty years is but 5.12 in the thousand. There were submitted to the Medical Board during the year 7,866 applications, of which 7,237 were accepted, and the remaining 649 rejected.

The report of W. G. Strong, Superintendent of Organization, showed that during the year there were 6,597 initiations. There were 37 new courts instituted with a membership of 732.

Mr. J. A. Stewart, who was re-elected high chief ranger, is a resident of Perth, Ont., and became a member of the order in 1897.

He first attended High Court in 1900, and in 1901 was elected a member of the executive committee. In 1902 and 1903 he was elected high vice-chief ranger and succeeded to the office of high chief ranger in February, 1904, when Mr. George Faulkner, the then high chief ranger was called upon to fill the office of high secretary.

He was elected high chief ranger at the annual meeting in 1904 and re-elected in each year since that time.

Mr. Stewart is a native of the town of Perth. He studied law with His Honor Judge Edward Elliott, and was called to the bar of Ontario in 1895. GEORGE O. WILLIAMS.

Mr. George O. Williams, a Toronto contractor, died at his home, 113 Sorauren Ave., on Wednesday of last week after an illness of six weeks from typhoid fever. The deceased who was in his 45th year, was born near the village of Tottenham, where he resided until seven years ago, when he removed to Toronto. He was a member of North Parkdale Methodist Church and President of the Tottenham Old Boys' Association. He is survived by his mother, who is in her 83rd year, a widow and five children. Four brothers and four sisters also survive, namely, D. M. Williams, of Tottenham; T. E. Williams, of Thessalon; W. H. Williams, of Carlyle, Sask.; Dr. J. J. Williams, of Woodstock, Mrs. Charles Price, of Shelburne; Mrs. Sam. Legate, of Grand Valley; Mrs. McKinley, of Toronto, and Miss Williams, of Tottenham. The burial took place at Tottenham.

MR. WM. JACKSON.

Mr. William Jackson, whose sudden and critical illness was noted by The Banner three weeks ago, passed away at the home of his sister-in-law, Mrs. Robert Jackson, Wellesley St., Toronto, on Thursday morning. His malady, which was of a somewhat baffling nature, was diagnosed by Dr. McPhedran and other Toronto specialists, who were called in consultation, as acute Bright's disease, which had gradually poisoned the whole system. The remains were brought here on Friday evening and taken to his home on lot 11, Centre Road, Mono, whence the funeral was held to the Forest Lawn Cemetery on Saturday afternoon. The late Mr. Jackson, who was 57 years of age, was a lifelong resident of Mono township. He was a son of the late Robert Jackson, one of the township's early settlers, and was born on lot 10, Centre Road, which adjoins the farm where he was living when stricken down by his last illness. He was a comparatively wealthy man, being the owner of 200 acres of first-class land, a dwelling house in Orangeville and other property as well. By the community he was held in high esteem as a kind, obliging neighbor and a man who was exemplary in his daily walk of life. It was therefore only natural that his unexpected illness and death should occasion widespread sorrow and a general expression of profound sympathy for the bereaved family and relatives. He is survived by a widow, his aged mother, now in her 83rd year, and a family of four sons and three daughters. The latter are Edgar, William, John, Joseph, Marie, Mabel and Ina, all of whom are at home except the second son, William, who is a member of the Sterling Bank staff here. J. A. Jackson, of Ottawa, and Thomas and Joseph Jackson, well-known Mono farmers, are brothers. Mrs. (Rev.) G. B. Morley, of Bradford, is the only sister. Deceased was an Anglican and had long been one of the leading members of Herald Angel Church at Cardwell, holding the office of lay representative to the Synod at the time of his death. He was a staunch Conservative and a member of the A.O.U.W., in which he carried $2000 life insurance. The funeral on Saturday afternoon was one of the largest ever witnessed in this vicinity. There were about 175 rigs in the mournful procession that followed the remains to their last resting place and the cortege was almost a mile in length. An impressive service was held in Herald Angel Church, which was draped in black. The service was conducted by the rector, Rev. W. McLean, assisted by Rev. G. A. Rix, rector of St. Mark's Church. In his discourse the former paid a high tribute to the deceased as a man of worth and a useful citizen. Among the many beautiful floral tributes, bearing mute testimony to the affection and sorrow of friends, was a pillow of roses from the Herald Angel Church, a wreath from the family with the inscription "Father" and a spray from Mrs. Jackson, of Toronto. The pallbearers were Messrs. Hugh Bracken, Edward Jenkins, James and Ira South, S. Cruikshank and John Armstrong. Among the friends from a distance present at the funeral were Mr. J. A. Jackson, Ottawa, Rev. Geo. B. Morley and son George, Bradford; Mr. and Mrs. Walter Harrison, Brampton; Mr. and Mrs. John Anderson, Bolton; Mrs and Mrs. Alex. Dean, Mono Road; Mrs. Wm. and Messrs. George and Robert Wilson, Mayfield, Messrs. Thos. and John Little and Miss Little, Mono Road; Mr. James South, Scarboro; Mr. Garnet Jackson and Mr. Richard Larrington, Toronto.

MRS. ANDERSON'S DEATH.

Mrs. Matilda Anderson, formerly a resident of Mono township, passed away at her home on Margaret St. on Thursday, at the age of 66 years. The funeral was held to the Methodist Church burying ground at Relessey on Friday afternoon.

MRS. ROBERT WAINES.

Mrs. Robert Waines, an old resident of the township of Mono, passed away at her home near Blount, on Thursday morning after a severe illness. The deceased, who was in her 75th year, met with an unfortunate accident three or four months ago, when she fell down a stairway at the home of her daughter, the late Mrs. James Hewitt, of Springbrook, and fractured an ankle. She had barely recovered from the effects of this mishap, when she was seized with a severe, and as it proved, fatal illness. Deceased lady, who was the widow of the late Robert Waines, was held in high esteem and her demise has occasioned much regret among a wide circle of friends. She leaves three sons, Messrs. Herbert Waines, a well-known resident of Mono, Robert Waines, Battleford, Sask., and Locke Waines, also in the West. The daughters are Mrs. Wm. McEwen, of Mono; Mrs. Waines, of Barrie, and Mrs. G. B. Carter, Orangeville. There was a large attendance at the funeral, which was held from her late home to Mitchell's Church burying ground at two o'clock on Saturday afternoon. The bereaved family and relatives have the sympathy of the community in their sorrow.

—Mr. Chas. Mason, of Shelburne, is very low at present and his recovery is not expected.

—Orangeville Citizens' Band furnished music at the Camilla Garden Party on Friday night.

—Wm. Hunter, fireman on the Cement Co's. engine for hauling marl from the beds at Caledon Lake, got his hand caught in a car coupling Monday morning and had the thumb badly crushed.

SLACK WIRE PERFORMANCE.

A stranger, who styled himself "Prof. Cogan, the high invisible slack wire champion of the world, with South Africa's giant Beard," furnished Orangeville juveniles and a goodly gathering of the grown-ups with considerable amusement Friday and Saturday evenings. He gave a slack wire performance on West Broadway opposite the Fire Hall, where he soon attracted a large gathering of people by singing "The Holy City" at the top of his voice, while he pranced back and forth on the wire and balanced himself in all sorts of unusual positions. The performer was an elderly man and wore a heavy red beard that completely covered the lower part of his face and swept far down over his chest. He challenged any person in the crowd to take the end of a rope and pull him from his precarious perch, and created considerable merriment by playing catch with a bystander, using a large stone instead of a ball. He caught the stone without a slip, which was more than the man on the ground was able to do. The performer took up a collection at the close of his exhibition and is apparently going about the country making a living in this way. He claims to be well connected in the Old Country, and says he fought in the Zulu and Boer wars.

KICKED IN THE FACE.

Mr. George Hodgson, an Amaranth farmer, met with an unusual accident last Friday morning. He was helping to treat one of his horses for a sore eye. The horse was tied down and Mr. Hodgson was in the act of injecting some liquid into the affected optic, when the animal reared up and struck him a violent blow in the face with one of its front feet. The blow gashed his cheek badly, but fortunately did not break any bones. Dr. Kyles, who was summoned, found it necessary to put in a couple of stitches.

OFF TO CAMP.

On Tuesday morning the Orangeville Company of the 36th Regiment, under the command of Capt. R. J. Bennett, took their departure for the historic camping ground at Niagara-on-the-Lake, where they will remain under canvas until Saturday, June 26th. The 36th will be in charge of Major Grahame, of Alliston, this year. The five year term of Lieut.-Col. W. Wallace, of Toronto, formerly commanding officer, expired a short time ago. It so happens that his successor, Major Windeyer, is at present away on leave of absence. The command of the regiment therefore devolves upon Major Grahame, the next officer in rank. The local company this year is made up largely of smart, soldierly young fellows, who should give a good account of themselves in Camp.

A VISITOR FROM THE WEST.

An interesting visitor arrived from the West on Sunday, via the steamboat express from Owen Sound, and registered with his wife and two children at the Grand Central. The gentleman's name is Mr. W. J. Elliott, of Tusgeke, Sask. Mr. Elliott who is a large grain buyer, left Fort William on Friday afternoon, arriving at the Soo at ten a.m. the following day on the C.P.R. boat, (the Kewatin) on his way to Wroxeter, Ont. He informed The Banner that the crops in the West were looking fine. Mr. Elliott returns in a months' time. Tugeske is an Indian name, signifying "Good Land," and is fifty miles north west of Moose Jaw, and although having only a population of three hundred and fifty, boasts of three large grain elevators, with a fourth in course of erection. The Kewatin was of course obliged to come through the American locks, owing to the destruction of the gates on the Canadian side. Four other large steamers were locked through at the same time as the C. P. R. liner. The passengers heard of the disaster before leaving Fort William, and arrangements were at once made by the Captain of The Kewatin to avail himself of the American locks.

LIGHTNING DID DAMAGE.

Ontario was visited by a general and welcome rainfall on Sunday. The refreshing showers, that fell at frequent intervals throughout the day and well on into Sunday night, gave the thirsty soil a thorough drenching and did incalculable good to the meadows and grain crops. There was no thunder or lightning during the day and the rain, at times little more than a heavy drizzle, soaked into the ground as fast as it fell. Late in the afternoon the showers became heavier and about nine o'clock at night there was a heavy downfall accompanied by vicious lightning. The lightning did no damage about town, but out in the country a few farmers had stock killed. Mr. R. J. McCutcheon, of Relessey, had three cows and a heifer instantly killed by a bolt. The animals were lying together under a tree in a pasture field. The tree, strange to say, shows no sign of having been struck. George Hammond, who lives on 20 sideroad in Amaranth, had a cow killed and another badly injured. In both cases the animals were insured in the Dufferin Farmers' Mutual.

BURNED BY GASOLINE.

M. H. Denton Meets With a Serious Accident.

Mr. M. H. Denton was severely burned about the face and arms by gasoline while working in his laundry on West Broadway last Friday morning, and is still confined to his bed by reason of his injuries which might easily have been of a fatal nature. Mr. Denton keeps a gasoline lamp for the purpose of heating the machine for laundrying collars and shirts. The reservoir attached to the lamp is pumped full of air to give the burning gasoline the necessary pressure. The pressure failing, Mr. Denton undertook to pump in a fresh supply of air. Just as he finished the rubber tube that joined the pump and reservoir became disconnected in some way. The strong air pressure caused the gasoline to spurt out over Mr. Denton's hands, arms and face. Some of the liquid came in contact with the burning lamp and in an instant Mr. Denton was literally enveloped in flames. The laundry employees ran to his assistance and after a sharp struggle succeeded in extinguishing the blazing liquid. He was however, severely burned from the hands to the elbows and about his forehead and left cheek. His eyebrows were completely singed and the outer skin was burned off the outside of his left arm from the elbow down. The wounds are healing rapidly and our genial townsman hopes to be about again in a few days. It was a close call and Mr. Denton considers he was fortunate to escape as well as he did.

THEY PAY THEIR DEBTS?

A preacher at the conclusion of one of his sermons said, "Let all in the church who are paying their debts stand up." Instantly every man, woman and child, with one exception, rose to their feet. The preacher seated them and said, "Now every man not paying his debts stand up." The exception noted, a careworn, hungry looking individual, clothed in his last summer's suit, slowly assumed a perpendicular position. "How is it my friend," asked the minister, "that you are the only man not meeting his obligations?" "I run a newspaper," he meekly answered, "and the brethren here who just stood up are my subscribers and—" "Let us pray," explained the minister.

Hot Weather Months Kill Little Children

If you want to keep your children rosy, healthy and full of life during the hot weather months give them an occasional dose of Baby's Own Tablets. This medicine prevents deadly summer complaints by cleansing the stomach and bowels; or it cures the trouble promptly if it comes on unexpectedly.

The mother who keeps this medicine on hand may feel as safe as if she had a doctor in the home. Mrs. C. C. Roe, Georgetown, Ont., says:—"I can heartily recommend Baby's Own Tablets as a great help to baby during the hot summer months. I have used them for summer troubles and am much pleased with the result." Sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

CADETS "AT HOME."

The High School Cadet Corps held a delightful At Home in the Assembly Hall of the High School, last Wednesday night. The School was neatly decorated for the occasion and looked very pretty in the bright glow of the electric lights, with which the building has been recently fitted. The Cadets did the honors of the evening in full uniform. There were about one hundred guests present and a very pleasant evening was spent in games, music and other amusements. Refreshments were provided during the evening.

WILL TURNER WEDS.

"Knarsboro Hall," the palatial residence of Dr. T. S. and Mrs. Sproule, of Markdale, was the scene of a quiet but pretty wedding on Tuesday morning, June 8th, when their only daughter, Lillian Clarrisse, was united in marriage to Mr. Wm. E. Turner, electrical engineer, of Salt Lake City, Utah, and son of Mr. Adam Turner, formerly of Orangeville, and now of Saskatoon, Sask. The bride was given away by her father. She was attired in a handsome cream lace robe over silk, with the customary veil and orange blossoms, and carried a bouquet of cream roses. Miss B. L. Macpherson played the Wedding March. The ceremony was performed at 6 a. m. by Rev. E. G. Dymond, rector of Christ Church, in the presence of only a few relatives and intimate friends of the bride and groom. After the ceremony a dainty wedding breakfast was served. The parlor and dining room were beautifully decorated with apple blossoms, white lilacs and cream roses. Mr. and Mrs. Turner left on the morning train for Salt Lake City, and will spend some time in Chicago, Denver, Colorado Springs and other places en route. The bride's travelling suit was of grey cloth with peacock blue hat. The many costly gifts to the bride betokened the great popularity and esteem in which she is held, many coming from such far away points as Victoria, Vancouver, Winnipeg, Montreal, and other places.

DOCTOR ADVISED OPERATION

Cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Canifton, Ont.—"I had been a great sufferer for five years. One doctor told me it was ulcers of the uterus, and another told me it was a fibroid tumor. No one knows what I suffered. I would always be worse at certain periods, and never was regular, and the bearing-down pains were terrible. I was very ill in bed, and the doctor told me I would have to have an operation, and that I might die during the operation. I wrote to my sister about it and she advised me to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Through personal experience I have found it the best medicine in the world for female troubles, for it has cured me, and I did not have to have the operation after all. The Compound also helped me while passing through Change of Life."—Mrs. LETITIA BLAIR, Canifton, Ontario.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from roots and herbs, has proved to be the most successful remedy for curing the worst forms of female ills, including displacements, inflammation, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, bearing-down feeling, flatulency, indigestion, and nervous prostration. It costs but a trifle to try it, and the result has been worth millions to suffering women.

RESPECTED LAST WISH.

A young Bostonian went to Texas and turned cowboy. He rapidly caught the spirit of the country and as rapidly shook off the outward semblance of tender-footed Eastern habit. Rough bearded leatherclad, sombrero as wide as the widest, forty-two calibre Colts on his hips, he was as wild as the wildest. Yet within his bosom still burned the flame of Boston culture and refinement.

One day, he was riding with a stranger across the prairie. Turning his head suddenly (he was slightly ahead) he saw his companion make a suspicious motion toward his hip-pocket. Without hesitation he drew his revolver and shot him. The stranger dropped like a log. The cowboy dismounted and looked at the body of his victim.

"I wonder if he was really going to shoot me" he soliloquized; "I'll see."

Turning the body over, he discovered a flask of whiskey protruding from the pocket.

"Poor fellow!" said he, in a tone of regret; "I've made a mistake. I've killed an innocent man and a gentleman at that. He wasn't going to shoot me; he was going to invite me to have a drink. Well," he sighed, drawing his sleeve across his mouth, "the last wishes of the deceased shall be respected."

The act as amended last year for restraining the use of tobacco, provided that all juveniles under 16 years of age found smoking cigarettes are liable to a reprimand the first time they are convicted, a fine of $1 the second time and a fine of $4 the third time. This law applies to all boys under 16 years of age who either smoke or chew tabacco or have cigarettes or cigarette papers in their possession. There is a fine stipulated for those who sell tobacco to minors.

IN THE WRONG DIRECTION.

Two news items appeared in the daily press of last week which have a direct and sinister connection with each other. One told of the passing up the St. Lawrence on the way to the great lakes, for the purpose of being used as naval training ship, of the United States gunboat which made the first capture in the Spanish-American war. The other announced the visit of a deputation of Toronto yachtsmen to Ottawa to talk over with the Dominion Government plans for the formation of a Canadian naval militia for inland waters. A few days later came the further announcement of the arrival at Montreal, for the Canadian Government, of a vessel nominally intended for lighthouse service, but which is specially designed for speedy transformation into a heavily armored cruiser.

For nearly a century the great lakes dividing Canada and the United States were free of everything which told of war or preparation for war. Within the last ten or fifteen years there has been a gradual drift towards what looks too much like preparation. The first move in this direction was made by the late Conservative Government at Ottawa in building at Owen Sound one or two fishery protection cruisers, which were in reality gunboats. Another move in the same direction was made by the Liberal Government when a much more powerful vessel was launched at Toronto in the Vigilant. Coincident with this the Americans have introduced some half-dozen vessels, one at a time, of the same class, to the same waters. On the other side of the lakes a beginning was some time since made in creating a naval militia, and now similar measures are being taken here.

The Peace Society in Canada and those at the back of the Mohonk conference in the United States should take note of these things, and use their joint influence to check a movement which, although insignificant in comparison with what is seen along European frontiers, has a tendency to promote distrust and to stimulate an unholy rivalry.—The Weekly Sun.

HARRY REID KNOWS.

T. Stevenson, the druggist, does not guarantee Parisian Sage to grow hair on every bald head, but if there is any life left in the roots of your hair, Parisian Sage will stimulate the hair bulbs and cause your hair to grow again. Here is one case. "I am now using the second bottle of your Parisian Sage, and can notice a new crop of hair appearing. I am glad to say it is a darker color than my hair was before I became bald." Harry Reid, 10 Manhattan St., Rochester, N.Y.

Don't wait till you're bald before using Parisian Sage, use it now. Kill the dandruff germ and prevent baldness. T. Stevenson, the druggist, sells Parisian Sage at 50 cents a large bottle, and he guarantees it to cure dandruff, stop falling hair, and cure all diseases of the scalp, or money back. THREE YEARS FOR TOMMY GRIMES.

Stiff Sentence Passed on Orangeville Boy Who Defrauded the C. P. R.

Friday was sentence day at the Toronto sessions and it was a sad day for many. A former Orangeville boy, Thomas Grimes, the late C.P.R. general yardmaster at West Toronto, was sentenced to the Kingston penitentiary for three years.

He was found guilty by the jury of obtaining $800 by false pretences and a charge of forgery and uttering.

Judge Winchester said: "Your case is very sad. You have worked your way up. Your employers treated you handsomely and put you in a position of trust. You took advantage of them. But it is you yourself who injured your wife and family. Your evil mind worked out within you this method of getting money from the C. P.R., so that you cannot plead this as a first offence." Then he passed sentence.

Found in the Traveler's Grip

The means by which he cured a very severe case of piles.

Very many traveling salesmen know what it is to suffer from itching piles and will read with interest the following letter:

Mr. W. J. Saunders, salesman for the Sawyer-Massey Co., and who lives at Killarney, Man., states: "After having suffered for three years with a very bad case of piles a friend recommended Dr. Chase's Ointment and I cannot now speak too highly of same. After having used two boxes of Dr. Chase's Ointment I can truthfully say that I am cured of piles, and cheerfully recommend it to anyone suffering from this complaint. I am never without a box of this ointment in my grip."

It is impossible to claim too much for Dr. Chase's Ointment as a cure for every form of itching, bleeding and protruding piles. It seems to have no rival in this regard and the record of cures is simply wonderful.

Nearly any druggist can tell you of scores of cures that have come to his notice. Some of these effected even after surgical operations had failed. 60 cents a box, at all dealers or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Toronto.

LOST HIS ARM

Streetsville Miller Fell Beneath a Train

In attempting to board a moving train Monday night at Ward Seven Depot, on the C.P.R., Mr. Duncan Reid, a well known miller of Streetsville, lost his grip and fell beneath the wheels of the train, injuring his left arm so badly that it has to be amputated at the elbow, and dislocating his right arm. Besides these injuries, he received a nasty cut over the eye which required nine stitches.

He was dragged from his position by some of the eye-witnesses, and was hurried to the Western hospital. Dr. Adam Beety performed the operation and although Reid is still in a serious condition, it is thought that he will recover.

MARRIED THE WRONG MAN

An 'Example of the Free and Easy Way They Marry in the States

Camden, N.J., June 8.—Married without their knowledge and against their inclination a young man and a young woman presented a picture of dismay in the office of Justice of the Peace Fithian here yesterday.

"Oh dear! Oh dear!" exclaimed the bride in broken English. "I wanted a license to marry another man."

The Justice said the couple indicated to him that they wished to be married. The man said he was I. Zion of Atlantic City. The woman said she was Rosa Caneapero of Philadelphia. After filling up the return of the marriage Justice Fothian married the couple. When he handed the certificate of marriage to the man the latter handed him a dollar. The Justice said that he did not do business for that fee and informed him that his price was $5.

The bride hereupon astonished Fithian by informing him that they did not want to get married, but that Zion had simply accompanied her to procure a license for her to marry another man.

"Well, I can't help that. You people are married now," said the justice.

WIFE SUICIDED.

While Her Husband Tried to Save Her and Nearly Lost His Own Life.

NIAGARA FALLS, N.Y., June 6—Louis Cohen of Buffalo saw his young wife leap into the swirling river between Second and Third Sister Islands at 5 o'clock this afternoon, only 150 feet above the brink of the cataract. Without a moment's hesitation he followed her, caught her hand and struggled desperately to save her.

Mrs. Cohen probably died in her husband's arms. Before it was possible to bring efficient help, an hour had passed, all of which time Cohen was making frantic efforts to reach the shore. But the struggle against the current—at this point it is about twenty miles an hour—was beyond mere human muscle. Fortune aided him. With his wife tightly clasped to him, he felt himself bump into a tree-stump and on this he got a grip with his one free hand.

When aid at last arrived, Cohen was exhausted and could not tie the rope thrown him around his own or his wife's body. He had been unable, too, in the long wait to keep his wife's body when within fifteen feet of the bank. The woman's body was whirled away and later in the day was found fast on a rock 100 feet above the brink. When it was rescued life was extinct.

A TRUE BILL.

Grand-Jury at Peel Quarter Sessions Brings in a True Bill Against James Farrell, of Streetsville, for Perjury.

Brampton, June 8.—At the Quarter sessions for Peel county today the Grand Jury returned a true bill for perjury against James Farrell, the Streetsville hotelkeeper. The case arises out of certain allegations made against John D. Orr, the license inspector for the district, and James Harvey, a constable, in the course of the prosecution of Farrell for a breach of the liquor license act. A raid was made by the inspector and constable on Farrell's place on the 23rd of March, which was unlicensed, and a quantity of liquor seized.

Farrell in the course of the proceedings before the Police Magistrate swore that at the time of the search a man named Hugh Whitty was in the bar, and that after the raid $154 was missing from the till, which they had seen the inspector open, and two dollars from Whitty's trunk.

Both Orr and Harvey denied that Whitty was present. Subsequently Whitty confessed that his story was untrue, and he is now awaiting sentence after being convicted of perjury.

His Honor, Judge D. McGibbon, in his charge to the Grand Jury, commenting on the case, said that it was one which presented no legal difficulty and entailed simply a question of fact.

The case for the crown is in the hands of Crown Attorney W. H. MacFadden, and Mr. T. J. Main will defend Farrell when the matter comes before the jury tomorrow.

MOIR TROUBLESOME

Private Moir, the soldier in the Royal Canadian regiment who shot and killed Sergt. Lloyd at Wolseley barracks, London, about a year ago and was tried for murder and adjudged insane, was taken to Hamilton some time ago and incarcerated in the asylum. He has not been a model patient since his arrival there, and has made two attempts to escape. A few nights ago he tore his bed sheets to ribbons and tried to tie up his guard in an endeavor to make his escape. He had almost succeeded in overpowering the guard when assistance was rendered by a couple of warders who happened to be passing the cell when the struggle was going on, and Moir was pinioned and the guard set free. Some weeks ago he tried to get out in about the same manner, but since then had been quiet. At the trial of Moir it was sworn that he was suffering from epilepsy and that he became insane at times and did not know what he was doing. He was sentenced to spend the remainder of his life inside the walls of the local asylum. His bad spells are fortunately of rare occurence, but the guards have been warned to keep close watch on him. Moir is a man of great strength and is hard to handle at times.

THE JUNE MEETING.

County Council is in Session This Week.

Members Pass Resolution Congratulating Reeve Riddell on His Re-Election.

The June session of the County Council opened on Tuesday afternoon with all the members present and Warden Dynes in the chair. Dr. W. H. Riddell, reeve of Orangeville, was warmly welcomed on entering the court room, and before the Council adjourned the first day, a formal vote of congratulation and appreciation was passed unanimously.

After calling the roll and reading the minutes, Clerk Reid started to read the usual heavy batch of communications. The first was the report of Public School Inspector Gordon. It was a voluminous document, the second largest ever handed out by the Inspector, comprising twelve pages of closely written foolscap. It did not prove very diverting to the Councillors, as the Clerk reeled off page after page, and the Councillors afterwards joked the Inspector. However it was a good report just the same, and gave valuable information and useful suggestions. We have,It appears, 117 teachers in the public schools of the County, eighteen males and the balance, or 99, of the gentler sex. The former receive $9,395, and the latter $38,760. The Ontario Government puts up $1,116, and the efforts of the department to advance education were noted favorably. The Inspector pointed out that not fifty per cent. of the scholars attended regularly, which was a woeful waste of time, energy and money, and poor results were inevitable. Changing teachers too often was condemned, and undue interference by school trustees was discouraged. The Inspector has evidently spent a pretty strenuous year, and his report should be read by every trustee in the County.

DUFFERIN'S NEW CREST.

Dufferin County is to have a crest and motto of its own. Permission has been received from the present Lord Dufferin, son of the former Governor General of Canada, after whom the County is called, to use his Excellency's crest and motto, with a slight variation as according to "ancient usuage" it is not permitted to have two crests identical. Lord Dufferin has been good enough to forward sketches. The motto is "Per Vias Rectas" or in English "By the Right Ways," which ought to be a pretty good maxim for this County. Lord Dufferin had a brother killed in the Boer war and the County Council passed a resolution of sympathy at the time, which was gratefully acknowledged by the late Lord Dufferin, probably one of the most popular and brilliant Governor Generals ever in Canada.

Among the communications was one from the County of Kent advocating the assessment of farm lands only where the County authorities so desired. It was pointed out that if the law were changed it would give an impetus to building operations. This is as the Warden expressed it "local option in assessment." The idea seemed to meet with favor with the Council.

John L. Island wrote the Council asking to be appointed to the position of County Solicitor rendered vacant by the departure of Mr. J. N. Fish.

Captains Gabriel and Bennett of the 36th Regiment want a grant of 25 cents a day for the members of their respective companies when in camp.

The Salvation Army wish a grant of a hundred dollars to help them along in their rescue work. The Women's Institute would be satisfied with twenty. The Ontario Department of Agriculture wrote and suggested that the Council put up prizes for competition at the Winter Fair at Guelph, residents of the County only to be eligible to win same. The letter made several suggestions and the scheme looks good.

SPANHOUSE TRAGEDY

A bill from the Ontario Government for $27.84 was received for conveying George E. Stewart, the maniac murderer, to Hamilton Insane Asylum. This seems high but lunatics probably have a special rate.

John Brown, Roy Saunders, and Clarence Cooper are at the Victoria Industrial School. It costs the County $48.21 quarterly for their maintenance. The Magistrate says he would send some more boys there if it did not cost the County so much.

On motion of Reeve Riddell and Deputy-Reeve Arnott, the various documents were referred to the proper committees.

A PLEASING INCIDENT.

At this stage Charles Mitchell, Deputy-Reeve of Mulmur, and one of the most jovial and popular members of the County Council, seconded by W. A. Donaldson, the energetic young Deputy-Reeve of Mono, moved the following resolution.

"That this Council congratulate W. H. Riddell on his re-election as Reeve of Orangeville, and acknowledge his valuable services on the various committees on which he has served."

The motion was agreed to unanimously amid enthusiasm. There is no doubt of the Reeve's popularity with his colleagues, who appreciate his ability. The Reeve returned his thanks briefly explaining that he was unseated through no fault of his own.

SECOND DAY'S PROCEEDINGS.

The County Council resumed business on Wednesday sharp at ten o'clock. The Warden delivered his address, which contained few startling features. The improvements in the county buildings were noted with appreciation, and the good position of the County adverted to.

Rev. J. R. Bell and Mr. George Robb, of the Orangeville High School Board, addressed the Council with reference to taking advantage of the Act of the Ontario Government establishing a course in Agriculture in connection with High Schools. The addresses of these gentlemen were received with attention, but action was deferred until the next session of the Council.

The Council then went into Committee of the Whole to fill the blanks in the by-law appointing a County Solicitor. Reeve Riddell proposed C. R. McKeown, M. L. A., and Deputy-Reeve Arnott the name of J. L. Island. On a vote of seven to six, Reeve Reith in theChair not voting, Council decided to take no action and the County is without a solicitor.

The Council will likely conclude on Friday morning in time to enable the Councillors to get the early trains, holding a sunrise session if necessary for this purpose.

PAST MASTER'S JEWEL.

Free Masons Make Presentation to Mr. J. N. Fish.

An emergency meeting of Harris Masonic Lodge was held on Tuesday night for the purpose of making a farewell presentation to W. Bro. J. N. Fish, a Past Master of the Lodge, prior to his departure for his future home in Regina. About fifty members of the craft were present, including several visitors from Lorne Lodge, Shelburne, Scott Lodge Grand Valley, Bolton and other lodges. A pleasant incident occurred during the business meeting when the Master of the Lodge, W. Bro. A. D. McKitrick, called the immediate Past Master, W. Bro. Dr. R. Meek to the east and on behalf of the lodge presented him with a handsome Past Master's Apron. The W. Bro. returned his thanks in an appropriate speech, which was followed by short addresses by W. Bros. R. H. Robinson and A. Hill, who paid tribute to W. Bro. Meek's zeal and ability as chief officer of the Lodge. At the close of the business meeting the brethren adjourned to the dining hall, where refreshments were served. The repast was followed by a pleasant programme which included a number of toasts. "King and Craft," the opening toast, was honored by the entire company rising and singing the National Anthem. "The Grand Lodge of Canada" brought forth eloquent responses from W. Bro. Dr. E. C. Campbell, of Shelburne, D. D. G.M. of Georgian District; W. Bro. J. A. V. Preston, past D.D.G.M. of Wellington District, and V. W. Bro. Robt. Mann, "The Guest of the Evening," was honored with great heartiness, the company singing "For He's a Jolly Good Fellow" with much enthusiasm. Rt. W. Bro. R. Irvine, who spoke first in response, paid a high tribute to W. Bro. Fish's worth and services to the Craft and also as a professional man and citizen and in closing presented him with a beautiful Past Master's solid gold jewel in behalf of Harris Lodge. Mr. Fish, who was accorded an enthusiastic reception, made a feeling reply in which he expressed his gratitude to his fellow Masons and the people of Orangeville generally for their consideration and many kindly acts. Eloquent addresses followed from W. Bros. C. R. McKeown and A. A. Hughson. "The Visiting Brethren" brought happy responses from W. Bros. A. E. Rosevear and J. A. Mills and Bro. Dr. John Barr, of Lorne Lodge, Shelburne; Bro. W. L. Craig, of Scott Lodge, Grand Valley, W. Bro. W. M. Noble, of Bolton Lodge, and Bros. W. G. Hyland and V. A. Statia. The happy gathering dispersed about midnight, the brethren bringing their meeting to a close by singing "Auld Lang Syne" followed by the National Anthem.

On Monday night the members of the Lawn Bowling Club met at the Club House and presented Mr. Fish with a silver mounted tobacco bowl and pipe and case. The presentation was made by Mr. F. W. Ritchie, President of the Club. Mr. Fish has been Treasurer of the Club since it was first organized about five years ago.

Mr. Fish left for his western home on the steamboat express on Tuesday afternoon. The good wishes of the people of Orangeville accompany him.

Trustees Convene

First Annual Meeting of Dufferin County Association.

Resolution Adopted Favouring the Establishment of an Agricultural Department.

The first annual meeting of the recently formed Dufferin County Trustees Association was held in Shelburne last Thursday. There were two sessions, one in the afternoon in the Council Chamber and the other at night in the Town Hall. The afternoon meeting was attended by about fifty trustees, the great majority of whom represented rural schools. Rev. J. R. Bell, of Laurel, President of the Association, occupied the chair. Mr. J. J. Tilley, Inspector of Model Schools, Prof. A. F. McCreary, of Guelph Agricultural College, Mr. J. H. Laughton, of Parkhill, one of the Trustees repretatives on the Advisory Board, and local speakers addressed the meetings.

After bidding those present a hearty welcome to the meeting, the President referred to the work in connection with the organizing of the Association. The Dufferin Association, he said, differed from other Trustees Associations in the Province in that it included High as well as Public and urban as well as rural school boards. Mr. Bell spoke at some length in favor of the establishing of an Agricultural Department connected with one of the High or Continuation Schools of the County. The Government would make an annual grant of $1200 toward the expenses, the County would contribute another $500 and the municipality in which the Department was established would contribute whatever further sum might be required to defray the running expenses. It would be the duty of the teacher in charge of this Department to visit various points throughout the County from time to time and instruct the farmers on agricultural topics. In that way the Department would be a benefit to the entire County. The expense, Mr. Bell thought, would be overbalanced by the benefits which the farmers and their sons would derive. He would like an expression of opinion on the matter from the Trustees Association. Passing on to the theme of general education, the President maintained that present day education was becoming more and more practical. What was sought was to equip the boys and girls for the practical duties and responsibilities of life. The Trustees of the County and particularly of the rural districts had been at a great disadvantage in the past through not being brought closely into contact with the Education Department. Associations, such as the one now in session, should go far toward remedying this defect.

The following Nominating Committee was appointed :—R. L. Mortimer, Shelburne, Chairman; Thos. Dawson,Orangeville; Stewart Tate, Grand Valley; Wm. Tate, East Luther; Wm. Fines, East Garafraxa; John Ellis, Amaranth; George Little, Mono; Thos. Jennings, Mulmur; Jas. Johnston, Melancthon.

The statement of the Secretary-Treasurer, Mr. E. G. Hill, of Earnscliffe, showed an expenditure of $18.95 and a balance of $17.05 in the treasury. 30 schools had joined the Association. Several others joined during the meeting.

Messrs. G. R. Rutherford and Geo. Little, two of the delegates to the last meeting of the Ontario Educational Association, gave a verbal report of the proceedings. Mr. Rutherford spoke of the inception of the Educational Association in 1851, traced its growth and increasing influence in shaping the educational policy of the Province and discussed briefly some of the topics considered at the last meeting. Dr. Pyne, Minister of Education,he declared,should go down in history as the special friend of the public schools. Continuation schools and the consolidated school system had been approved by the Trustees section "The Trustees of Ontario can have anything they want," declared Mr. Rutherford. "The Government," he added, "is only too glad to help them."

Speaking of the attendance at the Educational Association meeting Delegate George Little averred that the representatives of those who paid the taxes were weak in numbers, while the representatives of those who got the taxes were strong in numbers. Mr. Little held that Public School pupils should have some certificate of qualification and advanced a number of arguments against the introduction of compulsory military training into the schools. Mr. Little also declared that he was opposed to pensions for teachers.

J. H. Laughton, of Parkhill, who delivered a vigorous address, in which he frequently hit out straight from the shoulder, maintained that the educational work needed in Ontario at the present time was work in the Public Schools. The standard of the Public Schools ought to be raised, so that pupils could remain there longer and receive a better training. Toronto University was overcrowded with students, because of students who should be in the High Schools and Collegiates a couple of years longer and the High Schools were overcrowded with young students who should remain in the Public Schools one or two years longer. There should be no distinction between rural and urban school trustees. Both classes were public school trustees and as such were equally interested in the improvement of the public school system. It was part of the educational policy of the late Ontario Government to consider the public school a stepping stone to the High School and the High School a stepping stone to the University. What should be aimed at was to make the Public School education complete in itself, because over ninety per cent of the children of the Province would not have the opportunity of attending the High Schools or Colleges. To this and Mr. Laughton advocated a Public School certificate or diploma, that would enable the possessor to say that he was a graduate of the Public Schools of Ontario. Mr. Laughton recommended a system of physical inspection.

Inspector Tilley and Prof. McCreary spoke briefly, the latter mainly in explanation of the proposal to establish an Agricultural Department in connection with one of the Schools of the County. Mayor McKitrick, of Orangeville, and Mr. W. L. Smith, editor of the Weekly Sun, also made short addresses.

After some general discussion Trustee Murdy moved that the Dufferin Trustees Association ask the Provincial Government to take steps to establish a Department of Agriculture at some central point in the County of Dufferin. The motion was carried unanimously.

The report of the Nominating Committee was adopted by a unanimous vote. The report recommended the following officers for the ensuing year :—

President—Rev. J. R. Bell, Laurel.

1st Vice-President—John A. Best, Whitfield.

2nd Vice-President—John S. Wallace, Black's Corners.

Secretary-Treasurer—E. G. Hill, Whitfield.

Directors—Chas. McArthur, East Luther; Wm. Fines, East Garafraxa; John Sproule, Amaranth; Oliver Sproule, Mono; Robt. Murphy, Mulmur; Wm. Stone, Melancthon; Stewart Tate, Grand Valley; Geo. Rutherford, Shelburne; C. R. Wheelock, Orangeville.

Messrs. E. G. Hill and George Little were appointed delegates to the Ontario Educational Association.

The evening meeting, which was held in the Town Hall, was attended by perhaps 200 people. Rev. J. R. Bell, President of the Association, was again the Chairman.

Mr. J. J. Tilley addressed the meeting on school law, laying stress on the increased training required for teachers. He held that all other professions required a higher standard as the country developed : medicine, pharmacy, engineering and the ministry and felt assured that no parent would wish to have a second or third rate teacher for his children, even in order to pave the way for some individuals to obtain certificates easily. The individual was not considered before the general weal. Mr. Tilley quoted figures to show that there was no danger of a scarcity of teachers, as the crucial time of the change—the six months just closing—was the severest test and it had been met. There were plenty of teachers for Ontario and hundreds upon hundreds for the West annually. Taking up the question of grants, the speaker showed that provision had been made to pay increased salaries and proved this by statistics. Mr. Tilley's address was very interesting throughout.

Prof. McCreary, of Guelph, gave an interesting paper on the relation of the Agricultural College to the students and outlined the work of the past three years in that direction. He supplemented the preceding speaker's statistics to show the great importance of the education of children from the rural districts, who were the coming heirs to millions worth of land, implements and live stock.

Mr. J. H. Laughton, of Parkhill, followed with a charge against trustees for meanness in educational matters. Many of them came back for re-election with a record of having hired the cheapest teacher possible, purchased the worst wood in the section and saved all the soap and scrubbing water. He would not lay this charge to the people of Shelburne for he and Prof. McCreary had visited the local school and grounds and had come away convinced that there was not another continuation school in the Province (and he had visited most of the larger ones) equal to it for all-round up-to-dateness. Our children, said Mr. Laughton, are all we have to live for. Without the children the rest of the world might as well be dead. The Government did well to introduce compulsory salaries. This step had been the means of resurrecting the trustees. Every County should be compelled to form a Trustees Association. Dufferin was one out of four or five Counties only that had organized and was the only County that included both High School and Public School representatives. Mr. Laughton thought there should be a Public School diploma for the ninety-five per cent children, who never to go a High School. The speaker was vigorous as well as practical and his address was well received.

In the absence of Reeve Babe, Dr. Campbell, ex-reeve, gave a brief address of welcome. Principal Langford, of the Shelburne School, who was called on for an address, regretted that the attendance was not larger. He thought more trustees would have been present had the salary question been to the fore.

Mr. Hall's Octette Club, which is supplying music for garden parties at outside and inside points, gave a couple of excellent selections.

The meeting was brought to a close with votes of thanks to the speakers followed by the singing of the National Anthem.

STONE THROWING CAME HIGH.

Last Saturday Fred Rogers had a trunk taken to the station by George White, the bus man. Rogers did not put up the small fee charged, and proceeded to throw stones at Mr. White. Rogers was not a very good shot, and several stones hit one of the dray horses. Then Mr. White got hot, and got the Chief who arrested Rogers and put him in the dungeon in the Town Hall block. After a short time in the cell, Rogers was brought before P. M. Pattullo. Several of the stones were produced as exhibits, and the court imposed a fine of one dollar and costs or ten days.

MRS. WILLIAM LINDSAY.

Mrs. Catharine Lindsay, wife of Mr. William Lindsay, lot 13, 5th line, east, Caledon, passed away quite unexpectedly yesterday morning. MR. JOHN REID.

Mr. John Reid, a resident of East Garafraxa township for forty years or upwards, passed away at his home, lot 1, con. 19, on Tuesday, after a comparatively short illness. The deceased was born in Argyleshire, Scotland, on December 25th, 1824 and was therefore in his 85th year when overtaken by death. He came to this country over fifty years ago and about ten years later settled on the farm on which he died. He is survived by a widow and a family of three sons and two daughters. The latter are Arch Reid, a farmer in Erin, John, San Francisco, Cal.; Mrs. Duncan Conley, North Erin, and Dougal and Miss Flora at home. The deceased was a splendid type of the honest, sturdy and hard-working pioneers, who first peopled this section of Ontario and to whom the province owes so much of its present prosperity. He was a staunch Presbyterian and a Conservative in politics. A kindly neighbor and an honest, God-fearing man his memory will be long cherished by the people of the neighborhood. The funeral will be held from his late home to Greenwood Cemetery at two o'clock this (Thursday) afternoon.

GRAY VS. MORRISON.

Plaintiff's Appeal to the Divisional Court Dismissed with Costs.

Verdict of Orangeville Jury Sustained.

On Thursday last before the Divisional Court at Osgoode Hall, Toronto, comprised of Chief Justice Sir William Glenholme Falconbridge, Honorable Justices Britton and Riddell, a motion was made by way of appeal by Mr. Gideon Grant, Counsel for Mrs. William C. Gray, to set aside a judgment in an action brought against Jeremiah Morrison, the well-known propietor of the Dufferin House, which was tried at the Spring Assizes here last April before Mr. Justice Clute and a jury when the action was dismissed with costs. The case attracted considerable attention at the time of the trial. It was alleged the husband of the plaintiff died from injuries inflicted by Morrison some months previously. The trial occupied the attention of the Court for some time and many witnesses were examined. The judge made a most impartial charge, and the jury after a short consultation found in favor of the defendant, a verdict which was accepted by the general public as being in accord with the evidence.

The Divisional Court has now sustained the verdict of the Court of Assize, and dismissed the appeal with costs payable by Mrs. Gray. This ends a lawsuit which has occasioned the defendant great expense, but seems to have vindicated him and the Coronor's jury which enquired into the death of the unfortunate young man. At the previous trial, H. L. Drayton, K.C., with J. L. Island,appeared for Mr. Morrison, while on the appeal G. H. Watson, K.C., with Mr. J. L. Island acted for the defendant.

THE BURDEN OF A NATION'S DRINK-BILL.

Some interesting comments bearing on the economic phase of the drink question are furnished by Sir George White, a member of the British Parliament, in an article appearing in a current issue of a home magazine. "I believe," states the writer, "that the temperance cause is a fundamental one, and is at the root of social and political reform in this country. Mr. Gladstone's terrible words, that the evils of the drink traffic were greater than those of war, pestilence, and famine combined, I believe to be literally true. Nothing has such a serious influence on the trade of the country, and I believe that the resuscitation of activity of all kinds of useful manufactures and the securing of a fair wage for the great mass of our artisans would be accomplished more easily and effectually by a reduction in our expenditure for drink than by any other means. Drink costs more than our total taxation, and more than the total rent of all the houses, shops, and hotels in the country. It restrains our demand for commodities, because of its small wages fund, more than if we were deprived of our whole colonial trade and our colonies ceased to purchase in our markets, for it lessens the purchasing power of the nation by £70,000,000 and gives nothing in return. But the monetary side of the question is its least evil side. It is the greatest black spot on our civilization, and not only hinders the progress of every good thing, but aggravates the effects of every evil thing."

IN AGONY WITH PILES.

Mr. G. W. Cornell, with the Shaw Mining Co. St. Catharines, Ont., writes: "For six years I was a victim of itching, protruding piles and was in dreadful agony day and night. Doctors were unable to help me, and I was about as miserable as any creature could be. My druggist advised me to try Dr. Chase's Ointment, which I did and obtained relief from the first box and complete cure with the second. PROFANITY AMONG BOYS.

A matter which, in the past few weeks, has been engaging much of the editorial space of the local newspaper of this section of the Province, is the increasing prevalence of the use of profanity among small boys. One exchange declares that the constant use of oaths in the conversation of small boys is, in its town, becoming disgustingly common. This is, certainly, a most undesirable state of affairs, and sufficient incentive to excite the press with every other available influence, to co-operate in checking this evil and in obliterating it if possible.

Here, from what we have been able to gather, while unseemly language is frequently heard from comparatively young fellows, the boys of Arthur are not addicted to the use of profanity to the alarming extent, which one would gather, is the case elsewhere. The habitual use of oaths, in ordinary conversation, is useless and, at the same time, a foolish and disgusting practice. The surest way to check and limit the practice is for parents to see that the habit is not adopted by their sons, when they are but boys.

The old apostolic injunction, "let your conversation be yea, yea, and nay, nay," was, indeed, a sure guide to the accomplishment of pleasing and profitable intercourse.

The above injunction would also preclude another detriment to the purity of every-day intercourse, known as slang. This, however, is not confined to the conversation of boys which is a more urgent incentive for its immediate eradication. With the former evil, less wicked though it may be, a prolonged lingo of the most modern and approved slang, glibly tittered by those who are not of the boy sex, is generally equally objectionable.—Arthur Enterprise.

CONNOR.

The home of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Young was the scene of a very happy event on Wednesday, June 16th, when their oldest daughter, Miss Annie Mabel, was united in marriage to Mr. Joseph H. Pettitt, also of Connor. The silken knot was tied by Rev. Chas. Langford, of Palgrave, at the hour of 3 o'clock in the presence of about sixty guests. The wedding march was played by Mrs. Langford. The bride, who was neatly gowned in white swiss batiste, trimmed with Normandy valenciennes lace, baby ribbon and insertion with veil of white chambray net and lillies of the valley, entered the drawing room on the arm of her father and took her place under an arch of evergreens, prettily decorated with spirea, redbell and snowballs. The room was tastefully decorated with red, white and blue bunting. The groom was supported by Mr. Eddie McClelland, of Palgrave, and the bride was attended by Miss Lizzie Dunnan, a cousin of the groom, who was gowned in white silk mulle trimmed with valenciennes insertion and ribbon and carried a bouquet of pink and white carnations and smilax. The flower girls, the bride's little twin sisters, Eveline and Adeiram, were dressed in white net over pink mercerized mulle, trimmed with pink ribbon, and carried bouquets of pink carnations and ferns. The bride's little brother, Dalton, made a pretty little page and carried the ring on a Bible. After the ceremony the bride and groom led the way to the dining room, which was festooned in pink and white bunting, and sweet alsmine, snowballs and white lilacs. Here a very dainty wedding repast was served. The presents received by the bride were very numerous and included the following:—cheques for handsome sums from the bride's father, Mrs. Dunn and Mr. and Mrs. Robert Parker; a raincoat from the bride's mother; a parlor clock, Mr. Eddie and Miss Stella McClelland; a silver bread tray, satin engraved and basket of flowers, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Guest; a crystal lemonade set, Mr. Wm. and Miss Campbell; a cocoa jar, Mr. and Mrs. E. Sloan; cold meat fork, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Sloan; three piece coffee set, Mr. George and Miss Emma Chapman; half dozen silver knives, Mr. and Mrs. Thos. Elliott; dining room lamp, Master Willie Langford; pearl handled parasol, Misses Charlotte and Alma Young; one dozen dinner plates, Master Wellington Langford; 2 pair fancy pepper and salt dusters, Misses Eveline and Adrianne Young; glass cake plate, Master Arnold Young; half dozen china egg cups, Dalton Young. The bride's evening dress was blue satin de chene and her going away suit green panama cloth with white silk waist and hat to match. The young couple left on the morning train to visit friends in Michigan and other points and after a short trip will make their home on lot 6, 4th line, Adjala, where they will be at home to their many friends.

The groom's present to the bride was a gold locket and chain set with brilliants and emeralds, to the bridesmaid a gold crescent brooch set with brilliants and to the grooms man a tie pin set with an opal.

POOR HEARTS.

Poor hearts who never heard the gaunt wolf's cry!
Poor souls who have not tasted misery;
Sad, sad that pain and grief should pass you by Real sorrow with her tender ministry!
Oh barren lives devoid of all that makes
The perfect fulness that God meant for you!
How hollow are your heart's wherein there wakes
No sob, no sound, no cry, the long years through!
How much wondrous were the wild far sky
If gray clouds never came to hide its light.
I pity you whom poverty passed by
You who have never stumbled down the night.

CAMILLA.

On Friday evening, June 11th, our annual Garden Party took place and was a huge success. A baseball match between our invincible nine and the Mono Centre team was one of the strong features. The locals won by the rather decisive score of 9 to 2. Our latest import acted as umpire and although his decisions were in the main fair (for which there is a very good reason) yet his remarks and retorts to evil questions asked were decidedly "spunky." We give Mono Centre credit for letting such things go unheeded, for being in the arena ourselves we can understand what it meant. We want another game with Mono Centre and bear no malice to our local rivals, but at the same time we must admit it was our boys' superior playing that won the game. Surely no one will say that crude sarcasm and vain "swish" is tolerated on the highway to popularity, but possibly our warning is too late. We would advise our subject to at once buy a through ticket to oblivion and to set out at once for his destination.

Are Camilla's fondest hopes to be dashed to pieces? The pet fad "the airship craze," is almost a thing of the past. On a few minor trial trips the "McGinty" has proved a miserable failure and the management have decided it is not a good investment and will shortly have it taken to pieces and will use the parts of it to reinforce the old bellows in the blacksmith shop.

ALTON.

Mr. and Mrs. R. L. McKenzie left last Friday to spend a few days with friends in Cannington.

Mrs. E. D. Barber left Tuesday for a visit to friends in Toronto.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Culligan, of Toronto, are spending their holidays with Mr. and Mrs. James Culligan here.

Mrs. Bishop, of Hamilton, has been visiting her mother, Mrs. Myers, for the past two weeks.

A very pretty wedding took place at the home of Mrs. W. J. Reid, Alton, on Tuesday afternoon, June 15tn, when her daughter, Edith, was united in marriage to Mr. George Alexander. The ceremony was performed by Rev. G. W. Rose, Presbyterian minister. The bride, looking very pretty, entered the room leaning on the arm of her uncle, Mr. John Smith, to the strains of the wedding march, played by Miss Maggie Dean and took her place directly under an arch of evergreens. After the ceremony the guests to the number of fifty sat down to a sumptuous wedding repast served in the dining room. The tables were decorated in pink and white. The bride and groom left in the evening amid showers of rice to spend a few days with friends in Laurel. Among the guests from a distance were noticed Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Hunter, The Maples; Dr. and Mrs. A. J. Hunter, Orangeville, Mr. and Mrs. John Smith, Black's Corners; Mr. and Mrs. Ewing, Laurel; Mr. and Mrs. Henry Madill, Streetsville; Miss Annie Reid, Toronto; and Miss Lizzie Reid, New Hamburg.

Dr. Algie, of Toronto, spent Sunday with friends here.

WHITTINGTON.

The Whittington Branch of the Women's Institute will hold a meeting at the home of Mrs. S. Cruikshank on Tuesday, June 29th, at 2 o'clock. Topics: "Bread Making." "Green Salads" and "Canning Strawberries."

We are glad to be able to note that Mr. W. T. Leader, one of our well-known residents, has come successfully through the trying ordeal of having to face the charge of misappropriating certain funds belonging to Clark & Hannah, Orangeville grain merchants, with whom Mr. Leader was employed as weighmaster in their grain elevator at Crombie's station. After laying the information, and hearing Mr. Leader's manly and straightforward explanation of any seeming inaccuracies that existed, the Orangeville men found themselves in the difficult position of having nothing wherewith to substantiate the serious charge they had laid. In the end they decided to abandon the charge, withdrew their complaint, agreed to pay all court costs and also to pay Mr. Leader the balance he claimed on wages. Needless to say the whole community rejoices in the complete vindication of Mr. Leader's character. He has always borne a good reputation here and everybody would have been surprised had he been implicated in any crooked work.

The Whittington Beef Ring has resumed operations for the season. John Staveley is giving general satisfaction as butcher. There seems difficulty, however, in procuring suitable cattle.

Mr. W. T. Leader completed a bargain a short time ago for the purchase of 180 acres of land from Geo. Morby, of Maple Grove, paying $7,000. Mr. Leader is now the owner of 680 acres of land. This with his other interests makes him a very busy man.

WEAK, TIRED GIRLS

Will Find Health and Strength Through Dr. Williams' Pink Pills.

There is a time in the life of every girl when the strain upon her blood becomes too great; when she grows weak; has headaches and backaches; when dizziness seizes her and she becomes extremely miserable. That is the time of life she needs a tonic—a medicine that will not fail to enrich her blood and give her strength to withstand the changes through which she is passing. Such a tonic is Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People. They have raised thousands of growing girls out of the depths of misery and despair to a full enjoyment of good health and strength. Among those who have found good health through these Pills is Miss Suddard of Haldimand, Que., concerning whose case her mother writes as follows:—"Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have been a great benefit to my daughter who was weak and miserable. She was pale, easily tired and was bothered with indigestion. The use of the Pills has brought back her health, and made her strong and active. I am very grateful for what this wonderful medicine has done for her."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are the greatest blood builder known to medical science. That is why they cure anaemia, rheumatism, heart palpitation, indigestion, neuralgia, etc. That is why they are of such value to women and girls during the changes through which they pass from girlhood to maturity. The Pills are sold by all medicine dealers or direct by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Mr. Charles McGowan, a well-known resident of this neighborhood, and Miss Mary L. Bennington, youngest daughter of Mr. Henry Bennington, were quietly married at the manse on Wednesday afternoon, June 16th. Rev. J. R. Bell tied the silken knot. The happy couple, who have the best wishes of the community in their matrimonial venture, have gone on a trip to Vancouver. It is whispered that there is a possibility that they will make their home in the fast growing Western metropolis.

The home of Mr. and Mrs. John Smith, of Black's Corners, was the scene of a festive event on Wednesday afternoon of last week, the occasion being the marriage of their daughter, Miss Jemima, to Mr. John Peterson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Peterson. About 150 guests witnessed the ceremony, which was performed by Rev. J. R. Bell. The bride, who was prettily gowned, was attended by her sister, Maggie, and the groom was supported by Mr. Fred Hammond. The wedding gifts which were numerous and very handsome, evidenced the popularity of the young couple and the esteem of their many friends. The marriage took place at 5.30 o'clock and was followed by a sumptuous wedding repast. The evening was then happily spent in dancing, music and other amusements. At the close of the festivities the young couple drove to their home, lot 6, 5th line, Amaranth, whither they are accompanied by the congratulations and hearty good wishes of a host of friends.

BLYTHE NOW WANTS TO HANG.

He is Indignant Because a Respite Has Been Granted—Not a Model Prisoner.

There was a big difference between the manner in which Blythe, the Agincourt murderer who is in jail at Toronto, received the notice of his first respite and the manner in which he received the second respite. On May 12 he was told that he would be allowed to live until June 17. He wept like a child, and when he had recovered from this he grew restive, and complained about the cruelty of prolonging his agony. He did not wish to spend his life in Kingston, and thought it a hardship that he had not been hanged.

"GOD, ISN'T IT GOOD"

Thursday when Mr. Kirby, an intimate friend, accompanied by Rev. Canon Farncombe and Rev. Dr. Chambers, the jailer, waited on Blythe, he was in a most receptive mood.

He was prepared for anything, and when informed that a further respite had been granted until October 1, in order that his case might be brought before the court of appeal on September 23, held up his hands and exclaimed, "Good God, isn't that good."

INDIGNANT AT RESPITE

In a few minutes the full meaning dawned on him—that he might spend that much more time in jail under the constant eyes of death watches, and be hanged after all.

Blythe then grew indignant, and didn't hesitate to say that "This whole business was rotten."

Blythe has no desire to spend his days in Kingston. He has stated that he must remain there until he is old, and if he ever got out his friends would have nothing to do with him, and that the finger of scorn would constantly be pointed his way, directing attention to the fact that he murdered his wife, and spent his life in Kingston, while the stain on the name of his children would be much more pronounced than if he should die at once and be forgotten by his dear little children.

NOT SO RELIGIOUS

There is not the same religious devotion in Walter Blythe as there was prior to the first date set for his execution. Up to that time he was obedient, repentant and philosophical, and seemed to take consolation out of the fact that he would soon be dead and his suffering as well as the remorse of his family and friends, would be at an end. The respite changed the man. His conversations, it is said, have been of a different character, and his thoughts diverge along other lines. He has said his prayers, but not with the same zest.

BLYTHE IN A RAGE

Blythe reached the condition, on two occasions, when he was so furious with the treatment accorded him at the hands of the authorities that he took a fall out of a couple of the guards. He seemed to regard himself more in the light of a patient who was paying for his keep in a rest establishment, rather than a man doomed to die for a brutal crime.

Blythe did not hesitate to express himself that the hanging at anytime was the proper thing. He expected it, but was doomed to one disappointment after another.

Suggestive Questions on the Sunday School Lesson by Rev. Dr. Linscott for the International Newspaper Bible Study Club.

June 27th, 1909.

Temperance Lesson. Rom. xiii : 8-14.

Golden Text—Put ye on the Lord Jesus Christ.—Rom. xiii : 14.

Verse 8.—Is it always sinful to go into debt, when you have no visible means of paying it?

Is it right, or wrong, to go into debt when you have nothing to pay with, if your creditor knows your circumstances?

Is a business man who has honestly failed in business and given up all he has to his creditors, under moral obligation to pay the balance of the debt, if he makes enough money to do so out of future business?

Under modern business conditions, and the law of love and righteousness, when wholesalers sell on time, or give an adequate discount for cash to retailers, why are not the debts of an honest bankrupt retailer, the legitimate loss of his creditors in common with himself?

Wherein consists the folly and sin of a wage-earner in constant work, getting into debt?

Is it the duty of everybody to love everybody, the bad and the good, enemies and friends?

What is the advantage of loving everybody, to ourselves, and to those whom we love?

Verses 9-10—Give reasons, outside of the Bible, that will cover all circumstances, why it is always wrong to disobey these five moral prohibitions.

Must all such acts, as are here forbidden, contravene the law of love to make them sinful; for example, if you had to kill a man who was about to kill one of your loved ones, would that be sinful?

Can an act be wrong that works out for the good of all parties?

Verses 11-12—If you knew you had to die inside of a month, what effect would that have upon your intentions and actions, so far as God is concerned; and if it would change these in the least, does that not prove that you are now living wrong and are in danger?

Most people are morally and spiritually asleep, and many are far into the night; what are the conditions which should suddenly startle such into full consciousness, as to their danger, and their duty?

Verse 13—How is it that the night is the time selected for so many bad deeds?

Should a man ever do a thing which he is ashamed for his best friends and neighbors to know?

Does the popular conscience generally, or always represent God's attitude to a thing; or are there some things God may be pleased with which the community would condemn as wrong, or vice versa?

How is it that bar rooms are generally screened off from the public gaze?

Why is it a crime for a man to get drunk?

Why do most drunkards get drunk in the night, or away from public gaze?

Does the drink habit generally lead to the other four grave evils mentioned in verse thirteen?

Verse 14—What is the sure remedy for the drink habit, and all kindred evils of the flesh?

Does putting on Jesus, always mean putting on strength so we can control all the passions of the body, and the ambitions of the soul?

SHE COULD NOT HOLD A TEACUP.

But Dodd's Kidney Pills Cured Mrs. James H. White.

They Took Away Her Backache, Cured Her Urinary Trouble and Made Her a Well Woman.

Prevelle, Gaspe Co., Que., June 21. (Special).—After suffering for four years from ills, which many a woman knows, and being treated by a doctor who failed to give her relief. Mrs. James H. White, a farmer's wife, living near here, is again a well woman. Dodd's Kidney Pills cured her.

"My trouble started from a strain," Mrs. White states. "I had a pain always across my back and a steady pain in the back of my neck, and I had urinary trouble that caused me a great deal of annoyance.

"For four years I suffered in this way and the doctor I consulted did not do me any lasting good. In the morning I was dizzy and I finally got so nervous I could not hold a cup.

"Then I started to use Dodd's Kidney Pills, and I got relief right from the start. Three boxes cured me completely. To-day I am a well woman."

Mrs. White's troubles were Kidney troubles. So are the troubles of nine out of ten of the suffering women of Canada to-day. That is why Dodd's Kidney Pills always cure them.

ABSCESS PROVED FATAL.

John L. Prior of this place took ill on Monday of last week. A physician was called in a day or so later and the case was diagnosed as appendicitis. On Thursday an operation was attempted by Drs. J. A. Smith, S. T. White and R. W. Rooney, but on making an incision it was found that an abscess had burst and the pus was scattered all through the system. The patient died on Saturday night. Deceased was a young man and was only married a little over a year. He was a son of John Prior of this place. The bereaved family and widow have the sympathy of all in their trouble. The funeral took place on Monday afternoon to Shelburne cemetery and was in charge of the Loyal Orange Association. It was one of the largest funerals that has been seen for some time.—Shelburne Free Press.

SCHOOLS ALL THE YEAR.

In the Old Land they do not altogether agree with our method of closing up the schools in the months of July and August. A despatch states that the Educational Committee of the London County Council has decided upon the formation of classes in the school play grounds for the summer months. It is proposed to establish four types, the first being devoted to delicate pupils from neighboring schools, who are to be of the same standard; the second to pupils drawn from a particular school, and including children from various standards; the third an individual class in the school, each class holding its lessons in the open air in the third, in the shape of a different class every day of the week.

It is not expected that very much additional expenditure will be incurred by these experiments, which are to be made from the beginning of June to the end of October. The present plan is for a kind of open-air school attached to the ordinary day school, as distinct from the regular out-of-doors school, which is held at specially selected houses with extensive grounds situated at Forest Hill, Upper Holloway and Shooter's Hill.

Stock Farmer's Lucky Find

The pleasure he now has in looking after his 250 acre farm.

Life has a new pleasure for the writer of this letter and we shall let him explain why in his own words:

"I could not do a day's work to save my life before I began using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food and Kidney-Liver Pills," writes Mr. Leonard Miller, Canboro, Haldimand Co., Ont., "but these medicines seemed to exactly suit my case and have done wonders for me. Instead of being in misery from pain and suffering, life is now sweet to me and I appreciate good health as I never did before.

"This means a great pleasure to me, for I have a two hundred and fifty acre farm and a large stock to look after. I recommend these medicines because they have cured me and I know they will cure others."

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food is remarkable because of its tonic effect, reconstructing and building up the system by making the blood rich and red.

Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills regulate the action of the liver, kidneys and bowels and ensure healthful digestion. At all dealers or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Toronto.

A PRETTY JUNE WEDDING.

The home of Mrs. M. Coulter, "Emeria Villa," Caledon, was the scene of a very pretty wedding on Wednesday, June 9th at half-past twelve o'clock, when her daughter, Ida M., was united in marriage to Mr. Adam Beamish, youngest son of Mr. Francis Beamish, of Erindale. The ceremony was performed by Rev. G. W. Rose, of Alton, under an arch of evergreens, decorated with apple-blossoms and a bell of white roses. The wedding March was rendered in a most acceptable manner, by Miss Jennie McNichol, of Erin, cousin of the bride. The bride who was given away by her brother, Mr. Robt. Coulter, was attired in a lovely gown of white Habutai silk, trimmed with pearls, embroidered Bretonne net and insertion.

A filmy tulle veil, hemmed with pearls, was gracefully arranged over a wreath of orange blossoms and she carried a shower bouquet of bridal roses and lillies of the valley, which, with a sunburst of pearls were the gifts of the groom. She was attended by Miss Eva Davis, of West Toronto, who looked charming in a Princess gown af lavender silk mull, trimmed with Point d'esprit and duchess satin, and large plumed hat to match and carried a shower bouquet of pink roses. The groom was supported by Mr. Selby Evans, of Churchville.

The groom's gift to the bridesmaid was a gold extension bracelet; and to the best man, a pearl tie pin.

After the ceremony and congratulations had been received, the guests, to the number of about one hundred, adjourned to the spacious dining room, where a sumptuous repast, served under the direction of Mrs. Fremlin, of Orangeville, awaited them.

Speeches were given by the following gentlemen: Rev. G. W. Rose, and Messrs. A. Beamish, S. Evans, J. H. Beamish, G. W. Gordon, W. Hull, J. A. McBride, and W. J. Limebeer.

The variety and elegance of the gifts received evinced in some degree the high esteem in which the bride was held by her many friends.

The guests included the relatives and friends from many points,—Toronto, Weston, Islington, Summerville, Erindale, Burnhamthrope, Churchville, Brampton, Erin, Orangeville, Alton, and elsewhere.

The happy couple left on the evening train after being treated to the usual shower of rice, confetti and old slippers for the east, on a short wedding trip, the bride wearing a handsome travelling suit of taupe and large white plumed hat. Their many friends join in wishing them a long and happy wedded life.

POOL OPERATIONS IN MARKET.

One of the strongest indications that the Canadian stock markets are not very far from the top level is that most of the "pools" that have been operating in different stocks have now been dissolved. These "pools" have easily been one of the most important factors in the recent activity and the big advance the Montreal stock market has enjoyed and their operations were as a rule rather deceiving to the public.

The reason why so many pools were operating was that there were a number of deals that the insiders wanted to pull off, and it was in their interests to show that there was a good demand for the stocks of their companies.

For instance there was what was called the "Textile pool," the members of which looked after both Dominion Textile preferred and common stocks with a view of inducing the London crowd to exercise the option they had secured on $2,000,000 of the $5,000,000 of the Textile common stock. The option was for certain amounts of the stock at prices ranging between $60 and $70 a share and in the end the insiders in order to make the $70 option look attractive had to get the stock quite a little above that price. At the same time that this deal was on the company had quite a little difficulty settling different strikes and every little while the threatened trouble among the hands would cause quite a decline in the stock. Finally Textile common after holding for a long time around $65, was boosted to $75 and the news came out that London had practically agreed to take up its last option at $70. The pool had effected its work and when it withdrew its support from the market the stock went off quite quickly.

Then again certain brokerage houses had too large a quantity of certain stocks and they formed little pools in order to facilitate the marketing of it, figuring that the public would come in just as soon as it was noticed that the stock was getting fairly active. Among such pools might be mentioned the "Richelieu pool," the "Montreal Power pool" and the "Illinois Traction preferred pool." Of course as much as possible brokers do not want the public to get on to the fact that there is a pool operating in a stock and try to get their customers to believe that there is a strong public demand for the stock they are interested in putting to a higher level.

The operations of these pools were of course greatly facilitated by the cheap money that has prevailed for some little time past. They are usually organized with an understanding that all profits will be divided pro rata among the members of the pool, while sometimes the pools are simply formed with a view of creating a better demand for some certain issue. In the latter case there is seldom any profit to divide, the brokers simply carrying it out with a view of securing more business later on.

With these pools out of the road there will not be any longer the same endeavor made to put stocks on a higher level, and left to themselves it would not be surprising if quite a few gradually sold off to quite a lower price.—Canadian Courier.

A SCIENTIST'S INDICTMENT OF ALCOHOL.

Scientists are still declaring against the use of alcoholic stimulants. At the recent annual meeting of the American Academy of Political and Social Science, Dr. Charles L. Dana, of New York, charged up to its account at least twelve per cent. of the cases of insanity and marked it as an associative cause in one-third of the cases of paresis. As almost all cases of drunkenness and dipsomania develop in the victim before he is thirty. Dr. Dana argues earnestly for an educational campaign among the young.

WHAT HE WOULD DO.

A guard in South Africa during the late war was questioned as to his knowledge of his duties. "You know your duty here, do you, sentinel?" "Yes, sir." "Well, now, suppose they should open on you with shells and musketry, what would you do?" "Form a line, sir." "What! one man form a line?" "Yes, sir; form a bee line for camp, sir."

HON. DR. MONTAGUE'S ORATORY.

Though Hon. B. Montague, once the silver-tongued orator of Ontario, is seldom heard in his native land, he occasionally is heard at gatherings in cities across the line whither he travels in pursuit of business. Only recently he delighted a newly formed organization of expatriated Canadians in Louisville, Kentucky, who have formed a Maple Leaf Club, with the graceful utterances that used to win votes for the Government in the palmy days of the Conservative party. He touched many themes, and one of his quips on the subject of the suffragettes was not half bad. He said: "The suffragettes have paraded London in daytime with lanterns. Diogenes in his time paraded the streets in the daytime with a lantern. He was looking for a man."

Speaking of the American migration to Western Canada and alluding to the fact that some were dissatisfied, he said: "It is impossible to satisfy some people: they would be dissatisfied if they were to secure a homestead and a pre-emption within the walls of the city whose streets are paved with gold. Their first work would be to secure a release from their homestead duties to listen to the choir, hear Noah tell his marvellous story of the flood, or learn the true inwardness of the story of Jonah and the whale."

In fact, reading his speech one is tempted to wish that Dr. Montague were back at Ottawa once more to enliven the rather prosaic proceedings of the House of Commons.

ENGULPHED IN RUIN.

(By A Banker.)

a recent article of this series ribing the beauties of the scen- in the neighborhood of that ill- l city, Messina, attention was d to the published reports of great earthquake which had so lessly devastated that doomed on. An inspection of the place es that words have utterly fail- to give an adequate idea of the espread havoc, and utter over- ow of a great part of the beauti- ul city, and of its opposite neigh- bour Reggio.

The grim and appalling wreck are altogether indescribable. Here a fine church of which all the existence left of its existence is perhaps a por- tion of one of the walls; there the remains of a large building, perhaps a noble's mansion, which appears as though some cyclopean giant had with a mighty axe cleft it in twain from roof to basement; several stor- ies of rooms all exposed to view; some of the furniture left, some hurl- ed to the ground in the midst of a crashing avalanche of masonry and bricks, and great beams of timber, all now piled up in inextricable con- fusion; the end of a piano, or the legs of a table perhaps projecting from the great heap of debris. And perhaps too, alas, beneath it all still lay the decaying corpses of father, or mother, or child, hurled in a moment without warning, with- out premonitory note of alarm, into eternity.

And now until the herculean and augean task of clearing away all that desolation is accomplished, that heterogenous mass of masonry and broken furniture, and woeful ruin is their mausoleum; though with no gravestone other than perhaps a pro- jecting broken column, with no wreath or flowers to decorate the grave except perhaps a few wild flowers already springing up, little patches of beauty in the midst of horror, of ravage, and of grim and piteous wreck.

And so almost all along the coast- line on both sides of the Straits is the same gruesome picture; villages formerly picturesque and beautiful, now almost blotted out of existence; entire districts shattered and anni- hilated; and much of that lovely and attractive spot a melancholy and gruesome devastation.

Truly "in the midst of life we are in death." Happy they who, when the tocsin sounds warning them that for them is no more, have no fear of the wrath to come. For having liv- ed the life of the righteous, and hav- ing cast all their care on their Med- iator and Saviour, who in Gethsem- ane and on Calvary expiated their sins by suffering the retribution due, they are assured, with an absolute certainty, of a mansion in glory be- yond the skies.

In sickness, if a certain hidden nerve goes wrong, then the organ that this nerve controls will also surely fail. It may be a Stomach nerve, or it may have given strength and support to the Heart or Kid- neys. It was Dr. Shoop that first pointed to this vital truth. Dr. Shoop's Restorative was not made to dose the Stomach nor to tempor- arily stimulate the Heart or Kid- neys. That old-fashioned method is all wrong. Dr. Shoop's Restorative goes directly to these failing inside nerves. The remarkable success of this prescription demonstrates the wisdom of treating the actual cause of these failing organs. And it is indeed easy to prove. A simple five or ten days test will surely tell. Try it once, and see! Sold by T. Stev- enson.

LITIGANTS ALL DEAD NOW.

Georgetown Herald: Judgment has just been handed out in the case of Brain vs. Coffen, by J. A. C. Cameron, Official Referee, Osgoode Hall, Toronto. This case was brought some three years ago by the late Mary E. Brain, sole executrix of the Edwin Brain estate, Brewer, of Hornby, against the late H. A. Coffen, hotelkeeper, Georgetown, on an alleged balance of account of some $400. The action has been running now for three years and the original plaintiff, the original defendant and the original referee are all dead. After the action was tried at Brampton on the 21st of December, 1906, it was referred to Neil McLean, official referee, who made his report on the 28th of July, 1907, in favor of the defendant, Coffen. From this report the original plaintiff appealed, and the report was set aside and vacated by order of Mr. Justice Clute, April 19, 1908, who referred the matter back to Mr. McLean. On account of the latter's death, a further order was taken appointing Mr. Cameron as Official Referee to dispose of the matters in question. After the taking of considerable evidence and exhaustive argument, the referee has given his decision finding that there is nothing due by the defendant to the plaintiff, and that all claims have been fully satisfied and paid.

FRENZIED FINANCE.

"James R. Keene told this story illustrative of high finance at the Waldorf," said Edward S. Childs, of New York, to a Washington Herald reporter.

"A Kentucky darkey negotiated a loan of $10 from a local banker, pledging his mule and cart as security.

"'Money is pretty tight,' explained the banker, 'and I shall have to charge you $2.50 now for the use of the $10 for a month.'

"The darkey consented, signed the papers and half an hour later was found by a friend standing in the road scratching his wool with one hand and looking ruefully at the $7.50 held in his other.

"'W'at de matter, Sam?' asked his friend.

"'Oh, dere ain't nodin' de matter, 'cept I knows I'se right. Dat bank man he done charge me $2.50 for $10 a month. I'se right, suh. Fo' if I had'a ast fo' de ten fo' foah months I wouldn't a got nothin'.'"

LARGER MILK YIELDS ARE POSSIBLE.

Why should cow testing be carried on? Mainly because individual cows in the same herd are likely to vary in production about as much as, sometimes much more than, individual cows in different breeds. Then too must be considered the strange variations in milk and fat from day to day even with a cow handled as carefully as possible. Such variations are very apt to be overlooked unless the record is carefully kept. Another point: two cows side by side one gives 20 lbs. milk a day, or 10 lbs. at a milking, the other gives 9 lbs. The difference in weight, or the difference in bulk in the pail, especially if there is a lot of froth on top, is not easily gauged by the ordinary milker. But multiply by the 300 days of a milking period, and it is seen that one cow gives 600 lbs. more milk than the other. Yet the ordinary milker would have said, these two cows give "just about" the same. But is not the extra 600 lb. worth having? Many members of the cow testing associations say that the hired man milks better, with more endeavor to milk clean, if the record hangs before him constantly, and an extra 500 lb. per cow has often been obtained since the introduction of the pencil and ruled sheet. Try it, not simply for the extra milk or fat, but for the immense personal satisfaction in knowing that each cow is being made to do better, to do her best.

SAME TRAIN KILLS THREE

Father and Son Leaped From C.P.R. Train Going at High Speed—Youth Was Killed

Montreal, June 15.—A C.P.R. train running north into the Laurentians was the means of killing two people on Saturday. At Mile End two passengers named Paquette, father and son boarded the train destined for an outing at St. Rose. When they found the train did not stop there they made up their minds to jump. When the train was passing St. Therese the son threw his valise to the platform and leaped, although the train was running thirty-five miles an hour. The father also jumped. The son struck a telegraph pole, bounded back under the wheels and two cars passed over the body. The father was picked up fifty yards away, not badly hurt. He was instantly revived when he saw the plight of his son. Wire was bound above the knees, but the youth died at Notre Dame hospital.

KILLED SMALL CHILD

The train proceeded and at St. Jerome the engineer observed what he took to be a bundle of paper on the track. Just as the train was on it he discovered it to be a two-year-old child. His attempt to reverse was too late and the child was instantly killed. The parents live fifty yards from the track and the bearing in of the body was their first intimation that the child had been in an accident.

This is the third victim by the same train run by the same conductor in the last three days.

SEVEN YEARS AN INVALID

Then She Took "Fruit-a-tives" And is Now Well.

Arnprior, Ont., Nov. 27, 1908.

I was an invalid for seven years from fearful Womb Trouble. I had falling womb, with constant pain in the back and front of my body and all down my legs. There was a heavy discharge and this made me weak, sleepless, restless and miserable. Often I was obliged to be in bed for a month at a time. I was treated by several doctors, but their treatment did me no permanent good.

A few months ago, I was persuaded to try "Fruit-a-tives." I took several boxes, and from the outset of this treatment I was better, the Constipation was cured, and the discharge lessened. I took, for the paleness, several bottles of the Iron Mixture as recommended in the "Fruit-a-tives" book, but I feel that it was "Fruit-a-tives" alone that cured me.

(Mrs.) Eliza Levesque.

Take Mrs. Levesque's advice. Take "Fruit-a-tives" and cure yourself. 50c a box, 6 for $2.50; trial box 25c. At dealers or from Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

WHAT THE WHALE DID.

"The open season is at hand and now all the angling club's tall stories are to be heard," said Commissioner George M. Bowers of the Bureau of Fisheries in Washington.

"I heard a group of anglers boasting and wrangling the other night. A pale, grave man, after listening to them for some time said quietly:

"Gentlemen, did you ever wonder what finally became of the whale that swallowed Jonah?"

"What's the use of wondering about that? Nothing definite known," said a trout fisherman rudely. "Boys," he went on, "she tipped the beam—"

"Look here," the grave man interrupted, "I know what became of that whale."

"Humph! What?" said the trout fisherman.

"For the rest of his life he made a bore of himself telling all the other whales how the largest man he ever caught wriggled loose and got away."—Washington Star.

GOOD, OLD-FASHIONED SPANKING.

There is one form of waoton destruction of property by children which is becoming altogether too prevalent in this village, and which in every person's interest an immediate stop should be put to—we refer to the mutilation and destruction of young shade and ornamental trees and shrubs. The man who sets out a shade tree is a public benefactor, and it is too bad that his work—perhaps several years of care and attention—should go for nought, and the people lose the benefit, in deference to the thoughtless, criminal whim of a child. Whole reams of flapdoodle are being written about the rights of the child, but the best and highest right of the child is to be brought up to respect the rights of others, and there is no better corrective for his wayward impulses than a good old-fashioned spanking.—The Beaver.

SOO CANAL REPAIRS

Navigation May be Resumed on Saturday—Splendid Progress Has Been Made in the Work of Repair

That navigation will probably be practicable by Saturday in the Canadian Soo Canal was the gist of a telegram received last night by Hon. George P. Graham from the superintendent in charge of the repair work.

The telegram said that the work of repairing and cleaning up the lock bottom would be completed by tonight. The movable dam, it is expected, will be raised on Thursday. The opening of navigation will depend on the condition of the bottom outside the lower entrance to the lock, where there is a great deal of debris, and where the dredge is now working. The work of dredging will, it is hoped, be finished on Saturday.

MIDDLE STATES ABOLISHING SALOONS.

One of the important counties of Indiana, whose county seat is Muncie, voted "dry" just recently, with a majority of nearly three thousand. Muncie itself, contrary to the usual custom with towns of this size, voting with the temperance forces. As a result of this favorable vote, 82 saloons are voted out of existence. This makes the 45th of the 90 counties of the state that have declared in favor of prohibiting the saloon. On the following day there was an election in Ross County, Ohio, whose principal city is Chillicothe. The county voted to keep its saloons, but the bulk of the favorable vote was cast by Chillicothe.

HE SALUTED ALL RIGHT.

A second lieutenant recently graduated from Sandhurst, who had just joined his regiment in South Africa, was standing in the market place of an up country town when a grizzled and unshaven old soldier, wearing kharki breeches, a shirt and a campaign hat, stepped up and stood near him. The young soldier turned on him sharply: "Here, you man, did anyone ever teach you how to salute?" "Yes, sir," drawled the trooper, as he glanced at the youngster. "Well, knock your heels together," said the young officer, and the trooper came to attention with the precision of an old soldier. "Now salute," he said, and the trooper's gauntlet came to the rim of his hat and stayed there until the young lieutenant answered it, at the same time cautioning him not to let it happen again, and demanding his name and regiment. Without relaxing his position from attention the old trooper again respectfully saluted and remarked dryly, "My name is———, and I'm Brigadier-General of the Cavalry Brigade."—Westminster Gazette.

FISHING ON SUNDAY

Three Men Fined At Woodstock—Using Net in River

Woodstock, June 15.—Three men appeared in the Police Court before Magistrate Ball this morning, charged with fishing on Sunday last at Pine Pond, a good sized body of water in Blenheim. John Muir, proprietor of the pond, was one. He said he had owned the pond nine years and had only fished there three times. He paid a fine and costs amounting to $9.15. Daniel Stewart of Woodstock was at the pond in company with a young lady, and they had twenty-four fish when the constable interrupted. Stewart paid $7.85. Charles Hunter, who is in the employ of Mr. Muir, was also summoned, and paid $5.15.

Three Tavistock men are to appear in court on Thursday morning, charged with having dragged the River Thames with seine nets.

THE KITCHEN AS A STUDY

Not a thing to be studied, in this case—although the many problems of the kitchen must be studied if the housewife ever hopes to solve them successfully—but instead, a place where the mistress of this most important feature of good housekeeping, may study to her heart's content in comfort and without fear of interruption.

In this era of rapid advancement in all the sciences, whether domestic or exact, the keen and intelligent housewife of today is not content alone in catering to the wants of man or woman, but ponders, as well, over nourishment for the soul. She it is who, during the still "watches" of the day in this, her own sanctum, the kitchen, has before her the latest magazine, or a new book to read and enjoy while certain dishes are in the embryonic stage.

Reading in the kitchen takes away all anxiety from the mind, and aside from its educational feature this fact in its favor, alone, should prove a bonus to the housekeeper, for anxiety and worry are harbingers of those dreaded signs of age—wrinkles.

To some women, who regard all housework as drudgery because they have seen fit to make it so, and liken it to slavery in a new and different form, the kitchen is a hated department of the house. To such a woman, the rough edges of housework will always be rough. Her kitchen will be neglected and looked upon by her as a dreary place to leave just as soon as the meals have been served. It will be cold and bare with not a vestige of comfort in sight. But all this need not be.

A little rocker here, a footstool there; a table with books and magazines and the kitchen will take on a different appearance. She can read and wax in wisdom and learning during her spare moments, and should an unexpected caller make an appearance at an unconventional hour, the "lady of the house" need feel no dismay at being found in her cosy little kitchen, with all its good in literature waiting to be devoured, while engaged in providing the best possible in cookery.

EXPLORING ONE'S IGNORANCE.

"Why, I can learn every year," an elderly man was once heard to ejaculate, in a spasm of open-minded humility, as someone showed him a new wrinkle in doing a familiar turn of work. Presumably, he meant that he could learn about one new thing a year. Needless to say, he was not a well-educated or widely-informed man, else he would have said, "I can learn every day."

The men who regard their knowledge of any subject as self-sufficient, are usually the ones who know the least about it. They do not know enough to realize how little they know. They have never explored the depths and recesses of their own ignorance. They grope about with a dim lantern of light in a vast cave of unexplored and all-unsuspected treasures of knowledge, thinking, because they see as far as the light sheds, that they have penetrated to the outermost bounds of their particular spheres. It is hard to instruct such a person, since it is so difficult for him to realize that there is anything in his line left to learn. Let him once get interested in his subject or occupation, and begin reaching out for more knowledge, and he will find that each step leads to a wider zone beyond, and, from a state of self-satisfaction, he soon comes to despair of ever exhausting the store of knowledge, and makes up his mind that he will do well, indeed, if he learns a little about a very few things. And so far from being surprised at discovering one or two new points a year, he expects to learn a great many every day. This is the experience of observant, open-minded, studious readers and thinkers. The more they learn, the more they find there is to learn—Farmers' Advocate

TREAT EDITOR LIKE A FELON.

In Tattered Clothes, Behind Double Bars, and All for "Contempt of Court."

Montreal, June 17th.—(Special.)—The Hon. P. Landry, senator of the Dominion has been visiting Jules Fournier, editor of Le Nationalist, who is confined in the Quebec jail, having been sentenced to three months for contempt of court. The senator says:

"I asked for the prisoner, and he appeared behind a double iron grating which separates by four feet the assassins and the thieves from their relatives and their friends. In the lighted prison cage, which one traverses to reach the grating in question, an ordinary prisoner talks with the members of his family without any restraint whatever; but Fournier, guilty of a newspaper offence, is left without mercy behind a double grating in company with two other prisoners, who were also receiving a visit from several relatives.

"As three people only can sit in front of the grating, I was obliged to trouble the conversation of the two other prisoners, as they were forced by the circumstances to interfere with mine, for the reason that the distance separating Fournier and myself was so great we had to converse in a very loud tone to be at all understood.

"Fournier was dressed in the ordinary prison garb, a sort of blue drilling, barred trousers, and a ten-cent straw hat, all being worn to a fringe, having been used by several prisoners who had used the clothing before him.

"I remember some years ago, when Mathurin, who had been condemned to death was awaiting his execution, of having paid a visit to the miserable man Mr. Bernatchese being governor of the jail. He personally brought me to the prisoner, whom I could see close at hand, and I also remember that he wore his own clothing. In comparing, therefore, the treatment inflicted upon Fournier and those who visit him with that accorded to Mathurin, it will be easily understood what sentiments such a visit produces and if I do not give expression to my indignation here it is because I do not want him to suffer for the just indignation because of the prosecutions to which he is made to suffer to-day.

"He, however, supports it all bravely, convinced that he had right on his side when he denounced the administration of justice; he has no desire to lessen the value of his act in bowing before those who threatened him with imprisonment. He entered his cell holding his head high. He underwent the ignominious treatment of being made the victim of an insulting inspection like a vile criminal, and after they had stripped him of everything he possessed, they took away his clothing and replaced them with the garb of a vulgar bandit. He endured, however, all these humiliations with the serene conscience of a man who had done his duty. From his prison cell he will walk out carrying high his head."

"Fournier neither asks pity or favor. In fact he has nothing to ask from the reign of despotism and terror which exists all over the Province of Quebec. Fournier will do his time, and others will suffer like him, but the day will come when the cup will run over, and the people will do justice to themselves.

LOCAL OPTION.

Orangeville Pastors Discourse on Liquor Evil.

It Is the Citizens Themselves Who Are Responsible for Existence of the Traffic.

By arrangement the pastors of the Protestant Churches of the town delivered temperance sermons on Sunday night. The discourses bore particularly on local option and the line of argument adopted was intended to press home the idea that it is the people themselves who are responsible for the existence and continuance of the liquor traffic and its attendant evils. The Banner has pleasure in presenting short reports of the sermons as follows :—

ST. ANDREW'S CHURCH.

The pastor, Rev. W. M. Morris, addressed a large congregation from the text, "Woe unto him that giveth his neighbor drink." The message of the text, Mr. Morris held, was applicable to all ages and all places. It was as true to-day as when it was first delivered. In a democratic country like Canada it was the people who ruled in general, provincial and municipal affairs. There was a wide distinction between the hotel, which was both useful and necessary, and the barroom which was neither. Any person who wished to keep hotel was free to do so, but the law prohibited every person from keeping barrooms and selling liquor except a special class, who were granted the right by license. No person could keep a saloon unless the people gave permission. It was the people themselves who licensed the liquor traffic and were responsible for its existence. The man on the other side of the bar had a perfect right to be in the business, because he had been licensed to carry it on. What people should say was "my barroom" and "my saloon," for they were partners in the business. In the eyes of the just Judge the man behind the bar, or in the liquor business, might be a better citizen than the man who disclaimed all responsibility for the traffic. The question for every citizen, and especially every Christian citizen, to consider was, "Are you going to continue in the business or are you not?" The fact that it was thought necessary to restrict the traffic showed what was thought of it. If the liquor trade was a good thing for the community why license it at all? Why not throw the doors wide open and encourage the selling of liquor. It was admittedly an evil and if the barroom stood on its own merits it would not be long tolerated. It was contended by some people that local option would injure business. If the town of Orangeville depended on the liquor traffic for its business welfare, all the speaker had to say was, "poor Orangeville." Why should local option injure business? Did it benefit business to have people spending their earnings over the bar, and buying their groceries, clothing and other necessaries on credit in the stores? Mr. Morris quoted statistics to show that local option had not injured business in Owen Sound or interfered with the material progress of the town. Local option could be enforced because there was all the machinery of the license act back of the by-law. It was argued that local prohibition of the traffic would be an interference with personal liberty. The individual, it was held, had a right to drink if he so chose. Individual liberty was curtailed in every direction. People were not allowed to say everything they wished or to do everything they wished. What should be considered was not the liberty of the individual, but the welfare of the community. The barroom could not exist without boys to drink and contract the drink habit. If there were citizens who believed that the barroom should be allowed to continue, then why not have the consistency to offer their boys? "The barroom," said Mr. Morris, impressively, "has to have some boys. It has as good a right to your boys as to any others."

ST. MARK'S CHURCH.

In St. Mark's Church Rev. G. A. Rix gave an eloquent and forceful sermon on temperance lines to a large congregation. In his introductory remarks he likened the temperance movement of the present day to the wonderful invention of wireless telegraphy. As nothing could impede the transmission of a message by "wireless," so there was nothing that could stand in the way of the great tide of temperance, that was sweeping over the country. In relation to temperance men might be divided into three classes—the total abstainer, the moderate drinker and the immoderate man. No one could tell when the moderate drinker might drop into the ranks of the intemperate. It was best that we should get as far away from the evil as possible. The most important factor in dealing with all questions of this kind was to find a plan or system that would provide the greatest amount of good to the greatest number of people. He was not prepared to say absolutely that local option was the best thing for a community. It had worked well in many places and it might work well in Orangeville. Temperance people should at least give it a trial. If local option was to be a success in any community it must be backed up by strict enforcement of the law and inspection by government officials. If the law was rigidly carried out, both by hotelmen and by those not engaged in the business of selling liquor, there would not be any need for local option or similar measures. It could not be claimed, however, that the license law had been observed to the letter even in Orangeville. Evils had arisen out of the existing system, and therefore some other method of dealing with the drink evil must be tried. Whether local option would work the improvement that its advocates claimed it would remained to be seen, but at any rate the measure should receive a fair trial and then be judged on its merits and the benefits it had brought the community. Mr. Rix stated that he was entirely in accord with the three-fifths clause. To his way of thinking it ensured a greater preponderance of public influence on the side of the enactment. A petition would be circulated amongst the ratepayers asking that a local option by-law be submitted to the people. It was the duty of every honest citizen to give this petition their support, so that opportunity might be given to secure a test of public opinion on the important question of local prohibition of the liquor business. If sixty per cent. of the electors of the municipality desired local option, then it was but right that they should have it. Mr. Rix gave point to his address by the use of a number of striking illustrations. In conclusion he said that he had expressed his own opinions regarding the question of temperance. He knew that there were those present who would not altogether agree with what he had said, but he had no hesitancy in showing where he stood on this important question.

METHODIST CHURCH.

In the Methodist Church, Rev. H. Harper preached an impressive discourse from the text, "Woe unto him that giveth his neighbor drink, that putteth the bottle to him and maketh him drunken also." "Who are the men that put the bottle to their neighbors' lips?" asked the speaker in opening. Some say the man who sells the liquor over the bar and some declare the Council who allow the licenses are the responsible parties. Others blame the Government that frames the license law for the evils that are inseparably associated with the traffic. In the last analysis it is the people who elect the councils and members of Parliament that are responsible. In a democracy such as exists in Canada, where the government is by the people and for the people, the voter is the actual source of all law. Councils, members of Parliament and Commissioners are the servants of the people. If they do not carry out the will of the people they can be replaced by men who will. When the electorate of this or any other County demand local option or prohibition and give all parties interested to understand they mean business and are determined to have it, their wishes will be implemented by laws to that effect. There was no doubt, said Mr. Harper, that honest people were ashamed of the liquor traffic. The dealer himself was ashamed of it. Who ever saw the vendor of intoxicating liquors placing the finished product of his business—a ragged, besotted, red-nosed, blear-eyed drunkard—in his window as an advertisement for his trade? The liquor dealer was never proud of the man who lost health, wealth, friends and social standing through strong drink. The drinker too was ashamed of his part in the business. He took every precaution to keep his indulgence a secret from his employers, his friends, his wife, children and the public at large. He sweetened his breath, sought the side or back entrance to the barroom or went under cover of darkness to gratify his appetite. As citizens we were ashamed of the traffic. When strangers visited our cities we showed them our Parliament buildings, colleges and seats of learning, our hospitals, factories and departmental stores, but they were never taken to our saloons and breweries, and shown these places as evidences of thrift and progress. At the World's Fairs, Canada made exhibits of raw and finished products and Canadians were usually proud of these, but we never take Jack Canuck in his strength and place on exhibition beside him one of our 60,000 drunkards, as an evidence of what the rum traffic is doing for us in this fair land.

The bar was not a necessity in any community and was not a factor in the success of any corporation. The town of Orangeville would have been just as prosperous, comfortable, contented and happy if there had never been a glass of liquor sold as a beverage within its limits and if a barroom had never existed in the place. They were not necessary to the well-being of any place, for they played no part in the industrial, commercial or moral development of a community. The speaker was prepared to go even further than this and assert that the barroom was a positive injury. It was a standing menace to the welfare of the individual, the family and the citizen. As long as the mill continued in operation grist must come from somewhere? Who were to supply the boys and girls, the men and women who fall into the hopper? "Your family and mine?" asked the rev. gentleman with meaning emphasis on each word, "If I had my choice," he continued, "much as I love my children I would rather follow my son and daughters to the cemetery to-morrow than see them become drunkards or the wives of drunkards."

"We, who license the evil," said Mr. Harper in conclusion, "are responsible for the results. If we have an opportunity by local option or other legislative enactment to banish the bar, as we shall have the first of next January, and do not avail ourselves of it, then we are responsible for all the evil, misery and crime that follow directly and indirectly in the wake of the traffic."

BAPTIST CHURCH.

Rev. A. E. Quinn did not preach on temperance, on account of having a baptismal service for which arrangements had been made some time previously. However, he made a few general observations on the theme and urged the electors in his congregation to sign a local option petition at the church door at the close of the service.

PRESENTED WITH MORRIS CHAIR.

At four o'clock on Tuesday afternoon the pupils of Mr. R. H. McCarten, teacher of the Entrance Class in Orangeville Public School, gave their teacher a pleasant surprise by presenting him with a handsome Morris chair and the following address :—

Orangeville, June 22nd, 1909

To our Teacher, Mr. McCarten,—

We deeply regret your departure from Orangeville and in these last few moments which we are enjoying together as teacher and pupils we desire to present to you a token of our appreciation and affection, which shall be to you a source of rest and comfort after the labors of a weary day. May it bring to you only pleasant memories of your Orangeville pupils, in the minds of whom you have sown such good seed that we hope the future will surely reward both teacher and pupils with equally good fruit in wisdom and in morals.

We trust that the future may bring to you a fulness of reward in prosperity, and above all in health and in happiness.

Your loving pupils,

Mr. McCarten has given up his position here to accept the Principalship of the Public School in Sudbury, Ont. He has been a capable, painstaking teacher and his departure is generally regretted by the pupils. Mr. McCarten was also a useful citizen, being particularly active in church and temperance work, and both he and his amiable wife will be greatly missed.

PRESENTATION TO TEACHER.

On Monday afternoon the members of the High School Girls Basket Ball team presented Mr. Duncan, the Classical Master, with a handsome set of military bushes and the following appreciative address :—

DEAR MR. DUNCAN,—

We, the members of the B. B. C., learn with sorrow of your intended departure from our midst and we desire to express to you as your pupils and friends how deeply we have appreciated your friendship and your unremitting patience and labor as a teacher. You have been kind in word and in action and your affable manner in displaying tact and true politeness by considering the opinions of others, has made the wheels of life run smoothly in spite of the petty annoyances incidental to every day life.

As a slight token of the love and esteem we have for you, we ask you to accept this present, simple in itself, but feeling that it will be treasured because of the O. H. S. B. B. team. Your cheery word and pleasant smile shall be missed at our games but we hope that some day soon you will wander back again and that we shall all be here to greet you and bid you welcome. May you be blessed with a full measure of happiness and prosperity and we pray that God will inspire your heart with truth and love and fill your cup with never-ending joy.

Miss Nina Bremner read the address and Miss Annie McLeod made the presentation. Mr. Duncan, who made a fitting response, expressed his regret at the approaching severance of the pleasant relations existing between himself and pupils as well as the other teachers. Mr. Duncan, who has become very popular with the students since coming here at Easter, will resume his position on Queen's University staff after the summer vacation. He was an excellent teacher and the High School Board would have been pleased to retain his services for another term.

PUPILS MADE PRESENTATION.

On Monday afternoon the High School pupils presented Mr. J. F. Calvert, Science Master, who has resigned to take a position on the staff of London Collegiate Institute, with a set of books and the following address :—

To Mr. J. F. Calvert

Dear Mr. Calvert,—We, the pupils of the Orangeville High School, feel that we should like to show in a slight measure our appreciation of your kindness towards us and the work you have done for us in your capacity as Science Master in our school. Your interest in us and our pursuits has not been confined merely to our studies, but you have taken a part in many of our recreations.

We are sorry to lose you, but we trust that the position which you are going to fill may bring with it much that will add to your comfort and enjoyment.

We ask you to accept with this small gift, our best wishes for your future success and happiness.

Signed on behalf of the pupils.

GLADYS HALBERT,
CALVIN LEWIS.

Miss Carrie Stubbs made the presentation and Miss Gladys Halbert read the address. The High School loses the services of an able teacher through Mr. Calvert's removal. His influence will also be missed in local matters outside the school in which he took considerable interest. He was instrumental in organizing the Natural History Department in connection with the Dufferin Agricultural Society's annual fall exhibition. He was receiving a salary of $1000 a year here and we understand that at London he commences on $1400 per annum with the guarantee of an annual increase.

TREAT EDITOR LIKE A FELON.

In Tattered Clothes, Behind Double Bars, and All for "Contempt of Court."

Montreal, June 17th.—(Special.)—The Hon. P. Landry, senator of the Dominion has been visiting Jules Fournier, editor of Le Nationalist, who is confined in the Quebec jail, having been sentenced to three months for contempt of court. The senator says :

"I asked for the prisoner, and he appeared behind a double iron grating which separates by four feet the assassins and the thieves from their relatives and their friends. In the lighted prison cage, which one traverses to reach the grating in question, an ordinary prisoner talks with the members of his family without any restraint whatever; but Fournier, guilty of a newspaper offence, is left without mercy behind a double grating in company with two other prisoners, who were also receiving a visit from several relatives.

"As three people only can sit in front of the grating, I was obliged to trouble the conversation of the two other prisoners, as they were forced by the circumstances to interfere with mine, for the reason that the distance separating Fournier and myself was so great we had to converse in a very loud tone to be at all understood.

"Fournier was dressed in the ordinary prison garb, a sort of blue drilling, barred trousers, and a ten-cent straw hat, all being worn to a fringe, having been used by several prisoners who had used the clothing before him.

"I remember some years ago, when Mathurin, who had been condemned to death was awaiting his execution, of having paid a visit to the miserable man Mr. Bernatchese being governor of the jail. He personally brought me to the prisoner, whom I could see close at hand, and I also remember that he wore his own clothing. In comparing, therefore, the treatment inflicted upon Fournier and those who visit him with that accorded to Mathurin, it will be easily understood what sentiments such a visit produces and if I do not give expression to my indignation here it is because I do not want him to suffer for the just indignation because of the prosecutions to which he is made to suffer to-day.

"He, however, supports it all bravely, convinced that he had right on his side when he denounced the administration of justice; he has no desire to lessen the value of his act in bowing before those who threatened him with imprisonment. He entered his cell holding his head high. He underwent the ignominious treatment of being made the victim of an insulting inspection like a vile criminal, and after they had stripped him of everything he possessed, they took away his clothing and replaced them with the garb of a vulgar bandit. He endured, however, all these humiliations with the serene conscience of a man who had done his duty. From his prison cell he will walk out carrying high his head."

"Fournier neither asks pity or favor. In fact he has nothing to ask from the reign of despotism and terror which exists all over the Province of Quebec. Fournier will do his time, and others will suffer like him, but the day will come when the cup will run over, and the people will do justice to themselves

LOCAL OPTION.

Orangeville Pastors Discourse on Liquor Evil.

It is the Citizens Themselves Who Are Responsible for Existence of the Traffic.

By arrangement the pastors of the Protestant Churches of the town delivered temperance sermons on Sunday night. The discourses bore particularly on local option and the line of argument adopted was intended to press home the idea that it is the people themselves who are responsible for the existence and continuance of the liquor traffic and its attendant evils. The Banner has pleasure in presenting short reports of the sermons as follows :—

ST. ANDREW'S CHURCH.

The pastor, Rev. W. M. Morris, addressed a large congregation from the text, "Woe unto him that giveth his neighbor drink." The message of the text, Mr. Morris held, was applicable to all ages and all places. It was as true to-day as when it was first delivered. In a democratic country like Canada it was the people who ruled in general, provincial and municipal affairs. There was a wide distinction between the hotel, which was both useful and necessary, and the barroom which was neither. Any person who wished to keep hotel was free to do so, but the law prohibited every person from keeping barrooms and selling liquor except a special class, who were granted the right by license. No person could keep a saloon unless the people gave permission. It was the people themselves who licensed the liquor traffic and were responsible for its existence. The man on the other side of the bar had a perfect right to be in the business, because he had been licensed to carry it on. What people should say was "my barroom" and "my saloon," for they were partners in the business. In the eyes of the just Judge the man behind the bar, or in the liquor business, might be a better citizen than the man who disclaimed all responsibility for the traffic. The question for every citizen, and especially every Christian citizen, to consider was, "Are you going to continue in the business or are you not?" The fact that it was thought necessary to restrict the traffic showed what was thought of it. If the liquor trade was a good thing for the community why license it at all? Why not throw the doors wide open and encourage the selling of liquor. It was admittedly an evil and if the barroom stood on its own merits it would not be long tolerated. It was contended by some people that local option would injure business. If the town of Orangeville depended on the liquor traffic for its business welfare, all the speaker had to say was, "poor Orangeville." Why should local option injure business? Did it benefit business to have people spending their earnings over the bar, and buying their groceries, clothing and other necessaries on credit in the stores? Mr Morris quoted statistics to show that local option had not injured business in Owen Sound or interfered with the material progress of the town. Local option could be enforced because there was all the machinery of the license act back of the by-law. It was argued that local prohibition of the traffic would be an interference with personal liberty. The individual, it was held, had a right to drink if he so chose. Individual liberty was curtailed in every direction. People were not allowed to say everything they wished or to do everything they wished. What should be considered was not the liberty of the individual, but the welfare of the community. The barroom could not exist without boys to drink and contract the drink habit. If there were citizens who believed that the barroom should be allowed to continue, then why not have the consistency to offer their boys? "The barroom," said Mr. Morris, impressively, "has to have some boys. It has as good a right to your boys as to any others."

ST. MARK'S CHURCH.

In St. Mark's Church Rev. G. A. Rix gave an eloquent and forceful sermon on temperance lines to a large congregation. In his introductory remarks he likened the temperance movement of the present day to the wonderful invention of wireless telegraphy. As nothing could impede the transmission of a message by "wireless," so there was nothing that could stand in the way of the great tide of temperance, that was sweeping over the country. In relation to temperance men might be divided into three classes—the total abstainer, the moderate drinker and the immoderate man. No one could tell when the moderate drinker might drop into the ranks of the intemperate. It was best that we should get as far away from the evil as possible. The most important factor in dealing with all questions of this kind was to find a plan or system that would provide the greatest amount of good to the greatest number of people. He was not prepared to say absolutely that local option was the best thing for a community. It had worked well in many places and it might work well in Orangeville. Temperance people should at least give it a trial. If local option was to be a success in any community it must be backed up by strict enforcement of the law and inspection by government officials. If the law was rigidly carried out, both by hotelmen and by those not engaged in the business of selling liquor, there would not be any need for local option or similar measures. It could not be claimed, however, that the license law had been observed to the letter even in Orangeville. Evils had arisen out of the existing system, and therefore some other method of dealing with the drink evil must be tried. Whether local option would work the improvement that its advocates claimed it would remained to be seen, but at any rate the measure should receive a fair trial and then be judged on its merits and the benefits it had brought the community. Mr. Rix stated that he was entirely in accord with the three-fifths clause. To his way of thinking it ensured a greater preponderance of public influence on the side of the enactment. A petition would be circulated amongst the ratepayers asking that a local option by-law be submitted to the people. It was the duty of every honest citizen to give this petition their support, so that opportunity might be given to secure a test of public opinion on the important question of local prohibition of the liquor business. If sixty per cent. of the electors of the municipality desired local option, then it was but right that they should have it. Mr. Rix gave point to his address by the use of a number of striking illustrations. In conclusion he said that he had expressed his own opinions regarding the question of temperance. He knew that there were those present who would not altogether agree with what he had said, but he had no hesitancy in showing where he stood on this important question.

METHODIST CHURCH.

In the Methodist Church, Rev. H. Harper preached an impressive discourse from the text, "Woe unto him that giveth his neighbor drink, that putteth the bottle to him and maketh him drunken also." "Who are the men that put the bottle to their neighbors' lips?" asked the speaker in opening. Some say the man who sells the liquor over the bar and some declare the Council who allow the licenses are the responsible parties. Others blame the Government that frames the license law for the evils that are inseparably associated with the traffic. In the last analysis it is the people who elect the councils and members of Parliament that are responsible. In a democracy such as exists in Canada, where the government is by the people and for the people, the voter is the actual source of all law. Councils, members of Parliament and Commissioners are the servants of the people. If they do not carry out the will of the people they can be replaced by men who will. When the electorate of this or any other County demand local option or prohibition and give all parties interested to understand they mean business and are determined to have it, their wishes will be implemented by laws to that effect. There was no doubt, said Mr. Harper, that honest people were ashamed of the liquor traffic. The dealer himself was ashamed of it. Who ever saw the vendor of intoxicating liquors placing the finished product of his business—a ragged, besotted, red-nosed, blear-eyed drunkard—in his window as an advertisement for his trade? The liquor dealer was never proud of the man who lost health, wealth, friends and social standing through strong drink! The drinker too was ashamed of his part in the business. He took every precaution to keep his indulgence a secret from his employers, his friends, his wife, children and the public at large. He sweetened his breath, sought the back entrance to the barroom or went under cover of darkness to gratify his appetite. As citizens we were ashamed of the traffic. When strangers visited our cities we showed them our Parliament buildings, colleges and seats of learning, our hospitals, factories and departmental stores, but they were never taken to our saloons and breweries, and shown these places as evidences of thrift and progress. At the World's Fairs, Canada made exhibits of raw and finished products and Canadians were usually proud of these, but we never take Jack Canuck in his strength and place on exhibition beside him one of our 60,000 drunkards, as an evidence of what the rum traffic is doing for us in this fair land.

The bar was not a necessity in any community and was not a factor in the success of any corporation. The town of Orangeville would have been just as prosperous, comfortable, contented and happy if there had never been a glass of liquor sold as a beverage within its limits and if a barroom had never existed in the place. They were not necessary to the well-being of any place, for they played no part in the industrial, commercial or moral development of a community. The speaker was prepared to go even further than this and assert that the barroom was a positive injury. It was a standing menace to the welfare of the individual, the family and the citizen. As long as the mill continued in operation grist must come from somewhere? Who were to supply the boys and girls, the men and women who fall into the hopper? "Your family and mine?" asked the rev. gentleman with meaning emphasis on each word, "If I had my choice," he continued, "much as I love my children I would rather follow my son and daughters to the cemetery to-morrow than see them become drunkards or the wives of drunkards."

"We, who license the evil," said Mr. Harper in conclusion, "are responsible for the results. If we have an opportunity by local option or other legislative enactment to banish the bar, as we shall have the first of next January, and do not avail ourselves of it, then we are responsible for all the evil, misery and crime that follow directly and indirectly in the wake of the traffic."

BAPTIST CHURCH.

Rev. A. E. Quinn did not preach on temperance, on account of having a baptismal service for which arrangements had been made some time previously. However, he made a few general observations on the theme and urged the electors in his congregation to sign a local option petition at the church door at the close of the service.

PRESENTED WITH MORRIS CHAIR.

At four o'clock on Tuesday afternoon the pupils of Mr. R. H. McCarten, teacher of the Entrance Class in Orangeville Public School, gave their teacher a pleasant surprise by presenting him with a handsome Morris chair and the following address :—

Orangeville, June 22nd, 1909

To our Teacher, Mr. McCarten,—

We deeply regret your departure from Orangeville and in these last few moments which we are enjoying together as teacher and pupils we desire to present to you a token of our appreciation and affection, which shall be to you a source of rest and comfort after the labors of a weary day. May it bring to you only pleasant memories of your Orangeville pupils, in the minds of whom you have sown such good seed that we hope the future will surely reward both teacher and pupils with equally good fruit in wisdom and in morals.

We trust that the future may bring to you a fulness of reward in prosperity, and above all in health and in happiness.

Your loving pupils,

Mr. McCarten has given up his position here to accept the Principalship of the Public School in Sudbury, Ont. He has been a capable, painstaking teacher and his departure is generally regretted by the pupils. Mr. McCarten was also a useful citizen, being particularly active in church and temperance work, and both he and his amiable wife will be greatly missed.

PRESENTATION TO TEACHER.

On Monday afternoon the members of the High School Girls Basket Ball team presented Mr. Duncan, the Classical Master, with a handsome set of military bushes and the following appreciative address :—

DEAR MR. DUNCAN,—

We, the members of the B. B. C., learn with sorrow of your intended departure from our midst and we desire to express to you as your pupils and friends how deeply we have appreciated your friendship and your unremitting patience and labor as a teacher. You have been kind in word and in action and your affable manner in displaying tact and true politeness by considering the opinions of others, has made the wheels of life run smoothly in spite of the petty annoyances incidental to every day life.

As a slight token of the love and esteem we have for you, we ask you to accept this present, simple in itself, but feeling that it will be treasured because of the O. H. S. B. B. team. Your cheery word and pleasant smile shall be missed at our games but we hope that some day soon you will wander back again and that we shall all be here to greet you and bid you welcome. May you be blessed with a full measure of happiness and prosperity and we pray that God will inspire your heart with truth and love and fill your cup with never-ending joy.

Miss Nina Bremner read the address and Miss Annie McLeod made the presentation. Mr. Duncan, who made a fitting response, expressed his regret at the approaching severance of the pleasant relations existing between himself and pupils as well as the other teachers. Mr. Duncan, who has become very popular with the students since coming here at Easter, will resume his position on Queen's University staff after the summer vacation. He was an excellent teacher and the High School Board would have been pleased to retain his services for another term.

PUPILS MADE PRESENTATION.

On Monday afternoon the High School pupils presented Mr. J. F. Calvert, Science Master, who has resigned to take a position on the staff of London Collegiate Institute, with a set of books and the following address :—

To Mr. J. F. Calvert

Dear Mr. Calvert,—We, the pupils of the Orangeville High School, feel that we should like to show in a slight measure our appreciation of your kindness towards us and the work you have done for us in your capacity as Science Master in our school. Your interest in us and our pursuits has not been confined merely to our studies, but you have taken a part in many of our recreations.

We are sorry to lose you, but we trust that the position which you are going to fill may bring with it much that will add to your comfort and enjoyment.

We ask you to accept with this small gift, our best wishes for your future success and happiness.

Signed on behalf of the pupils.

GLADYS HALBERT,
CALVIN LEWIS.

Miss Carrie Stubbs made the presentation and Miss Gladys Halbert read the address. The High School loses the services of an able teacher through Mr. Calvert's removal. His influence will also be missed in local matters outside the school in which he took considerable interest. He was instrumental in organizing the Natural History Department in connection with the Dufferin Agricultural Society's annual fall exhibition. He was receiving a salary of $1000 a year here and we understand that at London he commences on $1400 per annum with the guarantee of an annual increase.

DEATH OF MR. JOHN KYLES.

Unexpected Demise of a Prominent Toronto Barrister.

Was a Former Resident of Dufferin County.

The news of the death of Mr. John Kyles at his home on Glengrove Avenue, Eglinton, a beautiful suburb of Northern Toronto, on Thursday last, was received by the people of this town and vicinity with feelings of deep sorrow and wide-spread regret. Mr. Kyles had been in rather indifferent health for some time but the serious nature of his illness was known to but few, outside the members of his own family, and close business associates. That insidious malady, Bright's disease, was the immediate cause of the taking off in the prime of life of a brilliant barrister, a popular citizen, and devoted husband and father. Mr. Kyles was born in 1860 at the Village of Camilla, where he received his earliest education, attending later Newmarket High School, finally graduating in Arts from the Provincial University at Toronto with high honors in 1885. Entering the legal firm of Kingstone, Wood & Symons, as a law student, he was called to the bar three years later, and immediately began the practice of his profession in the Queen City, where for upwards of twenty years the deceased was a conspicuous figure. He practised for a time with H. E. Irwin, K.C., now Clerk of the Peace for the County of York, subsequently with D. D. Grierson, now of the firm of Arnoldi and Grierson, and lastly with T. H. Bull, for many years Clerk of the Peace for York County, a gentleman well known for his wealth, philanthropy and high standing in professional and social circles. For very many years Mr. Bull had been the solicitor for the large and wealthy township of York, with its varied interests, and on the accession of the late Mr. Kyles to the firm, he was given practically the whole charge of the immense legal work of the municipality. How carefully these duties were performed is well known and the presence of the Council at the last sad rites in a body was official recognition of the high appreciation of their late solicitor, whose conscientious discharge of the duties of his position had often excited their admiration and won their regard. It was the privilege of the writer to enjoy the intimate acquaintance and friendship of the late Mr. Kyles for over two decades, and the cause of his popularity is no secret. Of a particularly frank disposition he looked out on the world with an optimistic view, took particular pleasure in obliging his fellows, was free from any suspicion of being patronising and scorned what is known in legal parlance as "sharp practice," remembering his obligation "not to pervert the law to favor or prejudice any man, but in all things to conduct himself truly and with integrity." Such were a few of the personal characteristics of John Kyles, which made for him many friends, who will experience no small pang on learning of his untimely death.

A widow and a family of three sons and a daughter survive, the former being a daughter of the late Mr. Joel Wells. The late Mr. Kyles is also survived by his aged mother, seven brothers and three sisters. The latter are:—Dr. R. N. Kyles, of this town; Dr. Ernest Kyles, of Buffalo, N.Y.; Hugh Kyles, of Mono; Thomas who resides on the homestead with his mother and sister, Miss Myrtle, and James a farmer near Fleming, Man., where a married sister, Mrs. Verner, also resides. William, a contractor at Melville, Sask.; Alexander in British Columbia, and Mrs. Maura McNaughton, living at Happy, Texas, complete the members of the family.

Deceased was a Liberal in politics, but did not take a very active interest in party questions. He was a Past President of the Dufferin Old Boys' Association, and during his occupancy of that office a few years ago, delivered one of the most eloquent replies in response to the address of welcome from the corporation ever heard here on a similar occasion.

The funeral took place on Saturday afternoon to Prospect Cemetery, Rev. W. G. Back, pastor of the Presbyterian Church, Eglinton, of which deceased was a member, officiating, assisted by Rev. T. W. Powell, rector of St. Clement's Anglican church of the same place. A very large number were present at the obsequies, including the Council of the township of York, Mr. T. H. Bull, late partner of the deceased and H. E. Irwin, K.C., and D. D. Grierson, former partners; Rev. Dr. Neil, of Westminister Presbyterian Church, Toronto, William Howard, Camilla, and Charles Anderson, Orangeville, uncles; Judge J. H. Denton, E. J. Cobean and J. Dunnett, Toronto; E. Hollingshead, Newmarket and Mrs. Armstrong, New Haven, Conn., sister of Mrs. Kyles, the mother, sisters and brothers of the deceased, except those living at a distance and many prominent citizens from Toronto and York County. Many beautiful floral tributes were in evidence. To the grief stricken mother, widow, children, brothers and sisters of the late Mr. Kyles this journal expresses its profound sorrow at the untimely passing away of a son, husband, father and brother in the very midst of a useful and successful career and extends the sympathy which is so generally felt by all those who had the pleasure of knowing the subject of this obituary.

WHAT HAPPENED CATTLE?

Oliver Sproule, Centre Road, Mono, is at a loss to understand what happened two of his cattle, which were found lying dead in a pasture field last Thursday. The animals,—a two year old steer and a yearling heifer—were badly bloated and had evidently died in great agony. It is thought they had been poisoned in some way.

Anxious Moments For Young Mothers

The hot weather months are an anxious time for all mothers, but particularly for young mothers. They are the most fatal time of the year for babies and young children, because of the great prevalence of stomach and bowel troubles. These come almost without warning and often before the mother realizes that there is danger the little one may be beyond aid. No other medicine can equal Baby's Own Tablets in promptly curing bowel and stomach troubles and an occasional dose given the well child will keep the stomach and bowels free from offending matter and ensure good health to the child. Therefore the Tablets should always be kept in the home as they may be the means of saving a little life. Sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

It is said that the number of students writing is not so large as usual.

BUTCHERS MIX MATTERS.

An unfortunate occurrence took place in Hillsburg last Friday afternoon, when Messrs. Norman Potter and John Spedding, butchers, had a mix-up, in which the latter got very much the worst of it though it is alleged that Potter made the assault and Spedding did not defend himself or had not time to do so. There has been considerable bad blood between the meat dealing firms for over a year past, and they ventilated their grievances in the police court once before. In the present instance the immediate cause of strife was a dog. A charge of assault has been laid, and the case will be tried in the Town Hall, Hillsburg, next Saturday afternoon at 2 o'clock.

ALEXANDER—REID.

On Tuesday, June 16th, at 2 o'clock p.m., a very pleasant event took place at the home of Mrs. Joseph Reid, of Alton, when her daughter, Sarah Edith, was united in marriage to Mr. George Alexander. There were about fifty guests present, among them being the bride's sisters, Misses Annie Reid, of Toronto, and Lizzie Reid, of New Hamburg. The young couple were the recipients of a number of very handsome presents.

BATES—ECCLES.

A very quiet wedding, owing to a recent death in the family, took place at "The Spruces" the home of Mr. and Mrs. John Stubbs, of Caledon, on Wednesday, June 16th, at 3.30 o'clock, when their niece, Miss Ida M. Eccles, only child of the late William Eccles, of Campania, was united in marriage to Mr. W. J. Bates, of Bowling Green. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. C. A. Sparling, of Grand Valley. The bride, who was given away by her uncle, was unattended and was becomingly attired in a princess gown of white silk, trimmed with all over lace and applique and wore the usual bridal veil and wreath of orange blossoms and carried a bouquet of white roses and lillies of the valley. After the ceremony the happy couple led the way to the dining room, where all partook of a dainty repast, after which Mr. and Mrs. Bates took the evening train for Toronto and other points. The bride travelled in a suit of black peau de soie silk and hat of white mohair, with black ostrich plume.

Nobod'y Child.

A Twentieth Century Fairy-Tale

BY MAARTEN MAARTENS

(In Scribner's Magazine.)

The rain was pouring down outside in perpendicular streams, with plashes and swishes on the ground and the window sill: however snug it might be inside, you shuddered to think of the cold wet so close by. Especially if your husband was out in it. At least, if you cared for your husband. As, after all, in spite of the novels, most women still do, thank Heaven!

Vrouw Caspers did not belong to that more favored class, who are misunderstood or who do not live their life or have missed their affinity. Some women she knew had found their affinities, and the affinities, with or without church sanction, beat them. Vrouw Caspers had now been united for more than five years to an honest young carpenter, steady, always in work. She was several years older than her husband, and that greatly increased the chief sorrow—the soreness—of her existence. She was childless.

Adventures—fortunes or misfortunes of special interest—she had not yet experienced, nor was hers the imaginative mind that, even in the humblest walks of life, can create these. She went her way, doing her canny, cleanly duty in her cottage, as her mother had done before her, in a similar, rather humbler cottage, and as she herself had done, by her widowed father, before Henk Caspers came courting her. She went to church, but she didn't pray much. She had given that up. She was thirty-three. She was childless.

"How it rains!" she said aloud, talking to herself, as lonely women will. She looked to the kettle on the fire, and the dish of supper stewing. And she went to the window, although it was pitchy dark, waiting for Henk.

He was her husband, and she loved him quite reasonably as such. But that wasn't the real stirring of a woman's nature, and she vaguely felt it wasn't. Such liking is a ripple on the pond.

As she pressed her cheek against the chilly pane, she thought she heard a faint puling murmur through the splash of water. She had just imagination enough to fancy it might be something un-human and quite sense enough to know it was, it must be a cat. The same, she wandered to the door and opened it—looking for Henk.

He foot struck a bundle as far as possible against the of the doorway, well under from the rain, if not from the. She picked up the thing and it in at once, hearkening to its mewing: she realized at once course, what amazing event had fallen her. A child had come not her own.

She unpinned the damp bundle unpacked its contents. The child now screamed lustily. He was a fine, healthy boy, a couple of weeks old. His linen and the fur he had been carefully wrapped up in by the cruel hand that left him to his fate, were of excellent quality: by the look of these he was a rich man's child. And the little bundle of banknotes on his naked little body was a rich man's parting gift.

"Five notes of a thousand guilders each! Five thousand guilders!" The carpenter's wife looked at the child—looked at the notes. She had seen a-many children. She had never seen so much money as this.

A rustle outside—some drops on the pane—startled her. Suddenly she realized, for the first time, what it means to be startled, by any noise, anywhere, when you have money lying thus before you—in the loneliness—at night. She snatched the crackly papers to her bosom and hid them away.

One thing she was resolved on at once and forever. Henk must never know of this money. Her own sister's husband had come into a legacy some years ago, for less than this!—some fifteen hundred—and he had taken to idleness, gaming and drink. The money was soon gone: the intemperance remained to the end. She could trust Henk, yet men are men. Nothing keeps them steady but the immediate need of bread.

She stood staring at the screamy child, uncertain, upset. Before she could make up her mind to behave reasonably to this baby, her husband was in the room.

"Hullo!" he said.

"Yes," she answered, looking round at him. "I found it on the door step, five minutes ago."

The man gave a long whistle, and the child stopped screaming to hear.

"He takes kindlier to you than to me," said the Vrouw, with sudden asperity.

"Well, he hasn't any reason to," replied honest Henk. "It's a he, is it? What's its name?"

"There's no mark." She showed him everything but the money.

"Well, I must go straight to the Burgomaster," said the husband. "I suppose I can't take the child out in a night like this?"

She cried out at him.

"Well, there's no hurry, wife. If there'd been money with him, it'd have been a different thing."

"How so?" she inquired anxiously.

"There's always questions asked about money, whereas now, poor brute, there won't be many questions asked about you!" The child lay on its back, with the unseeing baby-stare.

The cottagers stood gazing down on it. The room was quiet: the child worn out, for the moment, with crying. Outside the rain came swishing along the glass.

"Brutes its parents must have been," said Henk, with whom the first word was a great favorite, a caress or a blow.

"It does seem incredible," asserted the wife. And again they stood gazing in silence.

"It isn't as if we had one of our own," said the woman at last.

"Nor ever likely to have," assented Henk sadly.

"Just so," she cried. "That's all the difference. Yes. Just so." Whatever blame she may have incurred afterward, at that moment she was sincere, honestly anxious, without thought of the money, in her awakening mother love for the child.

"Without thought of the money?" 'Tis a bold thing to say. The money was there, in her bosom, at any rate, as well as the mother love. And mother love and money love are the strongest powers we wot of; they bear the whole world between them, like pillars of Hercules. Perhaps, for the moment, she had forgotten the money; her eyes were soft over the child.

"Yes, we will ask the Burgomaster about keeping him," said Henk. "There is no reason why any one else should want him, poor brute!" The child had begun to roar again. She turned from the milk she was rather tardily heating.

"God has sent him us," said the big husband gently. "We take him for his own sake, from God." And then, in any case, she remembered the bank-notes hidden at her breast.

Indeed, the Burgomaster had no objection to these decent people taking, if they really wished, the pennyless child. He was christened Henk Caspers and inscribed in the public register as such. He took kindly to his bottle in the cottage, and the childless couple would play with him for hours. After a time, while they still played with him, they would suddenly pause and look anxiously at each other. And Henk would turn away, whistling, to pace up and down the room. Once or twice he broke off, to kiss his wife, which was not at all in his character and upset growing. He did not kiss the child.

Little Henk Caspers had not been a year in the house when his foster-mother's own baby was born. Father Henk went to tell the Burgomaster.

"A boy, you say?" echoed the Burgomaster, opening a big book.

"Yes, your Worship: how could it have been anything else?"

"H'm," said the Burgomaster. "Name?"

"Hendrick Caspers," said old Henk firmly.

"But you've got that already," protested the Burgomaster, over his spectacles, with uplifted pen.

"I've not got it. Leastways, it doesn't count. This is the Hendrick Caspers. Can't the other be changed?"

"No," replied the man of the law curtly. "That is to say, it's a cumbrous and costly proceeding. You ought to have thought of this before."

"How could we, after all those years?" pleaded Henk. The Burgomaster acquiesced.

Vrouw Caspers had wondered, if she died, what Henk would say to that big fortune, hidden away in a stocking. She did not dare to move it, for how could she approach any one with a note for a thousand guilders? As well give herself up at the nearest police-station at once. As for the money, she had not had a day's rest since the care of it weighed, unremittingly, on her thoughts. At night she would start up, hearing thieves. "Let them come: we shall see what they steal, said her cheery husband. And now her own child was born. Whose was the money now? Hers—and his, therefore—for taking care of the stranger? Or the foster-child's, taken in, as the whole village deemed, including parson and Burgomaster, for the love of God? She felt she had neither ability nor desire to solve the question, as she lay back contemplating her son. Such a beauty! The other little Henk cried in his cot. "We mustn't neglect him," she cried feebly. "Henk, what is it he wants?"

"Hanged if I know what the little brute wants," answered Henk, in what sense did he use the word? It might be difficult to say.

But as time went on it would have been, had any cared, less difficult. Also, impartial investigation might have discovered, often, if not always, adequate explanations of the elder infant's tears. He was old enough now, fully a twelvemonth, to cry real sorrow. Hannah Caspers was laboriously kind to him, till the labor slowed down a bit, under the strain.

"My son Henk," said Caspers, dandling the spluttery bundle on his knee. He would remember to dandle the other on the other—at least he had two knees. It was a long time before he said, under the pressure of much squalling, the thing he had often wanted but never intended to utter: "Nobody's child."

It was true: the elder Hendrick was Nobody's Child, and yet he was Henk Caspers' number one. They called him "Number One": the sobriquet sounded more than spiteful. A sharp old neighbor remarked: "Why not Number Nought?" Yet nobody could say Hannah Caspers was cruel to "the other one"; she constantly remembered not to be that.

The children grew up together for the next dozen years; the stranger was called Hendrick and the son of the house called Henk—as Henry and Harry: the whole difference of their daily lives lay there. As luck would have it, Hannah's late-born offspring was a feeble, quick-brained little chap; the Ishmael of the cottage was healthy, boisterous, all for an outdoor life. In sheer animal spirits he would upset his younger "brother," and then Isaac would cry.

The knowledge of our own folly is the worst of reconcilers to our own fate. When Henk Caspers and Hannah recalled how unnecessary was Ishmael's presence at their fireside, they almost hated the leaping, laughing brat.

At the critical age of twelve the younger boy, never well, manifestly sickened. The doctor appeared, as a permanent expense, in the cottage; at the same time, in accordance with the frightful truth that misfortune never comes single-handed, Henk Caspers broke his arm by a fall on a slide at winter time. It was badly set and, although he recovered the use of it, the elbow remained stiff. He became a second-rate workman, "the man with the arm."

But before the limb was out of the sling, the doctor spoke of changes for young Henk. The damp climate of the village—just outside The Hague—was very bad for the boy: he was growing too fast; he needed the dry air of the Gelderland hills. The parents might, perhaps, move to those parts—to save the child's life?

Was it as bad as that? The mother gazed into the physicians eyes.

That evening, with swift resolve to do it and not draw back, she spread the whole of the five bank-notes in a line before her husband, as he sat by the table, head bent and reflective, resting his wounded arm. He glanced up in terror.

"They were with the child," she said quickly. "With Hendrick."

"Five—thousand—guilders?" he stuttered. "How much money is that?"

"I don't know. Oof!" She pushed them toward him.

"You fool!" he exclaimed angrily. "If you'd put them in the bank, they'd have been ten!"

"Father put his money in a bank and it failed," she said.

He did not answer, gazing at the five bits of paper. "Five thousand florins!" he repeated. "It's a great deal more than Kees ever had."

"We shall make a better use of it than Kees did," she answered hurriedly.

"Yes, oh yes! we shall make a better use of it than Kees. But, look here!"—he glanced up at her—"It belongs to Hendrick!"

"Absurd!" she replied, suddenly resolved on this point, now he questioned it, amazed that she ever could have doubted. "Of course it was intended for us, for our care of him! Any fool can see that."

"I suppose so," acquiesced the milder man. "Well, the little brute can repay our kindness by saving Henk's life."

To the woods of Gelderland, then, the little family departed, securing a lonely cottage there among the pines. To this strange, inhospitable country the invalided father sought vainly—and not too strenuously—for work. They possessed about four thousand guilders—one thousand having gone to the purchase of the cottage—which a friend of Caspers, a builder, had put into his business, promising a minimum of six and a maximum of ten per cent. Henk reckoned, from all the friend's accounts, on ten; they had nearly enough to live.

But the sharp Gelderland air proved unsatisfactory for the delicate child, whose complaint was some sort of slow "waste," as the common people too truly term it. His asthma, for instance, was worse here than at The Hague.

Within eighteen months the builder failed: the four thousand guilders had been his last rope of sand. But Henk Caspers was not to blame, for the builder, a church elder and parish councillor, had been estimated, till a week before his fall, "safe as the bank." There are people to whom this idea still conveys some conception of security. The Caspers were penniless. The wife, who had barely been reconciled by the ten per cent. to the letting the money leave the corner it had slept in so many years—the wife said, "I told you so," till the husband struck her with his unstiff arm.

Fortunately Hendrick, now aged fourteen, had strong, healthy arms and a willing heart. People liked him. In this forlorn neighborhood none knew or cared to know his unusual connection with his "parents." These latter had wisely held their peace: their elder "son" was put to work at a carpenter's, who took on the maimed father at half-price. Henk lay out in the woods—all the doctors and quacks consulted recommended "fresh air"—and drank milk.

Thus they struggled on for another year or two till the great change came. The woman, Hannah, had got reconciled to the foster-child, now he earned more than half the family bread. She liked him. He was happy. But all the passions of her heart—deeper stirring than even she had ever dreamed of in her emptiest days—all her mother love and fear and yearning lived only for the sickly child she had borne.

"This air," the doctor kept on saying, "isn't what the boy needs at all. Couldn't your husband find work in Germany—at Bonn, for instance? So many Dutch workmen find good pay along the Rhine."

"Would he recover, if he lived there?" asked the anxious mother.

"He would have a much better chance," replied the doctor, walking away.

But Hannah knew such talk was futile. As well say that boy might recover in Heaven!

She was sadly ruminating these matters again on that bright August morning, when the motor-car came flying along the dusty road, which brought the change. She detested motors, not only because she didn't possess one, but for the more individual reason that dust was bad for Henk.

This motor-car stopped at her door, and Hannah went to join it and tell the way to Arnhem.

But the lady who descended from it, said: "Vrouw Caspers? I want to see you on business"—and Hannah at once thought of Hendrick, out at his work for the day.

Without more ado the lady entered the cottage, and, unasked, she sat down. As she loosened the absurd motor-trappings which a famous French house had furnished her, the carpenter's wife saw that she was a woman of "the great world," no longer quite young—perhaps forty-five—and attired in widow's mourning. And also Hannah saw that she trembled in vain attempts to steady her knees and her voice.

She—the visitor—spoke a few phrases about the road, the fine day, the pretty cottage—visibly perfunctory, making pretence.

Then she burst out: "Have you children? Yes, I know you have two. I have come about that."

Hannah also sat down anxiously waiting.

"You will ask how I know?—I will tell you quite frankly.—The Burgomaster of the village where you used to live, Voordorp, is a connection of friends of mine, so I heard, long ago, your story. I know you have a foster-son—was he the child of one of your relations?" She paused, as anxious as the other woman, if not more so.

Eczema Covered Baby's Face

Was spreading onto the body but DR. CHASE'S OINTMENT made a complete cure.

"I would not care if I could bear the suffering myself," said an anxious mother, "but for the poor innocent baby to be in agony from the dreadful, itching eczema is more than I can stand."

Fortunately, there is in Dr. Chase's Ointment soothing and healing for baby's skin troubles. While remarkably quick and effective in action, Dr. Chase's Ointment cannot possibly prove otherwise than beneficial to the most tender skin.

Mrs. M. McCann, 4 Short St., St. John, N. B., writes:

My little girl, three years old, had face covered with eczema and it was spreading over her body. I tried many different ointments and the doctor could not do her any good. A friend of mine advised me to try Dr. Chase's Ointment, and she was completely cured by one box. I cannot praise Dr. Chase's Ointment enough for the good it has done her."

WORTH MOUNTAINS OF GOLD

During Change of Life, says Mrs. Chas. Barclay

Graniteville, Vt.—"I was passing through the Change of Life and suffered from nervousness and other annoying symptoms, and I can truly say that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has proved worth mountains of gold to me, as it restored my health and strength. I never forget to tell my friends what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done for me during this trying period. Complete restoration to health means so much to me that for the sake of other suffering women I am willing to make my trouble public so you may publish this letter."—MRS. CHAS. BARCLAY, R.F.D., Graniteville, Vt.

No other medicine for woman's ills has received such wide-spread and unqualified endorsement. No other medicine we know of has such a record of cures of female ills as has Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

For more than 30 years it has been curing female complaints such as inflammation, ulceration, local weaknesses, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, indigestion and nervous prostration, and it is unequalled for carrying women safely through the period of change of life. It costs but little to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and, as Mrs. Barclay says, it is "worth mountains of gold" to suffering women.

GUN GREASE, NOT PORK FAT.

There are brand new rifle ranges at Niagara Camp this year and brand new Ross rifles to shoot on them. But with all that, this combination of newness was the cause of some trouble—nearly a mutiny in fact—in a rural company which went up to the ranges to shoot, one day this week. The incident recalls one of the theories of the Indian mutiny, that the Hindoo soldiers revolted because they were supplied with greased cartridges.

But at Niagara this week it was greased rifles that caused the trouble. The rifles the men shoot with on the ranges, be it remembered, are not the rifles with which they learn the "shoulder arms" and sundry other "goose steps." Mark II. Ross rifles, with Mark III. sights are handed to the men when they get to the rifle ranges.

Now these pet weapons, have been well greased and packed during the winter. It so happened that in a squad from an infantry corps which came up to shoot were four orthodox Jews, who chanced each to get rifles with considerable winter's grease still sticking to them.

"Pork fat," said one of them immediately.

The three others dropped the "unclean" things like hot pokers. No persuasion on the part of their sergeant could induce them to take them up again. They did not explain their objection very clearly and for awhile it looked as if there might be a young insurrection.

Finally, however, with the help of an officer, they were convinced that the grease on their rifles was not even a distant relative of the detested pig, and they went on with their shooting.

THE BANNER

THURSDAY, JULY 7, 1910

The much talked of prize fight at Reno, Nevada, on Monday afternoon between Jeffries and the negro Johnston was a disappointment to those backing the white man. The fight only lasted 15 rounds and Johnston had the best of it all through. A large amount of money changed hands over the fight.

The body of Frank S. Gouldthrite, late superintendent of the Dominion Printing Bureau, was found on Sunday floating in the Detroit River near Trenton, Mich., a few miles south of Detroit. This puts an end to the theory that Gouldthrite had hoaxed the police by walking off the Detroit and Buffalo steamer Eastern States. He evidently jumped off the Eastern Stats a few miles below Detroit. His shirt and collar were covered with blood indicating that he had tried to tut his throat before throwing himself overboard. His body was sent to Ottawa.

We are pleased to see that the Canadian Railway Commission are taking up the matter of the treatment accorded Canadians who may be going across the lines on a visit. A United States government official gets on board the train before reaching Niagara Falls or Windsor or Sarnia Tunnel and proceeds to examine passengers on Canadian territory. The immigration officers asks each passenger if he or she is going to the States. If the answer is in the negative that ends it. If you are unfortunate enough to have to cross the line the trouble begins. On the 23rd of May this year we sold a ticket to a young lady, who was going to visit her sister at Great Falls, Montana. She was a bright, intelligent and healthy specimen of Canadian girlhood—and had money enough in her possession to bring her back from Montana when she was ready to come. She was not crippled, halt or blind, yet she was put to considerable trouble at Port Huron and not allowed to proceed on her train because we presume she refused to answer questions that was none of their business. She was detained at Port Huron half a day and had to telegraph again to friends in Chicago who were to meet her at the depot. It is a burning shame that the Canadian government allows people to be treated in any such a manner. The Railways have promised the Commission that they will do all in their power to prevent trouble. The Railway commission says that the people should not be subject to such indignities as they have been treated with in the past.—Shelburne Free Press.

DIVISION COURT SITTINGS.

The regular monthly sittings of the First Division Court were held on Tuesday, and lasted from ten o'clock a.m. until four p.m., the court not adjourning for lunch. There were but three cases tried. In the action Nathaniel Thompson vs. W. Gully, both of Mono, a jury had been summoned. The action was brought for $80 damages for cutting down timber by the defendant from the farm of the plaintiff. Considerable evidence was taken and the jury retired about one o'clock. A verdict for the defendant was returned. Each party to pay his own costs. The defendant who requisitioned the jury, was saddled with the jury fees. C. R. McKeown, K.C., appeared for the plaintiff. A. A. Hughson and J. L. Island for the defendant.

Ernest Denny vs. Thomas Demny. This was an action between two brothers to settle disputed accounts extending over several years. George McIntyre, garinshee. Judgment given for plaintiff for $27.50. A. A. Hughson for plaintiff, C. R. McKeown for defendant.

Thomas Denny vs. Willis Denny was the last case. This was also an action on a disputed account. Judgment for plaintiff for $26.50. C. R. McKeown for plaintiff, A. A. Hughson for defendant.

INTERESTING LIQUOR CASE AT SHELBURNE.

Prosecution for Allowing Liquor to be Consumed on the Premises.

On Thursday last before P. M. Rutherford, Shelburne, first prosecution since the adoption of local option, in that village, was heard. Two prominent hardware merchants were charged, under section 50 of the Ontario Liquor License Act of "allowing liquor to be consumed on their premises by other than guests." Constable Snider, acting on certain information supplied to him, found nine full quart bottles of Irish whiskey, and one bottle, half full of the same seductive beverage, in the auto garage of the accused. The case was dismissed as to one defendant, and judgment reserved as to the order until Friday next, the magistrate taking charge of the liquid meanwhile. Crown Attorney McKay prosecuted, and lawyer Tucker, of Owen Sound, the well known barrister, who is a recognized expert in such matters, defended. There was a large crowd present in the court room, both defendants, the Constable, and a citizen, were examined.

DODDS VS. STILL.

Judgment for Full County Court Costs Awarded Plaintiff—Judgment for Plaintiff in Boos

In the case of Dodds vs. Still, tried at the last County Court Sittings before Judge McCarthy last month, it will be remembered the plaintiff was awarded $60 for the killing of thirteen sheep, worried to death by the defendant's hound. As the Division Court has jurisdiction up to this amount, in cases of this nature, the question of costs was reserved. On Tuesday the Judge gave judgment for full County Court costs, in favor of the plaintiff, J. L. Island for plaintiff, A. A. Hughson for defendant.

In the case of Boos vs. Oliver, also tried at the same sittings, judgment was reserved. The plaintiff has been found entitled to $329.73, in addition to $200.30, paid into Court by the defendants. Geo. Robb and A. A. Hughson for plaintiff, W. S. Middleboro (Owen Sound) for defence.

NAVAL REVIEW AT SPITHEAD.

Novel and Elaborate Spectacle at the Canadian National this Year.

While the air is full of tales of nations adding to their fleets, what could make a more appropriate spectacle for this year's Canadian National Exhibition than a grand display of Britain's Naval power. "The Naval Review at Spithead" will do this splendidly. It shows the town with its twinkling lights as a background and the great guardians of the sea sale down in columns. The Royal Yacht comes down through the columns and as it comes the guns of each ship roar out the Royal Salute. It is an entirely novel spectacle and one not only calculat to compel the admiration of every spectator but to rouse the patriotism of every Britoh.

MISS ELIZA FLEMING.

There died at her home, lot 10, in the 7th line Mono, on Thursday last, June 30th, in the person of Miss Eliza Fleming, at the age of 76 years, a lady who had endeared herself to a very large circle of relatives, friends and acquaintances. Born on the lot upon which she died, the deceased was known to almost every one in the township, and in the adjoining municipalities. Possessed of a cheerful, kind disposition, Miss Fleming was greatly appreciated by all who had the pleasure of knowing her. No social function was complete without her presence, and in her long and useful life she contributed much to the pleasures and joys of the neighborhood, in which she lived, while the sorrows which visited the homes of her friends, she considered it a duty to assuage by kindly sympathy, and active assistance in time of need. Miss Fleming, who lived with Miss McCartney, her grand niece, had been ill for the past fifteen months, and passed peacefully away at the time mentioned. She was a consistent member of Mono East Presbyterian Church. The funeral, which took place on Saturday last to St. John's cemetery, was largely attended, Rev. Mr. Davey, of Mono Mills, and Rev. A. C. Collier, of the English Church, Mono Mills, held service at the house and also officiated at the grave. The pallbearers were A., Robert, and Hilliard Somerville, of Adjala, David McCartney, Toronto; Robert Fleming, Mansfield, grand nephews, and William Fleming, a distant relative of the deceased. Samuel Fleming, of Mansfield, is the only surviving brother.

PRESENTATION AT HOCKLEY.

Before leaving for her home just prior to the midsummer vacation, Miss Ella Courtney, who has resigned her position as teacher in Hockley Public School, was made the recipient of addresses and some handsome cut glass by her pupils and the members of the Bible Class of St. James' Church, Hockley. The two addresses read as follows:—

Hockley, June 29th, 1910.

Dear Miss Courtney,—As you are about to leave us, we, as a Bible Class do deeply mourn the loss that it is to us. You have been a most ardent and faithful teacher in our Sunday School, St. James' Church, Hockley, and especially to our class. We therefore ask you to accept this cut glass tea set, that when you look at it, it will remind you of the prosperous days we had under your kind teaching. We ever pray that God will be with you and that you still go on teaching as you have taught us.

Signed in behalf of the Bible Class.
WM. QUIGLEY, Supt.

Hockley, June 30th, 1910

Dear Miss Courtney,—We, the pupils of Hockley Public School, knowing that you are soon to remove from our midst, could not let this opportunity pass without showing the love and esteem in which you are held by the pupils of the school; also our appreciation of your kind and untiring service, as teacher for the past two years. Allow us now to present you with this cut glass fruit bowl, and bon-bon dish, as a small expression af our feeling towards you. Do not look on their intrinsic value, but upon the spirit in which they are given. May they always be a reminder to you of the days we spent together as teacher and pupils. Let us also convey to you our very best wishes for your future health and prosperity, and may you be long spared to enjoy the pleasures of this life.

Signed in behalf of the pupils.
THELMA PURDON,
OLIVE IRWIN.

Miss Courtney made brief, but feeling replies, thanking her pupils and co-workers in the Sunday School very heartily for their handsome gifts and kindly wishes for her future happiness and welfare.

Now Cured of Rheumatism

Cost him $100.00 for medicines which failed—Cured by DR. CHASE'S KIDNEY-LIVER PILLS.

Mr. James Clark, Maidstone, Sask., writes: "I suffered for four years with rheumatism in my shoulders and could not lift my arms above the head. I tried nearly all the advertised remedies but none of them gave me relief. It cost me at least $100.00 for medicines before I used Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills.

"With the use of this medicine, I soon found relief. I followed up this treatment for six months and was then quite free from rheumatism. While using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills I also used Dr. Chase's Backache Plaster when so stiff that I could scarcely bend. They always found the weak spot and gave relief while the internal treatment was bringing about a thorough cure."

The success of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills has been phenomenal. One pill a dose, 25 cents a box, at all dealers or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Toronto. Dr. Chase's Recipes will be sent free on request.

MINING IN AUSTRALIA

KALGOORLIE IS QUITE A NORMAL UP-COUNTRY TOWN.

An Unpleasant Red Dust Is the Substance From Which the Miner Gets His Precious Metal—The Wild Town of the Early Days Has Given Way to a Respectable Community, Under the Great Difficulty.

Whatever ideas you may have formed of a great mining camp, drawn from Bret Harte or the tales of the early Australian gold diggings, will be upset on your first introduction to Kalgoorlie. You have travelled 390 miles from Perth, dined, slept, and breakfasted in the train in as much comfort as if you had been travelling in England or France, and you find yourself in a prosperous, but apparently not over busy, provincial town, with broad streets, tramways, churches, good hotels, shops and the usual well-appointed, hospitable Australian club-house, where you may read most of the London papers within a month of their publication, or look on from a comfortable chair at a game of bowls played on a perfect green under rows of electric lights in the cool of the evening.

The streets of Kalgoorlie are not paved with gold, although it is one of the richest goldfields in the world. They are covered with a fine, red dust, which blows about very unpleasantly in the hot weather. But yet you may see within actual touch of the pavements some enterprising adventurer shaking the red soil in a cradle and extracting from it enough of the precious grains to make the labor worth his while; and there are shafts sunk in the very middle of some of the streets, though not the most frequented.

But the town has for the most part settled down to an ordinary, well-organized industry. A great tide of civilization, respectability, steady, respectable work has washed away the rough make-shifts of early days, the adventure and the wickedness, the fierce ardor and reckless profusion. The mine managers draw large salaries and settle disputes with the trade unions to which their men belong; the Stock Exchange keeps business hours in a handsome building, and no longer buys or sells from sight o'clock to past midnight in the open air; the gold escort no longer clatters off with horses and rifles on its long journey through the waterless bush, but watches a safe in a railway van; the women and children no longer sleep in tents or live in a constant, laborious, dreary picnic, but in trim villas with pretty gardens, go to school, and to church on Sundays, show their smart hats and dresses at the pretty racecourse, where the grass is kept green all the year round and flowers bloom in profusion round the lawns and about the stands.

But if you climb up to some point of vantage and look over the town you see that it is not like other Australian country towns. It spreads itself widely over the flat, red plain. There are no tall buildings, but iron chimneys, well stayed, rise high above the roofs. Gigantic, timbered poppet-heads stand over the mine shafts, huge mounds of "tailings" still retaining some of their gold, some of them with truck lines laid on them, are heaped up as high as if Nature had heaped them there. The houses thin out towards the outskirts, and seem to have been dumped down anywhere on the red soil, little white shanties with no sign of green about them, and a few better ones here and there with pepper trees and little gardens. The eye takes in the long lines of stacked firewood for the furnaces—no coal is used at Kalgoorlie—the iron skips loaded with ore drawn along the overhead wires, and the empty ones going back to the mine alongside them. The low, blue-grey scrub closes in on every side a limitless level of monotony, broken only by a few low hills, holding out no promise, no refreshment to eye or spirit. It is as if Nature had tried to cover up her buried treasure with the shabbiest of carpets so that covetous man should never suspect that in this dreary spot out of the beautiful places in the world he could find anything worth the finding.

We put on old, stained suits of khaki, took our stand in the narrow cage and dropped 1,250 feet down the boarded shaft, the higher tunnels of the mine, now jet-black caves, now dimly lighted, flashing past us. We lit candles and went along the rough-hewn passages—there are many miles of them in the different levels—from which the ore had been extracted. They were roughly roofed and held up by huge timbers here and there, and the narrow tramway line ran along their rock floors. At the end of one an hydraulic drill was pounding and thundering at the hard rock, making holes in which the blasting powder would presently explode and loosen the ore. Muffled reverberations from distant galleries told that the dark mine was full of workers. But there was nothing to show the inexperienced visitor that the rich gold was all about him—only rough lumps of grey stone, with sometimes a dull, leadlike glimmer where the rich telluride conceals its 30 or 40 per cent. of the precious metal. But sometimes the ore is so rich that it is brought up and lodged in safes just as it is, and I held little pieces in the hollow of my palm that contained each seven or eight pounds' worth of gold.

In the early days of the Western Australian goldfields water was more precious even than gold. There was very little to drink and none to wash in. But the whole field lies on a salty soakage, and very soon after the first rush vast condensers were working to produce distilled water. But this was at best a miserable makeshift, and at last a great enterprise was set in hand to give the now large population of the fields a satisfactory water supply. A practically limitless supply of water is conserved by a weir 23 miles from Perth and conveyed to the goldfields, a distance of 390 miles.

PALGRAVE.

That the Police Village of Palgrave is on the dawn of a new and progressive era is very amply evidenced by the expedience of both public and private improvements which are daily taking place in the village. It had been prophesied by certain classes that with the advent of local option in the municipality the village would come to destruction and ruin and that the grass would grow up in the streets and that no one would be residing in the village in five years to tell the tale.

The present progress of the village and the improvements constantly going on would not very happily substantiate any such prophesy.

On the other hand the ratepayers of the municipality very generously and almost unanimously voted one thousand dollars to be spent in local improvements which are at present carried on under the very able and efficient management of our worthy clerk, Mr. Robert Matson.

Before the snow flies the ratepayers expect to have a very substantial cement sidewalk past every man's door in the corporation, having first graded the streets in the most workmanlike manner for the cement walk.

In addition to all this improvement a very beautiful and highly satisfactory lighting system has been installed known as the Rice-Knight system. We are also informed that the Board intend planting maple trees every thirty feet throughout the length and breadth of the land. The trustee board has, we are informed, secured the assurance of the Board of Railway Commissioners of Canada that a subway will be built in our village under the G. T. R., which will greatly facilitate traffic and lessen the danger attending such level crossings.

We feel quite sure that when the various improvements now going on are completed, that Palgrave will be one of the most desirable villages in the Province in which to locate, convenient as it is to both the G. T. R. and C. P. R., and in addition it possesses all the other appurtenances of a town of much greater pretention.

Miss Robb, of Essex County, is at present visiting relatives in this locality.

Mrs. (Dr.) Reynor spent Tuesday of this week visiting Tottenham.

What might have turned out to be a very serious accident to little "Jack" McClelland occured on Saturday evening. He and Oliver Matson went to the river to wash a horse and as the little fellow laid the pail of water down near the horse's heels it kicked him violently in the stomach and for some time the friends felt uneasy. He, however, soon recovered and will be around again sound as ever, much to the joy of his many little and big friends who know him.

The thermometer registered 94 in the shade one day last week.

Unless rain soon comes the spring grain will be a disasterous failure in this locality. The roots are also suffering terribly from the drouth.

We regret to learn that Mr. Young, father of Rev. Mrs. Lunau, is not making any satisfactory progress toward recovery. Mrs. Lunau is at present staying with him in Toronto. We hope to hear that he will soon be well again.

NORTH ERIN GARDEN PARTY.

North Erin Presbyterians will hold their annual garden party on Friday evening, July 15th, instead of the date originally announced. The event will take place on Mr. S. Kannawin's grounds. Alton Brass Band and Alton Male Quartette will contribute to the programme.

CAMILLA.

The problem of pleasant and not unprofitable summer afternoons and evenings is not at all a complicated one when the garden party and picnic season is with us. Those who anticipated an enjoyable time at the picnic held in Deputy Reeve Anderson's grove, under the auspices of St. Andrew's Church on Dominion Day were not doomed to disappointment. Early in the afternoon the crowd began to assemble and a very sociable and happy one it was. Before tea was served and the games commenced the men stretched themselves lazily on the green grass in the shade of the maple and smoked silently, while those not addicted to the use of the weed conversed with their neighbors. The ladies who were not busily engaged in the booths and preparing supper were quiet for once and merely watched the cloud shadows afloat on the meadow. The fishing pond in one of the booths was a continual source of amusement to both the big and little children and their eyes grew large as they anxiously awaited to see what useful or ornamental article they would find on the hook. Supper was served in due time and the tables fairly groaned beneath its load of good things. One small (?) boy was heard to sing-

The window has a little pane
And so have I,
The windowje pane is in its sash,
I wonder why.

Evidently one of the girls was not afflicted in the same way for she sang,

Mary had a little lamb,
You've heard that rhyme before.
But have you heard that Mary passed
Her plate and had some more.

After justice had been done to the eatables, the games commenced. Races long and short were entered into by both boys and girls with a vim and vigor seldom seen. The football match between the stalwarts of Blount, and the Camilla team claimed the closest attention. Every man on both teams playing good hard, steady ball without any spectacular work. The backs, the half-backs, the quarter-backs, the wings and the goals were all in fine shape and there was not a poor player on the gridiron. However, luck was with the home team and they won out, the score being 2 to 0. Mr. Donald McDonald made an impartial referee. The proceeds amounted to $130 and the congregation intend making the picnic an annual event and each year shall prove better than its predecessor and the high standard of the picnic will be recognized by all the inhabitants of the surrounding country. The unseen sun still bathed the sombre landscape in a wealth of color touching the few stray clouds high above us, brightening the tops of the dark green spruce and maple as we wended our way homeward a tired, but happy crowd, and the fair young man from Blount with the dark-eyed girl sang,

Her waist is larger than her life
For life is but a span.

LAUREL.

On Thursday afternoon the parents and friends of the pupils of the public school were invited to attend the closing exercises. A programme of choruses, drills, recitations and speeches was given by the school. Mr. Hunter Nelson occupied the chair in a very graceful manner. Refreshments were served by the scholars to their guests. The whole proceedings reflected great credit upon teacher and pupils. During the programme on behalf of the scholars Miss Vera Ranton and Miss Bertha Nelson made a presentation to their teacher, Miss Marion Holliday, of a gold crescent brooch, set in pearls, accompanied with an appreciative address which made suitable reference to happy relations that existed between teacher and pupils during the past three years. Miss Holliday made a very feeling reply to the address and expressed her high appreciation of the beautiful gift from her scholars.

On Thursday evening a number of the Laurel young people gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Ward Trimble and spent a pleasant time. During the evening an address and presentation was made to Miss Marion Holliday, teacher of Laurel public school on the eve of her departure. The following is the address:

Laurel, June 30, 1910.

Dear Miss Holliday,—We have come together this evening realizing that this is the last evening we may enjoy together for some time. We are sorry that you must leave us, that duty calls you elsewhere for we value you throughout these three years of your life spent amongst us, much more than you are aware of. We shall miss you; not only in Sabbath School, Epworth League and Church Choir, where you so ably assisted, but in all our games and amusements of which you have taken such an active part. Your ever cheerful spirit and friendly manner as you mingled with us, not only caused us to become more deeply attached to you, but led us to regard you as a leader and always relied on your impartial judgment in all matters pertaining to our social functions. You are leaving us but you leave engraved on our memories a good name, outspoken for the right. You have ever used your influence to promote harmony and good will among us and for these many good qualities you shall be remembered. We ask you to accept this locket and chain as a little remembrance from the Basket Ball Club in which you have so willingly and fully done your part, and we also ask you that as you take up your work in another sphere that you will not forget your old friends at Laurel.

Signed:

For Health and Economy Eat more Bread

TEN cents will feed an ordinary family a day on first class bread. This does not mean ordinary bread. For there is an important difference between ordinary bread and first class bread.

It isn't a difference of looks or methods of making or baking. It is a difference of nutrition, food value, healthfulness. And this food value depends on the flour used. For there is a wide difference between flours.

If all flour were the best flour, then all bread, properly made, would be good bread. But all flour is not first class because all wheat is not first class. Wheat, you know, varies in quality almost as much as apples or potatoes; there are as many different grades of wheat as there are grades of butter—or wool.

And every difference in grade represents an actual difference in nourishing value, food elements, wholesomeness. Flour made from a low grade of wheat is by no means so healthful as flour made from high grade wheat. Now the wheat that goes into is of the very highest grade. It contains the highest possible percentage of nutritive value. The makers of "ROYAL HOUSEHOLD" maintain expensive laboratories and baking departments where skilled men scientifically analyse each day's milling. None but the very best Red Fyfe wheat—rich in nutrition and healthfulness—can pass. For this reason bread made from ROYAL HOUSEHOLD FLOUR contains the maximum of food value and furnishes the maximum of energy and strength. And for the same reason "ROYAL HOUSEHOLD" makes the finest pies, cakes, biscuits, muffins, rolls, and pastry of all kinds. It is the one flour that a housewife should use in order to have her household baking strictly first class.

"Ogilvie's Book for a Cook" with 125 pages of Recipes that have been tried and tested will be sent free to your address if you mention the name of your dealer. 33

NERVOUS SYSTEMS

Always Follows a Run Down Condition of the Blood.

It is an old story now that nervous people tell of how the blood becomes poor and thin, and then the nervous symptoms followed. How many really know that the thin blood was responsible for the nervous disorders? The nerves get all their nourishment from the blood, and as thin blood is deficient in nerve-building material, the nerves become starved and pain and nervous breakdown is the result. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are a tonic for the blood that supply it with the necessary elements to nourish and tone up the nerves and, the cause being removed, nature does the rest and health is fully restored. Mrs. Harry Patterson, Dauphin, Man., tells how she was cured of nervousness and general debility through the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. She says: "A few years ago I was all run down, and my nervous system apparently all broken up. I was weak, tired and nervous all the time. When I got up in the morning I seemed to be more tired than when I went to bed. I could not walk up an ordinary flight of stairs without sitting down panting for breath, and my nerves trembled like a leaf. I got so that it was almost impossible to do any housework, and so nervous that I wanted to cry about everything I did. I took several different medicines without the least benefit; then I read of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and decided to try them. After taking two boxes I felt a little better and I got a further supply which I continued taking for about a month, when I was as well as ever; could do all my housework without difficulty, and could walk for a long distance without being all tired out. In view of the wonders Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have done for me I sincerely recommend them to all weak, nervous, run-down people."

Sold by all medicine dealers or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

The bride, who was given away by her father, wore cream duchess satin with embroidered chiffon and pearls, a tulle veil and orange blossoms, and carried a shower of bridal roses. The bride's only attendant was little Phyllis McDonald as flower girl. After luncheon Mr. and Mrs. Poyntz left for a short trip, the bride wearing a tan rajah suit. On their return they will reside at 165 Beatrice street, Toronto.

Mr. Walter Loucks, of Flesherton, had a narrow escape from death the other day. While working about four feet from the floor a scantling gave way and threw him backward. At the same time the scantling swung around and struck him on the head, knocking him insensible. He was unable to work for a day or two.

John Ingleton, 50 years of age, committed suicide in Owen Sound recently by deliberately lying down on the C.P.R. track with his neck on the rail as a locomotive, with a caboose attached, approached. The head was completely severed from the body, but there were no other injuries.

Reuben Brain, an Englishman about 24 years of age, was killed last week at the White Cloud Island plant of the Crown Portland Cement Company, of Wiarton. He was working on a chute filled with gravel and clay when a bolt broke, precipitating him to the ground, about three tons of the earth from the chute pouring over him.

IT IS NOT IN THE BLOOD.

Medicine Taken Internally Cannot Cure Eczema. It is Caused by Germs.

Eczema cannot be overcome by ordinary treatment and the old-fashioned way of dosing the system with drugs. Eczema is caused by a parasitic germ that bores into the skin. It is generally a contagious disease. Until the parasite is completely destroyed and removed, eczema cannot be cured. Fully one-third of skin diseases are in the form of eczema.

We so thoroughly believe that Rexall Eczema Ointment will overcome eczema and allied skin ailments, that we unhesitatingly promise to promptly return the money paid us for it should it in any way be unsatisfactory to the user.

Because of its remarkable cleansing, antiseptic, germicidal, soothing and healing influence, Rexall Eczema Ointment has a very pronounced value in the treatment of skin diseases, especially where the form of ailment is of the chronic, aggravating sort. We highly recommend it for the dry scaly form or the weeping type, where there is a constant flow of ill-smelling excretion.

Rexall Eczema Ointment is very prompt in relieving pimples, blotches, skin discolorations, ringworm, acne, nettle rash, tetter, hives, ulcers, insect bites, and for healing sores and wounds. It is a pleasant smelling, grayish-white ointment, and is very cleanly for use. Two sizes, 50c. and $1.00. Sold only at our store.—The Rexall Store. T. F. & T. J. Brown.

SUNG THEIR LESSONS

Geography Set to Music an Old Time Teaching Scheme.

A PLAN OF YANKEE ORIGIN.

One of the Most Popular Airs in the List Used to Interest the Pupils in Their Studies Was "Auld Lang Syne"—"Bonny Doon" Also Liked.

Singing geography was a popular fad in the educational line in New York in olden days, particularly in up state school districts. It was of Yankee origin. It was never made part of the common school system of the state, but was taught outside the regular hours.

A set of wall maps known as Pelton's outline maps was used. There were no names of geographical divisions or places on them. The instructor would go over the map on which the lesson was found, pointing out with a pointing rod the different countries, cities, rivers, lakes or whatever might be the subject in hand, and at the same time the name of each division, place or body of water would be mentioned in song. The teacher, usually a man, would lead the class chorus as he pointed, and if the subject happened to be political divisions the song would run like this, to the tune of "Bonny Doon:"

Let North America be first
In our descriptive rhyme rehearsed.
Its northern bound the arctic waves,
Its east the Atlantic ocean laves.
The gulf of Mexico we see
Upon its southern boundary.
Its western and southwestern sides
Are washed by the Pacific tides.

The geographical verses were contained in the pupils' text book called "The Key to Pelton's New and Improved Series of Outline Maps." Among other things the following is found in the preface of one of these old time volumes:

"With respect to the versification, it is merely necessary to say that the design has been to put all the important geographical localities on the globe, in connection with much valuable matter, in a form which can be most easily committed to memory, and it is confidently believed that the exhilarating effect of harmonious sounds will greatly facilitate the acquisition of this knowledge, and care has been taken that none but popular and approved airs be inserted in the work."

"Auld Lang Syne" appears to have been regarded as an especially "popular and approved" air and was often used. In the very first lesson the pupils were taught to describe the earth by singing the following to this tune:

The earth is a large ball or globe
Whose surface has been found
Three-fourths with ocean waves submerged
And but one-fourth dry ground.

Two hundred millions of square miles
Earth's surface does embrace.
Eight hundred million people here
All find a dwelling place.

Tongue twisting names did not embarrass the geographical versifier, although the enunciation of all the pupils probably was not perfect when, for example, in the lesson on Asia they sang to the tune of "Bruce's Address" such lines as these:

Now in modulation sweet
Asia's rivers we repeat.
Obi first in Russia, greet,
Irtish river next.

Lest in sand behold Helmund,
Then northward goes Yarkund;
Be not turbid Oxus shunned,
Sihon river see.

Ural river next in place,
Attruck and Koor river trace;
Kizil Irmak then embrace
In our melody.

There were thirty-one states in the Union when singing geography was in vogue, and the pupils were taught to bound each of them in verse. California was then the newest state, having been admitted in 1850; was the last on the list, and its boundaries were thus defined:

On California's northern side vast Oregon is placed,
Both Utah and New Mexico upon the east are traced,
Upon its southern borders next may Mexico be found,
And broad Pacific's sparkling waves compose its western bound.

In thirty-four stanzas set to the time of "Bonny Doon" the geography class would make a tour of Europe and glean bits of information about various countries and cities visited. The tour would start in this fashion:

Now be our geographic rhymes
Transferred to European climes.
The grand divisions first we teach
With the metropolis of each.

Norway, a region bleak and cold,
By Christiania is controlled.
Sweden, that Charles the hero bred,
Takes Stockholm for its chief and head.

Russia in proud expansion sits
And to St. Petersburg submits.
Austria, with its imperial crown,
Vienna takes for its chief town.

Turkey, in southern Europe placed,
Is by Constantinople graced.
Greece, once for arts and arms renowned,
With glorious Athens still is crowned.

Thus the geography pupils sang on through the list of European nations and capitals.—New York Sun.

Enlivened the Play.

"Monte Cristo" was playing to a crowded house in a New York theater. In a box sat a man who had looked on the wine when it was red. When Monte mounted the rock in the sea and exclaimed, "The world is mine!" the man in the box shouted, "What'll you take for Hoboken?"—Brooklyn Life.

Silence is a figure of speech, unanswerable, short, cold, but terribly severe.—Parker.

Many dope fiends contracted the drug habit in the cradle

Certain dangerous drugs were given to them in their baby days in the form of "Soothing Syrups," "colic cures" and "infants' friends." The harmful effect of "soothers" containing opium, morphine, chloroform, chloral, etc., cannot be too strongly stated. Do not give baby a "soother" unless you positively must. Then give it and rest contented. Nyal's Soothing Syrup contains no opiates. It induces natural, healthy sleep—gives immediate relief to baby, calming the mother's tired nerves—does not put on soft, flabby flesh, making the little folks easy victims of childish diseases.

Nyal's

We wouldn't think of recommending Nyal's Soothing Syrup if we were not certain of its beneficial effects.

Anything you buy with the name Nyal's will give you entire satisfaction.

Remarkable cure of Chronic Eczema by use of DR. CHASE'S OINTMENT.

You could scarcely imagine a more severe test of this ointment than the cure of Mrs. Clark recorded here. For twenty years she suffered all the tortures of this terrible disease and tried in vain the prescriptions of doctors and the cures commonly recommended. Mr. Fred W. She doctored and tried everything for it but got no relief until she used Dr. Chase's Ointment which was recommended to her by a friend. She found that this brought relief and by continuing its use has been cured of Eczema. Semi-Steel Fire-Pot—Not Gray Iron

A FIRE-POT of a furnace should be able to endure tremendous heat and to repel the attacks of sulphur fumes.

The material commonly used for a fire-pot is gray iron. The Sunshine fire-pot is Semi-Steel.

Now, avoiding technical terms, gray iron has what may be called "open" pores. Through these "open" pores the destructive sulphur fumes attack the iron and hasten disintegration.

On the other hand, Semi-Steel is a close-grained material, with a smooth-as-glass surface which practically seals or "closes" up the pores. Semi-Steel easily repels the attacks of gas fumes and thus greatly prolongs the life of the fire-pot.

A Semi-Steel fire-pot weighs 20 per cent. heavier than the same size and pattern in gray iron. It is therefore better able to endure tremendous heat.

Semi-Steel is made by an exclusive McClary process. You can only get a Semi-Steel fire-pot with a McClary furnace. That is one strong reason why you should have the Sunshine installed in your home. Our agent in your locality will tell you many other reasons. Ask him.

Remember, the Sunshine is guaranteed, by the largest makers of furnaces in British Empire, to heat your home to your entire satisfaction. 45

GET AFTER THE WEEDS.

Every farmer owes it to himself and to his neighbor to see to it that no injurious weeds are allowed to make headway on his farm. The chief source of weed dissemination is through the seeds. Nature seems to have endowed weeds with many facilities for spreading their kind over the country that plants useful to man have not got. Why this is the case we do not know. But the fact remains, and weeds neglected and allowed to produce ripened seed are no respectors of farms. They will lodge on the well tilled farm as well as on the poorly tilled one, and begin to propagate their species and gain strength for further expansion. Thus it is that weeds in any neighborhood cannot be kept in check unless every farmer takes a hand in the game and prevents the spread of weeds from his own farm. A carefully planned weed campaign with every farmer co-operating, would in a comparatively short time rid the country of a great deal of damage caused by weed pests. Some of the more pernicious weeds such as the perennial sow thistle spread both by seeds and by the roots. These need extra watching. It takes time and labor, a serious matter in these days of help scarcity, but the effort would be worth while. A beginning could be made with the more obnoxious weeds. Make a dead set say on the sow thistle this season. Next season enter the lists against another one and be sure that every weed cut down is kept down.—The Canadian

THE HORSE.

His Appeal to His Master For Humane Treatment.

To thee, my master, I offer my prayer. Feed me and take care of me. Be kind to me. Do not jerk the reins. Do not whip me when going uphill.

Never strike, beat or kick me when I fail to understand what you want of me, but give me a chance to understand you. Watch me, and if I refuse to do your bidding see if there is not something wrong with my harness.

Do not give me too heavy loads. Never hitch me where water will drip on me. Keep me well shod. Examine my teeth when I fail to eat. I may have an ulcerated tooth. That, you know, is very painful. I am unable to tell you in words when I am sick, so watch me, and I will try to tell you by signs.

Pet me sometimes. I enjoy it, and I will learn to love you.

Protect me in summer from the hot sun. Keep a blanket on me in winter weather, and never put a frosty bit in my mouth, but hold it in your hands a moment first.

I carry you, pull you, wait patiently for you long hours, day or night. I cannot tell you when I am thirsty; give me clean, cool water often in hot weather.

Finally, when my strength is gone, instead of turning me over to a human brute to be tortured and starved, take my life in the easiest, quickest way, and your God will reward you in this life and in heaven. Amen.—Prize Poem by Swedish Children in Our Dumb Animals.

WHIPPED BY MACHINERY.

Automatic Floggers Used by Several European Armies.

Automatic flogging machines are among the military novelties of several European nations. For many years the whipping was always done by soldiers under the command of an officer, and the punishment varied, according to the personal relations subsisting between the soldier and his victim. It was to correct this disadvantage that the flogging machine was invented.

The machine is automatic in action, and as soon as the culprit is fastened in position a spring is tightened or loosened to gauge the exact force of the blow. A pointer is moved over a dial to the requisite number of strokes and the mechanism is started.

With perfect regularity the victim's back is scourged by the throngs, the handle of the whip being moved by a screw device after each stroke so that the lash does not fall on the same spot throughout the punishment.

Each blow is of uniform severity, and as soon as the required number has been given the machine comes to a rest, and the offender is released, with the assurance that the exact punishment ordered has been meted out to him.—Harper's Weekly.

The Last of the Ruffs.

In 1762 the rage for ruffs, such as are seen on many monumental effigies, began to decline. A writer in the London Chronicle of that year says of gentlemen's dress, "Their cuffs entirely cover their wrists, and only the edges of their ruffles are to be seen." It is said that a distaste for ruffs was first created so far back as 1613, when a woman named Turner wore them on her trial for the murder by poison of Sir Thomas Overbury. The French revolution of 1789 much influenced British fashion, and the picturesque cocked hat and ruffles then gave way generally to round hats and small ruffs. The period of their final disuse cannot be easily determined, as men of old fashioned or eccentric habits have worn ruffled shirt fronts within quite recent memory similar to those which, according to Planche's "History of British Costume," originated in the seventeenth century.

Much interest attaches to the big Aviation Meet to be held in Toronto for the week beginning July 9th, 1910 as practically all the leading Aeronauts of the world will be in attendance, while every known type of Aeroplane will be represented. The flights as arranged will take place over the lake and it is expected that a number of records will be broken as prizes aggregating $75,000 will be offered in the different events. The Meet is under the auspices of The Ontario Motor League. The honor of Canada will be upheld by J. A. McCurdy, of Baddeck, Nova Scotia.

Married by Accident

A Man Wins a Wife by Getting Into the Wrong House.

By REGINALD B. HAVEN

Copyright, 1910, by American Press Association.

On —— street is a block of ten houses, every house exactly like every other house. I once lived in one of these houses, and I never went home but I ran a risk of getting into the wrong house.

In the fourth house was a young lady whose appearance I especially admired. I considered her very pretty, and she was certainly very stylish.

"Now, that's just the girl I would like for a wife," I used to say when I saw her going into or coming out of her home.

One afternoon I went home, and, finding the front door ajar, I walked in, put my hat and overcoat in the hall closet and went upstairs to a sitting room on the second floor. The room was shut in by brick walls, and I seldom sat there without turning on the light. Being tired, I threw myself into an easy chair and, closing my eyes, sat thinking on a matter of business that had occurred during the day. Presently, hearing a footstep and looking up, I saw a woman's figure standing in the doorway. There was not enough light to distinguish who she was, but I was not long kept in ignorance. She pressed a button beside the door, and a bright electric light showed me the girl who lived two doors from me.

"How is this?" I stammered. "Have I got into the wrong house?"

"I expect you have," replied the girl.

"Pardon me. I assure you I had no idea— I'm very careless."

At that moment I heard the front door close. The girl heard it, too, and changed countenance.

"Good gracious, my aunt!" she exclaimed.

"Well?"

"It is very unfortunate your being here. She is a very suspicious woman."

"I see. It would grieve me terribly to have her think"—

"Dear me, she's coming up here!"

"Can I get out without meeting her?"

"No. Go in there."

She shut me up in a large closet, and the next minute I heard the harsh voice of an old woman in the adjoining room.

"Lois," she said severely, "that young man you admire so much who lives in this block is in this house. I was sitting in Mrs. Deacon's window, next door, and saw him come up and walk in at the front door. What are you doing in this room with all this light turned on?"

"Why, Aunt Jane, you must be mistaken."

"Mistaken! Do you think I haven't eyes? Oh, heavens, Lois! Can it be possible that you are—are a wicked, bad girl? Upon my word, I believe you are hiding a lover. I'm going to have a look."

She made for the only place in the room possible for concealment—the closet—and had her hand on the doorknob when I heard a slight scuffle, and the young lady said:

"Aunt Jane, before you open that door I wish to say something to you. I have been deceiving you. I have been wooed and won clandestinely by the young man you have referred to. He is in that closet."

I must hasten to protect the honor of one I had compromised by my stupidity. I flung open the door, put my arm around the girl who had been driven to this falsehood, threw back my head proudly and said dramatically:

"No power on earth shall separate me from my wife."

"Well, I declare!" exclaimed the old lady.

My reputed wife buried her face in her hands, whether because the seriousness of the matter had occurred to her or whether to conceal laughter at its absurdity I did not know.

"Do you mean to say," continued the old lady to me, "that you are married to my niece?"

There would be no use in mincing matters. I swore that I was her niece's husband.

"And you, Lois," continued the aunt—"are you really married to him?"

A faint "Yes" came from under the girl's hands.

"Well, well, well! How you two young people could have done your courting without my finding you out is remarkable. How did you manage it?"

"Love laughs at locksmiths," I said knowingly, not having any explanation ready.

"I should think so," said the aunt impressively. "How long have you been married?"

I didn't dare risk an answer to this question, fearing to be caught in a trap. I threw the burden on my bride.

"Lois, dear," I said, "tell your aunt all about it. She will be more forgiving at getting the story from one she loves. Or would you prefer sitting down with her alone and talking it all over with her?"

"I think I would like to have a little time," stammered Lois faintly.

"And I think I want the whole story this minute," cried the aunt.

"Had I not better withdraw?" I suggested. I was beginning to get very hot in the face. Confound these houses built in blocks! I'll never live in one again!

By this time Lois had thought what answer would be less likely to sink us deeper in the mire. It occurred to her that if she said we had just been married the result in the end would be less compromising, so she told her aunt that we had been married that day at noon. She hit upon this hour because she had been away from home at that time. Then her aunt asked if we had been married by a clergyman. Lois, dreading that the old woman would pounce on the dominie, told her that we had been married by a justice of the peace.

"A justice of the peace!" exclaimed the old lady contemptuously. "Do you call that a marriage? I shall telephone for our own rector at once. If you can't be married respectably you shall at least be married religiously."

She was making for the telephone. We both clutched her.

"Madam," I cried, "permit me to say a word. I beg of you to leave me and my—your niece alone together for awhile that we may talk this matter over. These unconventional marriages are liable to bring a stain upon the parties concerned. You certainly don't wish your niece to suffer in that way, do you? Give us an hour to decide as to when and how we shall publish our union to the world."

With a sniff the old lady bounced out of the room.

The girl and I looked at each other. We would have laughed, but the affair was far too serious for mirth.

"You've got me into a terrible pickle," said Lois, much irritated.

"I? I ask a thousand"—

"Why did you say we were married? I only said we were engaged. There was a retreat from that. There is none from marriage."

"An engagement doesn't warrant a girl having a lover in a closet."

"I don't suppose it does."

"Marriage is the only thing that will excuse that."

"But how are we going to get out of it?"

"Can't you confess the whole thing? It's a splendid joke, awfully funny. Hasn't your aunt any sense of humor?"

"About as much as a cat has of poetry."

"What do you suggest?"

"I can't think of anything unless I do as you say—confess—but that would be the same thing as acknowledging criminality. Aunt Jane would never believe anything else."

"Then you can't get out of it without being smirched, at least to your aunt?"

"No, and she can never keep the secret. Others will know it. It will go everywhere. What shall I do?" She wrung her hands.

"There's another trouble in the way," I said. "She asked each of us if we admitted we were married. That in the presence of a witness makes us man and wife."

"Oh, my goodness gracious!"

There was a silence, at the end of which I said:

"I'm responsible for all this. Now let me make an admission. I have seen and admired you before, and I have said to myself, 'That's a girl I would like for my wife.' I heard your aunt refer to me as a person you had"—she hung her head—"had admired. Now, suppose we let the matter rest, pledging your aunt to keep our secret till we can determine what we wish to be the outcome of this singular adventure. I will keep my home; you can keep yours. If we decide not to be man and wife we can find some way out of it with your aunt. If we wish to be married we can have a more pretentious ceremony than the one just performed."

We filled up the hour deliberating, but found no better plan than this. Then we rejoined Aunt Jane, and I acted as spokesman.

"Aunt Jane," I said—"I presume I may now call you aunt—I admit that I have done very wrong in hurrying your niece into a secret marriage, especially since my affairs are not just now in a condition that will enable me to take care of a wife in the style to which she has been accustomed. I ask a short time in which to get them in such condition, and I shall then acknowledge the marriage. As for myself, I would be willing to do this now, but Lois, whom we both love and whose reputation we are both bound to protect, thinks that we had better wait awhile, then announce an engagement and after a brief one celebrate a marriage without saying anything about the one that has occurred. Meanwhile I ask permission to visit my wife just as I would visit her with your permission to win her. I should have taken this course before. The strength of my love for her is my only excuse for not doing so. I am convinced that if she turns out to be as estimable a lady as her aunt I shall have won a treasure."

Aunt Jane gave me reason to be proud of myself for this speech by saying that it was never too late to do the right thing and she hoped I would prove myself as worthy as my words indicated.

I kissed the old lady at my departure, and my wife followed me to the door for the ostensible purpose of receiving a marital salute. I offered to avail myself of the opportunity, but Lois drew back.

I then returned to my own home, having been in the wrong house an hour and a half, during which I had married a wife to whom I had never before spoken a word and had conciliated her guardian.

I was not long winning my wife's consent to a public engagement and soon got my affairs in shape for a public wedding. When we entered the church there was not a person present who knew that the union of the contracting parties occurred from the groom having got into the wrong house.

SPEARING THE CACTUS.

Customs of the Natives of the Mexican State of Sinaloa.

Sinaloa is a long state, comparable almost with Chile, as it lies along the west coast of Mexico, just as Chile lies along the Pacific shore of South America.

Like most new countries, the most interesting part of this fertile state is its inhabitants, possibly because the country is so fertile. Game is abundant and easily caught, and the fruit of the great pithaya cactus is ripe almost from season to season. Every native, whether mounted or afoot—and most natives ride—carries a slender stick ten feet long, sharpened at one end and the point hardened with fire.

One supposes these sticks to be rather primitive lances until one sees the Indian spear a cactus fruit from a branch seven or eight feet above his head. These pithayas contain many seeds and a little blood red pulp, all of which, except the spines, is food for the Indian.

All day long these Indian men wander through the jungle, a wall of green broken only here and there by the old trails of half wild cattle, gathering the cactus fruit. It would seem that some would be dried or at least taken to the brush jacal, which represents home to the Indian. But, no; he sits down and eats what he gathers immediately. If his wife wants any of the fruit she goes and gets it herself. She also gathers the food for the babies.—Forest and Stream.

IT DIDN'T CURE HIM.

Why One Man Has a Distinct Dislike For Buttermilk.

"When I was a youngster," said a state official the other day, "I was poisoned by an ivy vine. My nose got very red and swelled up twice its natural size. The infection spread to my cheeks, and they were all covered with blotches.

"I was told to use buttermilk. I bought a gallon and drank it. I bought another gallon the next day and got outside of that. In fact, I drank so much buttermilk that the price went up about 15 cents a gallon in that community within a very few days. But the poisoning was not getting any better. It was not improving one bit, and I couldn't understand it.

"I told the people who had recommended the buttermilk that it was not helping me. 'Why, I bet I have swallowed a barrel of buttermilk within the past week,' I told them.

"'You drank it?' they shouted back at me.

"'Of course,' I replied. 'What did you expect me to do with it?'

"'Why, we meant for you to bathe your face with buttermilk, not drink it,' was the answer.

"I pretty nearly collapsed. To this day I can't look buttermilk in the face."—Kansas City Journal.

Paraguay Lace.

Making lace by hand is a well developed art in Paraguay. It was taught the natives 200 years ago by the missionaries and has been transmitted from generation to generation till it is now quite general throughout the republic. Some towns are devoted to making a certain kind of lace. In one town of 8,000 or 9,000 inhabitants almost all the women and children and many of the men make lace collarets, handkerchiefs and ladies' ties. Another town makes lace embroidery and others drawn thread work, such as centerpieces, tray mats, teacloths and doilies. The designs used in making the lace are taken from the curious webs of the semitropical spiders that are so numerous there. On this account it is called "nanduti," an Indian name which means spider web.

Preaching and Practice.

W. S. Gilbert on one certain occasion was on a visit to a friend, the owner of a fine English country house. On the morning after his arrival he was chatting with his host before breakfast when he became suddenly aware that family prayers were about to be read. The household filed in, and the distinguished guest knelt down on the spot where he happened to be standing. Looking up, he caught his host's eye fixed on him with a warning glance, which he, however, failed to read aright. The service began, "Almighty Father, who hast made all men alike" (more telegraphic glances), "rich and poor, gentle and simple"—then, unable to contain himself any longer, the host called out, "Gilbert, you are kneeling among the servants!"

THE FARMER.

The farmer leads a merry life,
He has not much to do,
But just to raise a few pork chops,
To sell to me and you.
And if he wants a motor car,
To save his lazy legs,
Then all that's requisite is just
To raise the price of eggs.

The farmer is a happy man,
He drinks the richest milk,
His daughters dress in satins,
And his wife can dress in silk.
For him the Frahmas cackle,
And for him the Jersey moo;
I think I'll quit this city life,
And be a farmer, too.

Happening to notice the above lines in a recent issue of a city daily, I was prompted to pen the following lines, in which I have endeavored to put the matter from the standpoint of those who till the soil:—

The farmer leads a busy life,
He has a lot to do.
He has to feed the squealing pigs,
He sells to me and you.
And if he wants a motor car,
To save his weary legs,
He hitches up his old gray mare
To take to town the eggs.

The farmer is a sober man,
He has to drink skim milk,
His daughters hoe potatoes,
And his wife she wears no silk.
He sells the Brahma's cackle fruit,
And the fruit of the Jersey too,
He has to work from sun to sun,
And his wife is never through.

The prisoner works eight hours a day
And has his board thrown in,
The farmer works sixteen a day,
Before he can turn in.
Oh, do not leave your city home,
To be a farmer too,
The joys of life you'll not enjoy,
You'll have too much to do.

THE MONTENEGRIN.

He Is Hospitable, but Dearly Loves the Vendetta.

To listen to a Bulgar singing is to make one's flesh creep or want to weep. The centuries of cruel oppression are only too manifest in Bulgarian music and words, but a Montenegrin grows restless over his songs and nurses the powers that forbid him to emulate his forefathers' deeds en masse across the frontier. He does so whenever he can, but only in twos and threes.

When the Montenegrin goes raiding across the border it is really a more sporting affair than the well equipped and organized outings of the Bulgar komitatchis." With him it is usually a private act of revenge or vendetta to which he invites one or two friends. Then they steal across the border at night, find their man, do their best to kill him and then make tracks homeward with the whole district at their heels. Perhaps the method of killing is not up to the standard of western sport, for they shoot their victim "sitting," so to speak, and do not give him a chance, but as it is the recognized system on both sides little can be said.

This custom makes men very wary, and the stranger can appreciate the reason when he sees a plowman, for instance, attending to his duties with a rifle slung over his back. But in spite of this they are the essence of honor and hospitality. As their guest no one can come to any harm, and they will do all in their power to make his stay among them pleasant and safe.—Wide World Magazine.

A Clever Ruse

But It Was Very Unexpectedly Thwarted.

By WILLARD BLACKMAN

Copyright, 1910, by American Press Association.

On coming home from business I found my wife in the dumps.

"What's the matter, dear?" I asked.

"It's all up with us."

"Bottom dropped out of the universe?"

"Worse. Aunt Abigail will have to live with us. She's written that her friend with whom she has had a home is to give up her house the 1st of May, and that throws her out. I am her only relative, and of course she expects me to take her in."

"She's a bit cranky, isn't she?"

"Cranky is no name for it."

"Well, we'll have to make the best of it."

Aunt Abigail arrived. We had previously considered our home entirely our own. With the coming of our relative we saw at once that all this was changed. She settled herself down with an appearance of permanency that made my blood run cold.

"Well," she exclaimed, looking about her, "how did you ever come to build this house down in a hollow—it must have been a swamp once—when you could as well have put it up on that hill, where you could see something?"

"We live here winter and summer, Aunt Abigail. Up there we would freeze in cold weather."

"Freeze! Nonsense! Some people are always afraid they'll breathe a little fresh air. I'm not. I sleep with my window open, and I like to have a gale blowing in right on me. You should have fronted your house to the south.

"I can't stand this. We must get rid of her, I said to my wife."

"To turn her out would be awful."

"We needn't do that. We can fix it so that she will go of her own accord."

"For heaven's sake explain."

"You know the homeopathic principle—like cures like. Well, my Uncle Robert is more disagreeable, if that is possible, than your Aunt Abigail. He is a dictatorial old curmudgeon, with no respect for any one's opinion but his own. He is as poor as a church mouse, living in a miserable room in a rookery by himself. He amuses himself abusing his neighbors from his window and shying anything he can get his hands on at the cats. Now, it has occurred to me to bring him here as a foil for your aunt. She can't possibly endure to stay in the house with such a man, and when she's gone I'll find a way to get rid of Uncle Robert. Perhaps they may both go to get rid of each other."

"Your plan seems rather impracticable to me, Billy, but I have a good deal of confidence in those roundabout ways of yours. Suppose we try it?"

So I wrote Uncle Robert offering a home temporarily and, if he liked it, as long as he lived. He accepted eagerly, and it was not long before he was down upon us bag and baggage.

"My dear boy," he exclaimed, patting me on the back, "how you do remind me of your father! He and I were inseparable as boys, and I've carried you on my shoulder often. And to think that I'm to have a home with you! Put me anywhere. A garret is good enough for a broken down old codger like me. Phew! Somebody's been smoking here. Do you smoke? How I hate tobacco! It makes me sick."

"I won't smoke any more in the house since you've come, uncle," I said.

"Oh, don't mind me. I can stand anything; got to stand it. I've made a dead failure of life and don't deserve anything else. You don't mind my opening the window, do you—just to let the odor out?"

"Fanny has a bad cold, you know."

"Just the thing to cure her. Let her breathe the cool air of heaven."

Up went the window and out of the room went Fanny. Half an hour after my uncle arrived dinner was announced. I was watching our guests when they entered the dining room. It was like a dog and a cat at first catching sight of each other. Both seemed to crouch for an encounter. Neither spoke to the other for some time after taking seats at table. Then a remark of Uncle Robert's ruffled Aunt Abigail.

"This women's voting craze"— he was beginning.

"Voting what, sir?"

"Craze, madam," raising his voice.

"I'm not deaf. I heard you well enough. I object to you calling woman's suffrage a craze."

"Are you an advocate of woman's suffrage, madam?"

"I most assuredly am."

"I believe in any one who advocates a principle standing by that principle and not attempting to straddle"—

"Sir!"

"That is, to equivocate or knuckle down, defending the cause with all his or her strength. Per contra, I reserve the same privilege for myself. Woman's suffrage I consider the most abominable, diabolical, illogical rot that was ever sprung on a Christian people."

"And I consider it one of the holiest uses"—

"Aunt Abigail," interposed my wife, "do let me help you to this little bit of wing. You're not eating enough to feed a sparrow."

"I'm inclined to think," remarked Uncle Robert, "that there's a good deal in this new idea of diet. This man what's-his-name who is proving that the less we eat the more work we can do is going to create a revolution."

"Have you adopted his idea?" asked Aunt Abigail spitefully.

Considering that I had just filled Uncle Robert's plate for the second time this was unkind.

"I have not, madam, for the reason that I am not yet satisfied that his views are correct. I'm nothing if not scientific. I must see a thing proved before I adopt it."

"Would you prove woman's suffrage before adopting it?"

This was quite bright of Aunt Abigail.

"I admit," replied Uncle Robert, "that to prove it before adopting it would be impossible. It isn't necessary to prove it. Any fool can see that the idea is ridiculous."

"Uncle," I interrupted for the purpose of calling a truce and preventing Aunt Abigail from firing a return shot, "let me fill your glass."

"No, sir," putting his hand over it—"not at all, sir. I drink just one glass of wine with my dinner. And that's enough for any man."

"Quite right," I replied and filled my own for the third time.

"One is too much for any man, especially an old man," snapped the aunt. "Nothing is so disgusting to me as an old toper."

The shot, while it applied partly to me, was fired at Uncle Robert.

"Not at all," he replied. "One glass is good for the system. You know what St. Paul says. 'Take a little wine for the stomach's sake.'"

"Yes," retorted Aunt Abigail, "and I know that the devil can quote Scripture."

This was so well turned that I felt like patting the old lady on the back. But it did not squelch Uncle Robert for the simple reason that he was unsquelchable. The skirmishing went on, getting hotter and hotter, till at last, to prevent an open rupture, my wife arose from the table. She, poor woman, was dreading a fracas, and I was not anxious to have a break occur so early in the game.

As soon as Fanny and I were alone together we sat down and laughed.

"Did you ever see anything work more beautifully?" I said, slapping my leg.

"Never."

"Let them go their own gait. My opinion is that one or the other will get out within a week."

Every day my uncle came to me and said that he couldn't live in the same house with a cat and was going tomorrow. Every day Aunt Abigail went to Fanny and said she could not possibly endure that opinionated old heathen and she was casting about for another home, but it was dreadful that she should be alone in the world, with no one to love but Fanny, and Fanny must needs be incumbered by all her husband's relatives. I told my uncle that if I were deprived of the comfort of caring for my father's brother in his old age it would break my heart. Fanny made faint hearted attempts to quiet her aunt and agreed with her that my uncle was a trifle hard to get on with, regretting at the same time that he had the same claim on me that her aunt had on her. It is true that occasionally there would be a lull in the hostilities and we would find the two chatting quite amicably. But this was when they happened to strike some subject which was a pet with both. As soon as they drifted into topics on which they disagreed the roar of battle recommenced.

Several weeks passed in this way, and Fanny and I were getting impatient for the denouement, when one day uncle came to me and said that he would like to have a few words with me and Fanny alone. He looked very serious, and I felt quite sure he would announce his departure. He was a born gentleman, and nothing would be further from his nature than to hurt one's feelings, and to appear ungrateful would break his heart. I called Fanny into the library, shut the door and waited for the old man to speak.

"My dear boy," he began, taking my hand, "and my dear little girl," taking Fanny's hand, "I have something to announce which will surprise you. I am going to leave you!"

"Oh, uncle!" we both exclaimed, trying hard to appear much disappointed, even shocked.

"Yes, I am going away, and your aunt is also going."

This was indeed a surprise.

"Your kindness has brought about a great change in two lonely lives. For a time it seemed to both of us that we must thwart your plans for the happiness of both of us. It has not seemed that we can live under the same roof together."

He paused, and I thought he was going to shed tears. Then he added abruptly:

"We are both going to leave you tomorrow."

"Both?"

"Yes, both. We are to be quietly married at 9 o'clock and leave on a short wedding trip on the 10 o'clock train."

"Goodness gracious!" from Fanny.

"Great Scott!" from me.

"But we shall be gone only a few days."

"And then!" exclaimed Fanny and I breathlessly.

"And then," resumed the old man, putting a hand on each of our heads, "we return to spend the rest of our lives with our dear niece and nephew."

Heaven helps those who help themselves. At any rate, heaven came to our relief. I inherited $20,000 from a maternal uncle. Of this I put $5,000 on a house for the old couple and invested the rest in an annuity for them. Strangely enough, they are quite contented together.

ELEPHANTS AS LABORERS.

They Work in Forests and Mills Preparing Teakwood for Market.

In the lumber yards and saw mills of India, elephants are employed to aid in preparing teakwood for shipment. In the forests and at the ports also these big creatures handle the timber. They drag the logs to the streams and arrange the booms; they stack the planks, and they carry all sorts of lumber at the direction of their masters. Every saw mill has its elephants and there are some companies which employ several hundred. The average institution, however, can afford but few, for the animals are costly, a green one bringing $800 and a prize worker often as much as $2,000.

The elephants come from the forests of Upper Burma. The wild ones are all owned by the Government, which has an elephant department to catch and care for them. The elephant commissioner keeps track of the wild herds and annually sends out men to hunt them and catch the young bulls, which are trained and are finally disposed of to the lumbermen.

These huge beasts handle logs of great weight, writes F. G. Carpenter, writing of scenes he has visited. "An elephant would kneel down before the middle of a log, crowd his tusks under it and then, throwing his great trunk over the top, would raise it bodily and carry it to the truck upon which it was to be pushed to the buzz saw. If the log proved very heavy he would rest one end on the ground and drag it. An elephant piling lumber would lift the timbers up and lay them down on the others as evenly as though it had measured each piece. In some cases where it was necessary to carry two logs at a time the men tied a rope around them and the elephant would pick up the end of the rope with his trunk and place it over his tusk and then, raising his head, walk off with it. The elephants gather up the scraps of lumber and lay them so that the workmen can rope them into bundles. They also work at piling the boards and loading for the steamers.

At the lumber camps they not only carry the logs to the streams, but aid in forming the rafts and booms. They wade or swim about, according to the depth of the water, towing the logs this way and that. When the logs come to the ports they break the booms by pushing out the key log. They then take the timbers out of the water and put them on the cars, which carry them to the mill. In some places the elephants work together, and there are boss elephants who lead the others up to their work and place them with their trunks when they are ready. They have to be carefully fed, and each must have his bath twice a day. During this operation they sit down while buckets of water are thrown over them. After that their masters scrub them with rough brushes and curry them, as it were, all over. As the water is dashed upon them they wag their tails and flap their ears and grunt in joy.

Lord Rothschild's Influence.

A pleasing story is told apropos of the prestige of the great house of Rothschild and its influence in City circles of London. A young scion of a noble house was given a letter of introduction to Lord Rothschild. In this it was stated that the young man, though undoubtedly talented, had had the misfortune to be wholly thrown upon his beam-ends owing to the death of his father, who had succumbed to grief on account of his bankruptcy. The letter wound up asking Lord Rothschild to do his very utmost for a deserving case. After having read the note, Lord Rothschild took the young man by the arm, and walked with him from the Rothschilds' offices in St. Swithin's Lane, past the Bank of England, through Throgmorton street, and past the Stock Exchange, introducing him on the way to several well-known brokers and financiers. Then, shaking hands with him, he wished him "good-day" and "good luck." "But," said the young man in astonishment, "are you not going to do anything for me?" "My dear fellow," replied Lord Rothschild, "if you are one half as clever as I am assured you are, you yourself will know what to do." The young man was bright enough to take the hint, and not only obtained unlimited credit in the City through the prestige of the great financier's friendship, but soon made the headway which has since led to success.

Three Distinguished Brothers.

Although he probably had high hopes for his sons, it is doubtful if John Dewar, the Perth distiller, imagined for one moment that they would attain the high positions they at present occupy. One, Sir John, was made a baronet three years ago, Sir Thomas was knighted in 1902, and now Arthur Dewar, K.C. M.P., Solicitor-General for Scotland since 1909, has been appointed a Scottish judge. There are few more popular members of the House than Mr. Dewar, and it is interesting to note that when he first entered the field of politics as candidate for South Edinburgh in 1899 his opponent was the late Gen. Wauchope. The contest was a sharp and exciting one, and, notwithstanding the popularity of the general, Mr. Dewar was returned with a handsome majority of 881.

Wealthy Man, Unlucky Sportsman.

Though the world has treated him well enough in most respects, Lord Ellesmere has the reputation of being one of the unluckiest of sportsmen. It would be hard to count the number of times that he has just failed to bring off important events. His horses have come in second in the Derby, the Oaks, the Goodwood Cup, the One Thousand Guineas, and the Doncaster Cup, so that the superstitious might well see the interposition of some malignant destiny in his persistent ill-fortune.

An Invisible Item.

"Have you your expense account?" asked the junior member of the firm.

"No," answered the commercial traveler. "My expense account is in my new overcoat."

"That relieves my mind. My partner was trying to figure whether your new overcoat wasn't somewhere in your expense account."

THE BARGAIN CHASE.

American Women and the Shopping Game Mania.

More money is wasted every year by women buying needless things under the excitement of the bargain hunt than is spent in all the gambling houses and race tracks put together, says Mary Heaton Vorse in Success Magazine. When you say that I have no statistics to prove this I answer that I have common sense and have spent much time in city shops. I know, too, what I am capable of, and I am but a half hearted hunter. I know what my friends do. It isn't for nothing that I have seen earnest young students of economics succumb to this hunting instinct and fare forth to buy ninety-eight cent undergarments.

It is not only in the stores frequented by poor or uneducated women that I have seen the more brutal instincts of the human race come to the surface. I have seen a charming looking elderly woman in a high class store snatch a dress length of gray voile from the hands of another elderly woman, and the reason I happened to see these sights was because I myself was at the sale looking at garments I didn't want and didn't need and buying them.

The bargain chase, the shopping game passion or sport, life work or recreation—for it may be any one of these, according to the temperament of the woman—has American women well in its grip. Hardly one of us escapes some one of the psychological deviations from the normal which I have mentioned.

READ HIS FACE.

The Youthful Amateurs Were Sure He Was a Philanthropist.

They were youthful enthusiasts in physiognomy. On the seat opposite in the train was a man of commanding figure, massive brow and serious expression. "Splendid face!" one of them explained. "What do you suppose his life work has been?"

"A lawyer?" suggested the other.

"No-o; there's too much benevolence in that face for a lawyer."

"Maybe a banker?"

"Oh, no! A man with an expression like that couldn't have spent his life in merely turning over money."

"He might be an editor."

"An editor! Cutting and slashing his enemies at every turn and even his friends occasionally for the sake of a smart paragraph? You can't read faces. That man's a philanthropist or engaged in some sort of public spirited work. Why, there isn't a line that doesn't indicate strength of purpose and nobility! Look at that curve there on the left!"

At the next station an old countryman took his seat beside the man with massive brow and soon entered into a conversation with him, in the course of which he asked the latter "what was his line."

The two opposite held their breath in the intensity of their interest.

"Oh, I've got a little tavern and butcher shop back in the country a bit!" was the proud reply. "My wife tends to the meals and I do my own killing."—Youth's Companion.

HOW MANY REALIZE THE MARVELLOUS VALUE OF FRUIT

IN CURING MANY DISEASES?

Wonderful Success of "Fruit-a-tives" —The Famous Fruit Medicine

Fruit juice consists of about 92% water, 8% of sweet matter, and only 1% of an intensely bitter substance. Careful experiments show that it is this bitter principle, which is the active or medicinal material of fruit juice.

Under certain conditions, the bitter principle can be made to replace or transform some of the sweet atoms in the juice, thus making a new compound which is much more active medicinally than the ordinary juice.

Many fruits were analyzed and it was found that the juices of apples, oranges, figs and prunes gave the best results. These fruit juices, having been made more active by the secret process of changing the sweet principle into the bitter, are combined with tonics and antiseptics and made into tablets. These tablets are the famous fruit medicine—"Fruit-a-tives"—known in every part of Canada for their wonderful curative qualities in diseases of the Stomach, Liver, Bowels, Kidneys and Skin.

"Fruit-a-tives" is the only medicine in the world made of fruit juices. 50c. a box, 6 for $2.50 or trial size, 25c.

Animal Oddities.

Sparrows have three broods in a year.

Horses seldom suffer from decayed teeth.

Snails bore through rocks by means of an acid they exude.

The harpy eagle of Brazil feeds exclusively on monkeys.

A mouse can gnaw a hole through a one inch board in three hours.

The Speculators.

Many speculators think it a great hardship that they have to sit down and wait for the crops to grow.—New York Evening Post.

Some of the charges as to bucket shop methods make the gambler who deals off the bottom of the pack seem a comparatively conscientious person.—Washington Star.

Waves of Water.

There is no tide in the Mediterranean sea.

The Merrimac river is 182 miles long, including the Pemigewasset.

The highest of all navigable rivers is the Tsangpo, which flows for nearly 1,000 miles at an elevation of from 11,000 to 14,000 feet.

Three rivers as big as the Rhine would just about equal in volume the river Ganges, three Ganges the Mississippi and two Mississippis the Amazon.

The destruction of the house fly is a public duty. Almost every American State Board of Health is carrying on a crusade against him.

His filthy origin and habits, and the fact that his body is generally laden with disease-producing germs, makes him one of the greatest enemies of the human race.

—Erin citizens were delighted on Wednesday last when they were entertained for upwards of an hour to a choice programme of music rendered by the Dundalk Silver Cornet Band which came in with an Excursion party to the Park that day. The band which is under the leadership of Mr. A. E. Colgan, of the Dundalk Herald staff, is one of which the citizens of that burg should be proud. Their selections were all well rendered and their playing would compare very favorably with many bands of a larger and more pretentious scale.—Erin Advocate.

HOW TO KEEP YOUNG

Keep in the sunshine. Avoid excesses of all kinds. Eat moderately at regular intervals. Cultivate a habit of contentment, and keep the bowels regular and liver active by using Dr. Chase's Kidney and Liver Pills. No treatment is so definite and so satisfactory for this purpose. None so trustworthy and economical.

GOOD MOVE.

The Ladies' Aid Society of St. Andrew's Church, at its monthly meeting on Tuesday evening, passed a resolution to the effect that all lady shoppers in future do not purchase on Saturday evenings after 8 o'clock, of anything which they cannot carry home. This is a very reasonable, and considerate movement. There is no good reason why horses, and delivery boys should be kept up until nearly midnight delivering the groceries, which might just as well have been ordered earlier in the day.

MAHARG—DERMOTT.

A very pretty wedding took place at the home of Messrs. Joseph and Samuel Dermott, of Elba, on Wednesday, June 29th, when their sister, Miss Mary, was united in marriage to Mr. George Maharg, of Camilla. The ceremony was performed by Rev. G. W. Rose, of Alton. Promptly at three o'clock the bridal party entered the lawn to the strains of the Lohengrin wedding march, played by Miss Ethel Aikins, and took their places under an arch of evergreens, decorated with pink and white ribbons, white roses, and large white wedding bells. The bride, who was given away by her brother, wore a gown of white taffetta, trimmed with white lace, and insertion, and carried a shower boquet of white carnations. She wore a long embroidered tulle veil daintily arranged over a wreath of orange blossoms. The bridesmaid was Miss Annie McCague, of Mono, who wore a handsome costume of white mercerised mull, trimmed with valenciennes lace, and insertion, and carried a boquet of pink carnations. The groom was supported by his cousin, Mr. Robert Lindsay, of Primrose. The groom's gift to the bride was a gold watch and chain, to the bridesmaid a gold brooch, set with emeralds, and to the groomsman a tie pin, set with pearls. After the happy couple had received the congratulations of the guests, a sumptuous wedding repast was served. The tables were beautifully decorated with pink and white carnations and maiden hair fern. The bride was the recipient of a large number of pretty and costly wedding gifts. Among the friends from a distance, who were present at the wedding, were:—Miss C. Maharg, Detroit; Mr. and Mrs. J. Service, Redickville; Mr. and Mrs. J. K. Rinn, Honeywood; Mr. and Mrs. Archibald Irwin, Orangeville; Mr. and Mrs. John Harshaw, Orangeville; Mrs. W. Bowles, Chicago.

GOURLAY—SUTHERLAND.

Wednesday afternoon at half past three, the home of Mr. and Mrs. James H. Sutherland, in Close Ave., Toronto, was the scene of an interesting event when their second daughter, Mary Snell (Dimple), was united in marriage with Mr. W. Whiteford Gourlay, son of Mr. and Mrs. William Gourlay. The Rev. A. Logan Geggie performed the ceremony in the presence of only the immediate relatives and a few intimate friends. The drawing room was pretty with marguerites in every direction, a banking of the flowers being arranged where the bridal party stood. Miss Kathleen Stevenson played the wedding march. Mr. Sutherland gave his daughter away, the latter wearing a dainty embroidered mull gown with a wreath of lillies of the valley in her hair, and carrying a shower of the same flowers. Her sister, Miss Grace Sutherland, was bridesmaid, gowned in pale green ninon de soie over silk, and Mr. Douglas Gourlay supported his brother. After the wedding dejeuner Mr. and Mrs. Gourlay left for Muskoka, the bride traveling in a tailored suit of king's blue with hat to match.—Toronto News.

BLACK—CRUIKSHANK.

Medicine Hat, Alta., News.

Mr. J. J. Hewitt's handsome residence, on Toronto street, was en fete on Tuesday morning, the occasion being the marriage of Miss Laura Cruikshank, daughter of Mrs. E. J. Cruikshank, and sister of Mr. Hewitt, to Mr. Robt. C. Black, of London, Ont.

The ceremony took place at nine o'clock in the drawing room, carnations and ferns, being used to work out a pretty color scheme in decorations of white and green.

The ceremony was performed by Rev. J. W. Morrow.

The bride, who was unattended, wore white Duchesse satin with pearl trimming and garniture of embroidered net. The skirt was en train with draped bodice, Princess style, and long panel of seed pearl trimming finished with heavy silk fringe.

Mr. J. J. Hewitt gave the bride away. Mrs. Cruikshank wore a handsome gown of steel grey silk with lace trimming and Miss Nellie Cruikshank wore white with point de esprit voke and lace trimming.

At the conclusion of the ceremony Mr. J. B. Bates played the wedding march. A recherche wedding breakfast was afterwards served in the dining room. The wedding cake formed the centre piece on the table and red and pink carnations were used in the decorations. The guests were limited to immediate relatives.

The wedding gifts which were indeed very handsome included a purse of gold from Mrs. Cruikshank, a substantial cheque from Mr. Hewitt, of gold from Mrs. Cruikshank, a chatelaine purse in gold effects and a sterling silver travelling set from the groom, dinner and tea knives and sets of carvers in rosewood case inlaid with satinwood from Mr. G. F. Campbell, Winnipeg; fixtures for shower bath from staff of Hewitt's Hardware House.

Mr. and Mrs. Black left on the noon train to spend a month or six weeks at Banff and in the Arrow Lakes country. On their return they will take up residence in Medicine Hat. The bride's travelling suit was of Alice Blue Bengaline silk with large hat to match, and pretty pale blue ostrich stole.

In the evening the store staff was entertained at Mr. Hewitt's residence, covers being laid for twelve guests.

HEALING POWER A MARVEL

So remarkable is the healing power of Dr. Chase's Ointment that the results of a single application are often a marvel to persons who witness them for the first time. Mrs. C. Hopkins, St. George, Ont., tells how her son was cured of blood poisoning which got started in a wound received at a threshing. Relief was prompt and cure effected by three boxes.

BAPTIST CHURCH SERVICES

Sunday, July 10th.—The morning service will be a children's service at the regular church hour, 11 a. m. The children will take part in the singing and shall receive a short address from the pastor. At the evening service the pastor, Rev. B. Davies, will speak from the subject: "In the House of Correction."

NARROW ESCAPE.

Master Freddie Frank, son of Dr. F. C. Frank and Mrs. Frank, Shelburne, had a narraw escape from drowning on Monday last. He was playing on the property recently purchased by Dr. Babe next to the U. B. Church, and fell into an old cistern which contained about three feet of water. Kathleen Calhoun, who was with him, gave the alarm and fortunately Dr. Babe was in the stable at the end of the lot and he rescued the little fellow in time. He is none the worse for his cold dip.—Free Press.

EXCITING ENCOUNTER.

On Monday morning last, Mr. William Fountain, of Toronto, President of the Dufferin Old Boys' Association, with a party of friends, was returning from Dundalk to the city, in his fine touring car. When a short distance above Camilla, a horse and rig was met. The farmer was very much frightened, although the equine was not disturbed, and jumped out of the buggy, and picking up a stone, told Mr. Fountain to take his auto off the road, as he built the same. The irate gentleman was eventually pacified and his horse led past the danger point ?. Mr. Fountain is one of the most careful automobile owners who visits these parts, and has never had an accident of any kind. A little consideration on the part of all of the rights of the roads would seem all that is necessary.

WORDS OF CAUTION TO YOUNG MOTHERS

Mothers must keep guard over the health of their little ones during the summer months. Summer is an anxious time for all mothers, but more especially for young mothers. It is the most fatal time of the year for babies and young children. It is then that stomach and bowel troubles come almost without warning, and often before the mother realizes there is any danger, the little one may be beyond aid. The mother must take strict caution to keep her little one's stomach sweet and pure and his bowels moving regularly. No other medicine can do this so quickly and thoroughly as Baby's Own Tablets. The Tablets should always be kept in the house. An occasional dose will keep baby well or if illness comes on suddenly the Tablets will quickly remove the cause and make baby well and happy. Sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

At the conclusion of the ceremony Mr. J. B. Bates played the wedding march. A recherche wedding breakfast was afterwards served in the dining room. The wedding cake formed the centre piece on the table and red and pink carnations were used in the decorations. The guests were limited to immediate relatives.

The wedding gifts which were indeed very handsome included a purse of gold from Mrs. Cruikshank, a substantial cheque from Mr. Hewitt, of gold from Mrs. Cruikshank, a chatelaine purse in gold effects and a sterling silver travelling set from the groom, dinner and tea knives and sets of carvers in rosewood case inlaid with satinwood from Mr. G. F. Campbell, Winnipeg; fixtures for shower bath from staff of Hewitt's Hardware House.

Mr. and Mrs. Black left on the noon train to spend a month or six weeks at Banff and in the Arrow Lakes country. On their return they will take up residence in Medicine Hat. The bride's travelling suit was of Alice Blue Bengaline silk with large hat to match and pretty pale blue ostrich stole.

In the evening the store staff was entertained at Mr. Hewitt's residence, covers being laid for twelve guests.

HEALING POWER A MARVEL

So remarkable is the healing power of Dr. Chase's Ointment that the results of a single application are often a marvel to persons who witness them for the first time. Mrs. C. Hopkins, St. George, Ont., tells how her son was cured of blood poisoning which got started in a wound received at a threshing. Relief was prompt and cure effected by three boxes.

MAHARG—DERMOTT.

A very pretty wedding took place at the home of Messrs. Joseph and Samuel Dermott, of Elba, on Wednesday, June 29th, when their sister, Miss Mary, was united in marriage to Mr. George Maharg, of Camilla. The ceremony was performed by Rev. G. W. Rose, of Alton. Promptly at three o'clock the bridal party entered the lawn to the strains of the Lohengrin wedding march, played by Miss Ethel Aikins, and took their places under an arch of evergreens, decorated with pink and white ribbons, white roses, and large white wedding bells. The bride, who was given away by her brother, wore a gown of white taffetta, trimmed with white lace, and insertion, and carried a shower boquet of white carnations. She wore a long embroidered tulle veil daintily arranged over a wreath of orange blossoms. The bridesmaid was Miss Annie McCague, of Mono, who wore a handsome costume of white mercerised mull, trimmed with valenciennes lace, and insertion, and carried a boquet of pink carnations. The groom was supported by his cousin, Mr. Robert Lindsay, of Primrose. The groom's gift to the bride was a gold watch and chain, to the bridesmaid a gold brooch, set with emeralds, and to the groomsman a tie pin, set with pearls. After the happy couple had received the congratulations of the guests, a sumptuous wedding repast was served. The tables were beautifully decorated with pink and white carnations and maiden hair fern. The bride was the recipient of a large number of pretty and costly wedding gifts. Among the friends from a distance, who were present at the wedding, were:—Miss C. Maharg, Detroit; Mr. and Mrs. J. Service, Redickville; Mr. and Mrs. J. K. Rinn, Honeywood; Mr. and Mrs. Archibald Irwin, Orangeville; Mr. and Mrs. John Harshaw, Orangeville; Mrs. W. Bowles, Chicago.

GOURLAY—SUTHERLAND.

Wednesday afternoon at half past three, the home of Mr. and Mrs. James H. Sutherland, in Close Ave., Toronto, was the scene of an interesting event when their second daughter, Mary Snell (Dimple), was united in marriage with Mr. W. Whiteford Gourlay, son of Mr. and Mrs. William Gourlay. The Rev. A. Logan Geggie performed the ceremony in the presence of only the immediate relatives and a few intimate friends. The drawing room was pretty with marguerites in every direction, a banking of the flowers being arranged where the bridal party stood. Miss Kathleen Stevenson played the wedding march. Mr. Sutherland gave his daughter away, the latter wearing a dainty embroidered mull gown with a wreath of lillies of the valley in her hair, and carrying a shower of the same flowers. Her sister, Miss Grace Sutherland, was bridesmaid, gowned in pale green ninon de soie over silk, and Mr. Douglas Gourlay supported his brother. After the wedding dejeuner Mr. and Mrs. Gourlay left for Muskoka, the bride traveling in a tailored suit of king's blue with hat to match.—Toronto News.

BAPTIST CHURCH SERVICES

Sunday, July 10th.—The morning service will be a children's service at the regular church hour, 11 a. m. The children will take part in the singing and shall receive a short address from the pastor. At the evening service the pastor, Rev. B. Davies, will speak from the subject: "In the House of Correction."

NARROW ESCAPE.

Master Freddie Frank, son of Dr. F. C. Frank and Mrs. Frank, Shelburne, had a narraw escape from drowning on Monday last. He was playing on the property recently purchased by Dr. Babe next to the U. B. Church, and fell into an old cistern which contained about three feet of water. Kathleen Calhoun, who was with him, gave the alarm and fortunately Dr. Babe was in the stable at the end of the lot and he rescued the little fellow in time. He is none the worse for his cold dip.—Free Press.

EXCITING ENCOUNTER.

On Monday morning last, Mr. William Fountain, of Toronto, President of the Dufferin Old Boys' Association, with a party of friends, was returning from Dundalk to the city, in his fine touring car. When a short distance above Camilla, a horse and rig was met. The farmer was very much frightened, although the equine was not disturbed, and jumped out of the buggy, and picking up a stone, told Mr. Fountain to take his auto off the road, as he built the same. The irate gentleman was eventually pacified and his horse led past the danger point ?. Mr. Fountain is one of the most careful automobile owners who visits these parts, and has never had an accident of any kind. A little consideration on the part of all of the rights of the roads would seem all that is necessary.

WORDS OF CAUTION TO YOUNG MOTHERS

Mothers must keep guard over the health of their little ones during the summer months. Summer is an anxious time for all mothers, but more especially for young mothers. It is the most fatal time of the year for babies and young children. It is then that stomach and bowel troubles come almost without warning, and often before the mother realizes there is any danger, the little one may be beyond aid. The mother must take strict caution to keep her little one's stomach sweet and pure and his bowels moving regularly. No other medicine can do this so quickly and thoroughly as Baby's Own Tablets. The Tablets should always be kept in the house. An occasional dose will keep baby well or if illness comes on suddenly the Tablets will quickly remove the cause and make baby well and happy. Sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

A GENEROUS OFFER

T. Stevenson Will Refund Your Money if Parisian Sage Doesn't Banish Dandruff.

Pretty strang talk, perhaps you'll say, but it's honest talk, every word of it, because if T. Stevenson was not absolutely certain; if he did not know from actual results obtained, he could not make such a generous offer

Parisian Sage, which can now be obtained in every town in Canada, is also guaranteed to stop falling hair and itching scalp.

It is the ideal, delightful, rejuvenating hair dressing that makes hair grow in abundance. Parisian Sage is a prime favorite with women, because it keeps the hair brilliant and fascinating, is daintily perfumed and is not sticky or greasy.

The price for a large bottle is only 50 cents at T. Stevenson's, who guarantees it. Sold everywhere, or direct, all charges prepaid, by the Canadian makers, Giroux Mfg. Co., Fort Erie, Ont.

PROPERTY AND PUBLIC RIGHTS

In his oration delivered the other day before Harvard Law School Association, Attorney-General George W. Wickersham, of the United States took occasion to refer to the anti-trust legislation of 1890, whereby congress undertook, through the exercise of its constitutional power, to regulate interstate commerce to grapple with the great problem o combinations in restraint of trade and monopolies. The history of all nations, he remarked, indicated that at a certain period of national development it became necessary to interpose by legislation between the rapacity of individual greed and justice and fairness to the entire people.

The attorney-general pointed out that the right of every community to legislate regarding property affected by a public use had been early recognized and quoted Chief Justice Waite, who occupied the chair of the supreme court between 1874 and 1888, to this effect: "Property does become clothed with a public interest when used in a manner to make it of public consequence and affect the community at large. When, therefore, one devotes his property to a use in which the public has an interest, he, in effect, grants to the public an interest in that use and must submit to be controlled by the public for the common good to the extent of the interest he has thus created.—The Daily World.

The Listowel Furniture Co. reports big business for the coming year. They recently secured a contract with a city firm which calls for a car of furniture weekly. The contract covers an amount of $1,000.

A FATAL BLOW.

Michael Maw, of Port Credit, Killed in Fistic Encounter.

Michael Maw, of Port Credit, is dead, and George Barker, charged with the responsibility for his death, is locked up in Brampton jail as the result of a quarrel and fight on Friday.

The fatality is said to have been the termination of a row which occurred at the works of the St. Lawrence Starch Co. in which both the participants were employed. Strained relations had evidently existed between the men previously to the outbreak of an open appeal to force. Barker, it is said, while passing Maw used an expression which caused the latter to lose his temper and throw a hammer at him. Barker promptly retaliated by knocking Maw down.

The men then started in to scrap in deadly earnest. A second blow from Barker's fist again felled Maw to the floor. This time he did not rise to resume the contest. He was dead.

Barker was promptly arrested and taken to the county jail at Brampton. He is a young English immigrant, having only been eight or ten weeks in Canada. He is 21 years of age and of a stout and muscular build.

Coroner Dr. Sutton opened an inquest on Monday.

While a train was shunting at Dundalk the other day a freight car started down the grade and got away about two miles before being overtaken by the engine. As the express was about due a collision was imminent, but happily averted.

Echo.

She was a sight so fair to see
It thrilled my soul with ecstasy.
A wealth of mellow charms were hers
Enwrapt in truly gorgeous furs.
Her step a thing of life, her form
Enough to rouse a jealous storm
Among the graces and an eye
That dimmed the luster of the sky.
I stopped and gazed,
Entranced, amazed.
"Ah! Whither away?" quoth I.

She paused upon the gutter curb.
Ah, me, her pose was so superb
It made me think perhaps that she Had stood for Winged Victory
In some remote time of the past
Amid some other cycle cast!
She paused, and, glancing storily,
She gave an upper cut to me
That left me feazed
And sadly dazed.
"A-ah! Wither away?" quoth she.

Forgot the Judge.

Two lawyers before a probate judge recently got into a wrangle. At last one of the disputants, losing control over his emotions, exclaimed to his opponent:

And no traitor traits

INCREASED RESPONSIBILITY

With every increment of power or knowledge, comes corresponding increase of responsibility. The temperance cause today is more influential, more respected, more potential, than ever before. It therefore carries a heavier weight of duty.

There have been days of ignorance when men who did not know how bad the liquor evil was, might have been excused for comparative indifference towards it. That is the case no longer. Today, everyone who takes any interest in society must realize the dangerous, destructive and reactionary character of every phase of the drink curse.

Science has told us that alcohol is not a food, not even a desirable stimulant, but in most cases a deadly narcotic poison. Business men have learned that the fullest success is only compatible with the total abstinence that gives men full control of their mental and physical powers. Political economists declare that the liquor traffic is a burden and a blight on the productive power, the prosperity, and the progress of a community. Social science declares and demonstrates that intemperance is the worst hindrance to the uplifting of the individual and the race. Church pastors admit that it thwarts and defeats much of their effort to win men and women to higher and more spiritual life.

Every item of evidence thus accumulated ought to be, with every unselfish citizen, an added stimulus to earnest effort for the overthrow of this awful evil. "Knowledge is power," only when it evokes determined will, and inspires to worthy deed. A fitting prayer for every true temperance worker may be found in the sublime words of the poet:—

"Grant us the will to fashion as we feel;
Grant us the strength to labor as we know;
Grant us the purpose, ribbed and edged with steel,
To strike the blow."

Chas. Healey, proprietor of the hotel at Atherley, is being prosecuted by the Provincial Government for selling liquor after hours. The action is the result of information gathered at the time Wm. Fowles, a lumberjack, was run over and killed by a train after a drunken spree at and near the hotel.

Alcohol to Children

Ask your doctor how often he prescribes an alcoholic stimulant for children. He will probably say, "Very, very rarely. Children do not need stimulating." Ask him how often he prescribes a tonic for them. He will probably answer, "Very, very frequently." Then ask him about Ayer's non-alcoholic Sarsaparilla as a tonic for the young. Follow his advice. He knows. J. C. Ayer Co., Lowell, Mass.

The first great rule of health—"Daily movement of the bowels." Ask your doctor if this is not so. Then ask him about Ayer's Pills. Sold for nearly sixty years.

Brampton firemen will run an excursion to Welland on August 3rd., for the purpose of taking part in the great Firemen's Tournament in that place.

Mr. James Laughland, a recent graduate of the O.A. C. Guelph, has been sent to Collingwood as assistant in the offices of the Department of Agriculture.

The annual excursion of the Grey County Old Boys and Girls will be held this year on Saturday, July 16th, to Markdale and Owen Sound on the C.P.R.

The contractor for the waterworks reservoir, Coldwater, refused to sign the contract, and thus stands to lose his $500 deposit. The next lowest tenderer will get the job.

A box car on the C. P. R. loaded with wood, caught fire at Baxter on Friday. In the absence of a sufficient supply of water the car had to be cut loose and abandoned and was completely destroyed.

We are now fairly well entered on the secondhalf of 1910. Let us make the last half the best from every point of view, if possible, remembering the truth, that—"A man's life consisteth not in the abundance of the things which he possesseth."

The passing of the by-law on Monday and the establishment of an electric light plant in town has brought Bolton one notch nearer the status of a first class town. The promoters of the new company are to be congratulated on their enterprise.—Bolton Enterprise.

John Wallace was arrested last week and taken to Brampton by High Constable Broddy. Wallace is charged with breaking into a house near Port Credit and stealing jewelry worth about $100. He is said to have done this in the afternoon when there was no one at home.

Archie McQuarrie, second son of Mr. and Mrs. Allan McQuarrie, was drowned last week off a dock at Sault Ste. Marie. McQuarrie, who was 14 years old, had been in swimming, and became exhausted. The body was recovered half an hour later, and though three doctors worked over it for two hours, no signs of life appeared.

The Baptists of Orillia not to be outdone by the other denominations of the town, decided a short time ago to raise $6000 to build a new Sunday School. Last week the committee appointed went to work, and in a week collected $5000. The new Sunday school will be erected this year. It will be built at the rear of the church.—News-Letter.

Mr and Mrs. Thos. Duke, with some of their family, of Vancouver, B.C., are on a visit to relatives in this village and vicinity. Mr. Duke kept a drug store in this village some twenty-seven years ago, after which he moved to Vancouver, and commenced business, and seems to have prospered immensly as report credits him with being almost a millionaire.—Bolton Enterprise.

It is not easy to get even with trusts and combines. When cornered up, they generally trump up some excuse. For instance, they say the law of supply and demand control prices. Not so much now, as in years past. In food-stuffs, the cold storage has worked revolutions, and some foods can be stored to such an extent as to force the price up to such a point that the Trust can squeeze the consumer.

The fine brick residence of Mr. E. W. Jenkins, on the river a mile from Magnetewan, was totally destroyed by fire about midnight Thursday night. The family, in their night clothes, only escaped with their lives. Mr. Jenkins was ill at the time, and great praise is due Mrs. Jenkins for her heroic and successful efforts in rescuing the family from the flames. The origin of the fire is unknown. Nothing was saved. The loss is about $8,000, partly covered by insurance.

Jas. Eller, farmer, Nortonville, was charged in the police court this week by Harvey Ruston, another farmer of the same neighborhood, with assault and was fined $5 and costs. Eller's charge against Ruston was dismissed, Ruston and father said they were driving along when they came on Eller, who wanted to talk about some old grudge. The talk ended in Eller jumping into Ruston's wagon and attacking him. Ruston was compelled to strike Eller in the face with a short whip to make him desist. Eller's face showed the marks of the whip.—Brampton Banner.

GEN POLE FELL.

Serious Accident Narrowly Averted at a Melancthon Barn Raising.

At a barn raising a few days ago at Mr. Will Comores' on the 3rd line, Melanethon, an accident occurred which very nearly was the cause of a tragedy. While raising heavy timbers with block and tackle outfit, the gin pole fell and struck three men, David and Jas. Patterson and Jack Brice. Luckily the fall of the pole was partially broken and the men did not get the full force of it. David Patterson, who was in a stooping position at the time, got hurt in the back rather severely and is under the doctor's care. The other two men had but slight bruises. The raising was discontinued that day, but has since been completed with another block and tackle outfit.

A SUGGESTIVE FEATURE.

Describing the calithumpian procession, which was a feature of the Dominion Day Celebration in Grand Valley, the Star & Vidette says:—

"The next two rigs were a burlesque on a recent trial and its varied features. The first had a suit case in the rear, was headed for Amaranth Station and was supposed to have got his price. The next represented an up-to-date police court of the King's subjects, where the case was settled yesterday and tried to-day. A fur coat, a few rugs, whips and harness, with the interested people caricatured holding court, made the application plain enough and thoroughly deserved first prize."

James Davey has completed the digging of his 1600 post holes for Chinguacousy Telephone system on the east side of the township. He has planted 1400 poles and would have the others in place but for the inability of the directors to get the poles delivered. Wires are being rapidly strung by Mr. McMeekin and the work of completing the system is going forward.

The Tottenham Sentinel says:—"One of our town ladies, and a strong local option worker, who before the vote in January last, threatened to boycott our local merchants if they did not pledge themselves to vote for the measure, was seen last week returning from Toronto loaded down with parcels from the Eaton and Simpson stores."

Get rid of everything that will attract and breed flies about the house and dairy. The old-fashioned custom of keeping a festering swill barrel just outside the kitchen door was no doubt responsible for a good many of the doctor's visits, to say nothing of the ever-present stench and swarm of flies.

Wm. Clark's Long Experience

CLARK'S MEATS have a longer experience behind them and better facilities and equipment to prepare them than any other meats in Canada. When you want preserved meats you naturally ask for CLARK'S. They are the best and cost from one-quarter to one-half less than butcher's meat.

Practically all the shops, or stores as Canadians call 'em, were closed a week ago yesterday afternoon for the first Wednesday half-holiday. Lowe's was the only place in town you could buy anything to eat. A number of farmers who came in to purchase oil or groceries or get repairs had in some cases to return home empty-handed or drive to Huttonville, Meadowvale, Norval or Malton where the shops do business every lawful day in the week. It's funny the squirming some of the Brampton storekeepers are doing in the holiday business. The document praying the council to inaugurate the holiday shows that they all signed. If they don't want the holiday why did they sign. Answer: Why did the same people sign petitions asking the railroads to give people a chance to travel to Eaton's and Simpson's for less than $1.10.—Brampton Banner.

HEALING POWER A MARVEL

So remarkable is the healing power of Dr. Chase's Ointment that the results of a single application are often a marvel to persons who witness them for the first time. Mrs. C. Hopkins, St. George, Ont., tells how her son was cured of blood poisoning which got started in a wound received at a threshing. Relief was prompt and cure effected by three boxes.

Upon Canada entering on her 43rd year as a united Dominion, the following predictions may be interesting:—Earl Grey: "It is only a question of time when Canada will be the most populous, the most wealthy and the most influential part of the Empire." Sir Wilfred Laurier: "As the nineteenth century was the century of the United States, so shall the twentieth century be the century of Canada." William Whyte, Vice-Pres. C.P.R.: "Saskatchewan will soon be producing more wheat than any state in the Union, and in less than a decade will produce more wheat than all the U. S. combined." President Taft: "Canada has 7,000,000 people, but the country is still hardly scratched." Rudyard Kipling: "Pump in British settlers and Canada will take all who are suitable and give them more than one opportunity to succeed." New York Sun: "In 1920 Canada will be a nation of 15,000,000 people, with a commerce far exceeding $1,000,000,000." James J. Hill: "There is land and wealth enough in Canada to feed every mouth in Europe."

SERMON TO ORANGEMEN.

Rev. Dr. Harper Addresses Members of Orangeville Lodges.

Speaker Defines and Emphasizes Importance of True Manhood.

Members' of the two local Orange lodges and visiting brethren to the number of 100 or over attended divine service in the Methodist Church on Sunday. The parade was headed by the Citizens' Band. The pastor, Rev. Dr. Harper, delivered an impressive address on the subject: "True Manhood" basing his address on I Cor. 16 : 13.

To the enquiring mind, said Rev. Mr. Harper, the question naturally arises, what qualifications are essential to manhood. There are a diversity of opinions as to what constitutes a man. The law says an individual of the masculine gender of the full age of 21, is a man. Another authority describes a man as a laughing animal, another as a cooking animal, and a third as an animal with thumbs. Plato says, he is a two-legged animal without feathers" and Adam Smith as an animal that makes bargains, which no other animal does. No dog will exchange bones with another dog. Some regard physical development as the highest type of manhood. This is no new idea. Rome in her palmy days developed men physically in gladiators in the Arena drawn from every part of the Empire fought to the death for mastery. This idea somewhat refined existed in the Chivalry of the 17th century when Knights clad in complete armour contented for mastery in the gay tournaments of the time. The pugilism of to-day is regarded by many as the ideal of manhood, and the man who can batter his opponent into insensibility is the hero of the hour. If this constituted manhood then Sampson would have been greater than Solomon and Jack Johnston than Rosevelt. Physical development is necessary but other things are necessary to manhood. Some regard intellectual attainment as the essential feature of manhood. One authority says: "In the world there is nothing great but man. In man nothing great but mind." To sit at the feet of poets Philosophers, sages and statesmen, drink in their thoughts, to know art, science and literature — of the past and present, to be able to turn the telescope on the stars, count their numbers and tell their names, or with hammer of the geologist to break the rock and tell the strata to which it belongs. To know is thought by many to be the true test of manhood.

There is a third nature however in the trinity bestowed upon us. This, with all due respect to the two mentioned, is the highest, strongest and capable of the greatest expansion. This is spiritual nature. To know God and understand our relationship to him. Jesus Christ is set before us as our ideal: "His life was gentle and the elements so mixed in him that nature could stand forth and say to all the world, this is a man." Perfect physically, intellectually and spiritually he fulfils our ideal of what a man should be, and we only attain thereto when we follow in his steps.

There are questions of great moment to-day which as true men we must solve. Every age has then. It is for us to quit ourselves like men be strong.

True Manhood is Selfsacrificing.

We live in a selfish age. The world's creed is "Every man for himself and the devil take the hindermost. By this method we shall never attain the highest good. The motto of the poet should be ours :—

"I live for those who love me,
For those who love me true,
For the Heaven that smiles above me
And waits my coming too.
For the wrongs that need resistance,
For the cause that needs assistance,
For the future in the distance,
For the good that I can do."

Luther gave himself for God and the cause of humanity. When he nailed his theses to the church doors of Whittenburg Howard, when he advocated the cause of the imprisoned. Wilberforce in his resistless campaign for the freedom of the slaves, and William of Orange, when he fought his great battle.

We must quit ourselves as men in the preservation of liberty, civil and religious. The priceless boon of liberty is ours and we estimate it at its true worth because it has come to us as a free gift from our ancestors. But this same privilege cost our fathers dear. The best blood that ever flowed in Anglo-Saxon veins was freely given that this heritage might be ours.

Eternal vigilance is necessary to maintain these rights. The same enemies exist to-day. Their policy has not changed, and doubtless if they possessed the power history would repeat itself.

We Must Quit Ourselves Like Men in Nation Building.

God has given to us a magnificent heritage in this broad Dominion, stretching from sea to sea. Our resources of forest, mines, prairie, of flock and herd, and of fisheries are magnificent, and there is a possibility of building a nation here during the next 50 years that shall be greater than has been.

People of all classes, climes, nationalities, customs and faiths, are coming to us from Italy, Germany, Norway, Russia, the Islands of the Sea and the Orient, and these we must nationalize, Christianize, Canadianize. Many of them know little or nothing of the sanctity of our Sabbath—of the morality and righteousness which exalteth a nation. We must teach them brotherhood, temperance, morality, righteousness. Here is a work that challenges the best efforts of each individual and association of our Country. The truest and best manhood will have the highest reverence and respect for the word of God. The Bible is carried at the head of your processions and this is right. It should have the first place. By living according to its precepts, obeying its commands, believing the truthes it enunciates, we shall win the approval of God and commend the Order to the public at large.

"God give us men, a time like this demands,
Strong minds, great hearts, true faith and ready hands.
Men whom the lust of office will not kill,
Men whom the spoils of office cannot buy,
Men who possess opinions and a will.
Men who have honor, men who will not lie,
Tall men, sun crowned who list above the fog
In public duty, in private thinking,
For while the babble with their thumb worn creeds,
Their large professions and their little deeds,
Mingle in strife, lo, freedom weeps,
Wrong rules the land and wailing Justice sleeps.

The real estate consists of 24 parcels, 21 of which are situate in East Garafraxa, 1 in Amaranth, a section in the Province of Alberta, and a half section in Saskatchewan. The total value of the real estate is placed at $68,080.

The executors named are, Dr. A. J. Hunter, Orangeville; Joseph Gillespie, Amaranth, and Isaac Murphy, Mono. These gentlemen are bequeathed $100 each for their care, trouble, and pains in properly administering my estate, said bequest to be in lieu of all or any claim that they or either of them may or might have by way of commission as such executors."

In their application for probate the executors state "that prolonged and continued care, pains and trouble will be required in the administration of said estate and petitioners pray that they may be allowed for their care, pains and trouble in administering said estate such compensation as to the Judge of this Court may seem just in addition to the amount set out in said will therefor."

The household furniture is bequeathed to the widow absolutely, except the piano, which is given to a daughter, Clara Hunter.

After payment of all necessary expenses in properly working "The Homestead," known as "The Maples" the balance of the revenue is bequeathed to the widow "until my son W. H. Earl Hunter arrives at the age of 18 years, and after my said son attains the age of 18 years, said balance and receipts are to be deposited in a chartered bank to the credit of my said son W. H. Earl until he arrives at the age of 21 years, and then paid over."

The executors are directed to invest and keep invested $10,000 to the best advantage, and to pay the revenue to the widow, said payment to commence when the son, W. H. Earl is 18 years old, and continue during life of widow; and on her death, said sum of $10,000 is to be divided equally among children of the testator, by his wife, Rebecca Hunter, share and share alike. This bequest is in lieu of dower in "estate, real and personal."

"The Homestead" is devised to W. H. Earl, for his natural life, and after death to his eldest son in fee simple. In case of his death without leaving a son, then to testator's son, James Scott, on similar terms; on his death without leaving a son, to testator's son, Gordon W. for life; afterwards to his son, on default of his leaving a son, then to Bryson, and on default of his leaving a son, to Henry Alfred for life; on his death to his son, and on default of his leaving a son, to David John for life, and on his death to his son. If all six sons die without a living son, then the property goes to the testator's nearest male heir; if more than one heir in equal degrees of consanguinity, then to the eldest male heir.

There is a direction to the executors to deposit all moneys received by them in their capacity as such in equal proportions in the Bank of Hamilton, the Canadian Bank of Commerce, the Bank of Montreal, and the Post Office Savings Department.

To the Municipal Council of East Garafraxa, is given "$500 in trust to be expended in its discretion for the poor people of the township." A like bequest, on similar conditions, is made to the Municipal Council of the Township of Amaranth.

As the estate exceeds the sum of $150,000, the amount of the duty payable to the Ontario Government, under the "Succession Duty Act," will be four per cent., or about $6000. Charitable bequests are exempt from succession duty. The total bequests are $156,152.57, and are approximately estimated by the executors as follows :—

The Public Library here has been allowed a grant from the Provincial Library Board for the first time for a number of years. The money will be used for the purchase of new books. ELBA.

On the morning of Dominion Day, a party of four in an auto were going north on the Prince of Wales Road, when they met one of Mono's peaceable farmers, who raised his hand when a considerable distance away, giving the usual signal to stop the auto. This signal the driver disregarded until he was within ten or twelve feet of the horse's head (which be it known was no shy colt, but a mother mare well up in her teens). The mare shied suddenly to the right nearly upsetting the buggy and then as suddenly to the left again nearly upsetting the rig. The farmer then asked the people in the auto to stop the noise of the machine, as otherwise the mare would not go past. For answer, they told him to go on around there, pointing and meaning over the ditch and along the fence and not make a d—— fool of himself, at the same time consigning him to another clime, where it is said to be hotter than it is here, even in July. Then and not until then did the farmer threaten to defend himself. The auto party then came to their senses, shut off their engine, and assisted him past. The sturdy yeoman of Mono still think they have some rights left on the roads they made and are not likely to wait until they are (as some auto drivers boast of doing), put bottom side up or used as was poor Mr. Marshall in Melancthon, before defending themselves against the space devouring stink wagons of the tuppence, hapenny aristocracy of our towns and cities.

MARSVILLE.

The garden party, which was held last Friday evening at the home of Mrs. Jno. Wilson, was a decided success. The evening was an ideal one for the occasion, and there was a very large crowd assembled. The Orangeville Band was present and very generously provided the music. Addresses were delivered by Revs. McCormick, of Hillsburg; Cole, of Orton; Messrs. J. W. Cook, B.A., and John Gillespie. Mr. R. Wilson, humorist, of Toronto, was the chief entertainer, and amply supplied the audience with his humorous selections. Mr. C. Connop also rendered a few songs. Mr. C. R. McKeown, M.L.A. occupied the chair to the satisfaction of all. The receipts were $200.

Mr. Wm. Warnock has sold his 50 acre farm and crop to Mr. Harry Platt, of the adjoining farm. The price paid was $3000.

The members of Marsville L. O. L. 345 attended service in the English Church on Sunday afternoon, when the pastor, Rev. A. Ketterson, delivered an appropriate address. Owing to the rain several of the brethren were unable to be present.

Miss Maggie Johnston, of Winnipeg, visited in this vicinity last week.

Mr. and Mrs. John Byers are moving into their house in this village this week.

CARDWELL.

The members of L. O. L. 320 attended divine service at the Church of the Herald Angel, Sunday evening, July 10th. An excellent discourse was delivered by Rev. Mr. McLean to a full church. After some preliminary remarks, in which he cordially welcomed the Orangemen, he took as his text Proverbs 14:34: "Righteousness exalteth a nation, but sin is a reproach to any people." The speaker commented on the sound Christian principles upon which Orangeism is based, and the duty and responsibility of each member in living consistently with these high ideals. He showed how the truth of the text was evidenced in the Biblical record of the inspired poets and prophets, where right and not might eventually conquers, as depicted in the life of the Chosen Tribe of Israel. Ancient, mediaeval and modern history vindicate the same truth. The power and supremacy of the British Empire was by no means merely the outcome of material progress and political enterprise, but that her prowess had its origin and basis chiefly in the moral calibre and spiritual enlightenment characteristic of the British people. The open Bible was the guardian angel of our nation, shedding its light in the home, community and fraternity. The service was enthusiastic all through. Miss Bracken, the organist, presented excellent music.

Mrs. (Rev.) G. B. Morley and her daughter, Miss Gertrude Morley, B. A., of Bradford, are visiting the former's mother, Mrs. Jackson, Sr.

Mrs. Judge, of Caledon East, is visiting her sister, Mrs. H. Bracken.

Mrs. N. Williamson and son, Master Harvey, of Toronto, are visiting friends here.

Miss Lillian Judge, of Toronto, is holidaying with her cousin, Miss M. Bracken. Miss Judge is a soloist of St. Anne's Anglican Church, Toronto and her selection Sunday evening was much appreciated. She possesses a sweet voice and renders her solos with the naturalness of grace and the grace of naturalness.

Mrs. Jas. Algie and son, Jim, are visiting friends at Brampton.

BLACK'S CORNERS.

Our storekeeper, John Crombie, is kept busy these days.

The meeting of the local branch of the W.H.M.S. held last week was well attended.

The rain of last Sunday did a lot of good both to hay and grain crops. Some of the farmers say their crops haven't been better in years.

The Armstrong sawing outfit is doing fine work these days on N. Crombie's place, cutting for some of the farmers.

One of the finest barns in the neighborhood was raised on Mr. John A. Ferguson's farm last Tuesday. It is 60 x 65. The raising was done by block and tackle under the able management of Mr. Joe. Bowes. The building is a masterpiece in the art of framing and is a credit to Mr. Bowes.

Quite a number attended meeting at Campania last Sunday evening.

Quite a number spent the 12th in Shelburne and report a big crowd.

WILSON—SUTHERLAND

On Wednesday afternoon, June 22nd the marriage of Miss Gertrude Sutherland, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Sutherland, to the Rev. W. E. Wilson, Brampton, took place place at the home of the bride at Dunrobin, Bradford, the Rev. Jenkins Burkholder officiating. The bride was given away by her father, and wore a beautiful dress of white lace with veil and orange blossom wreath, and carried roses. The bridesmaid, Miss Kate Sutherland, wore a pretty summer dress and a pearl pendant, from the groom. The best man was Dr. Bell, of Buffalo; Miss Tyrwhitt playing the wedding march. Later on Mr. and Mrs. Wilson left for a trip down the St. Lawrence, before going to their home in Little Current, the bride travelling in a most becoming blue serge with pretty hat of roses.—The Globe, June 25th.

A very pretty house wedding was celebrated at eight o'clock Saturday evening, July 2nd, which was also the anniversary of the marriage of the bride's parents, at the residence of Mr. Thomas L. Dates, Second Avenue, West, in the presence of the immediate family, when his eldest daughter, Margaret, were united in marriage to Mr. Albert Laurence Rendall. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Rural Dean Ardill, rector of St. George's church. The wedding gown was of white liberty satin, trimmed with point lace and sea pearls. The bride carried a shower bouquet of bridal roses and wore a pearl necklace, the gift of the groom. The bridal couple were unattended. Mr. and Mrs. Rendall left later in the evening for a trip up the lakes and will be home after September 1st at 847 Fifth Avenue A. East.—Owen Sound Times.

Mr. and Mrs. Rendall are both well-known in Orangeville, where they formerly resided. The Banner joins their many local friends in extending hearty congratulations.

EWING—EAST.

A very pretty wedding took place on June the 29th, at Summerdale Farm, the home of Mr. and Mrs. David East, Amaranth, when their daughter, Maud, was united in the holy bonds of wedlock, to Mr. Alfred E. Ewing, son of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Ewing, of the same township. Rev. John Munro, of Grand Valley, officiated. The bride, who was given away by her father, was beautifully attired in silk embroidered voile with lace trimmings, and carried a lovely bouquet of lillies of the valley, bride roses and maiden hair fern and was attended by her friend, Miss Sadie Pacey, of Toronto, who looked pretty in pale blue embroidered voile with lace trimmings and carried a bouquet similar to that of the bride. Mr. Harvey East ably supported the bridegroom. At the hour of five, to the strains of Lohengrin's wedding march, played by Mr. Herbert McClure, of Toronto, uncle of the bride, the bridal party took their places under a beautiful arch of evergreens on the lawn. After congratulations, all sat down to a dainty wedding breakfast. The bridegroom's gift to the bride was a gold expansion bracelet with monogram, to the bridesmaid a gold brooch, set with pearls, and to the best man and pianist, gold monogram tie pins. The bride's travelling suit was an English serge of ashes of violets, with white hat. The presents were both numerous and costly and show the high esteem in which the young couple are held. Mr. and Mrs. Ewing will reside on lot 23, on the 8th line of Amaranth.

DERMOTT—MAHARG.

A very interesting wedding took place at the home of Mrs. C. Maharg, of Camilla, on Wednesday, June 22nd, when her daughter, Miss Ethel, was united in marriage to Mr. Samuel Dermott, of Elba. The ceremony was performed by Rev. G. Waugh, of Horning's Mills, in the presence of about one hundred guests. Promptly at 5 o'clock the bridal party entered the lawn to the strains of the Lohengrin wedding march, played by Miss Anna McCague, and took their places under an arch of evergreens decorated with pink and white roses, and large white wedding bells. The bride, who was given away by her brother, Mr. Geo. Maharg, looked charming in a robe of white embroidery, trimmed with satin ribbon and insertion. Her veil was of sheerest tulle fastened with a coronet of orange blossoms. She carried a sheaf of white carnations. Miss Harriet Lindsay, of Granger, cousin of the bride, who acted as bridesmaid, was attired in pale blue mull trimmed with valenciennes lace and insertion and carried a bouquet of pink carnations. Mr. Robt. Peacock, of Relessey, cousin of the bridegroom, acted as groomsmam. The groom's gift to the bride was a gold locket and chain, set with diamond and pearls, to the bridesmaid a gold brooch set with rubies, and to the groomsman a tie pin set with pearls. After the happy couple had received the congratulations of the guests, a sumptuous wedding repast was served. The tables were beautifully decorated with pink and white carnations. The bride was the recipient of many beautiful and costly presents. Among the friends who were present from a distance were Mrs. Al. Wootten and Miss C. Maharg, of Detroit; Mrs. A. Hunter, Mr. and Mrs. Gemmill, of Pilot Mound, Man.; Mrs. Mason and Miss Galbraith, of Ellesmere; Mr. and Mrs. J. Harshaw, Orangeville; and Mrs. Bowles, Chicago; Mr. and Mrs. McKinney, Pines; Mr. and Mrs. Service, Redickville, Mr. and Mrs. Rinn, Mulmur.

TEMPERANCE CONVENTION.

Dufferin Temperance Association Elects Officers and Transacts Other Business.

The annual meeting of Dufferin Temperance and Moral Reform Association was held in Shelburne Town Hall, Friday afternoon of last week, with President Robt. Reid, Camilla, in the chair. Following officers were elected:—Honorary President, A. D. McKitrick, Orangeville; President, R. Reid, Camilla; Vice President, Geo. Ireland, Shelburne; Secretary-Treasurer, R. G. Sanderson, Grand Valley. Municipality Representatives on Executive—Melancthon, Wm. Hudd, Horning's Mills; Mulmur, Wm. Kirkpatrick, Penn; Amaranth, John Johnston, Laurel; Mono, Geo. Little, Elba; East Luther, Alex. Blair, Tarbert; East Garafraxa, S. Simpson, The Maples; Orangeville, T. S. Hewson; Shelburne, Geo. Ireland; Grand Valley, W. Archibald.

The following resolutions were submitted to the meeting and carried unanimously: 1—That we heartily congratulate the people of Orangeville, Shelburne and Mono, on their recent successful Local Option contests, and say to the people of Grand Valley: "Go thou and do likewise." 2—That we again place ourselves on record in opposition to the three-fifths clause. 3—That we commend the Ontario Government for improved enforcement of the liquor laws, but would ask that they fulfill their promise of taking the administration of the law out of party politics. 4—That we place ourselves on record as entirely opposed to the keeping of a drinking place in connection with the Parliament Buildings at Ottawa. 5—That we deplore the laxity in the administration of law in this county.

November 6th, the Dominion Alliance "Field Day" in the county, was endorsed by the Association.

A grant of $50 was made from the Association funds to the Grand Valley Local Option Committee, to help defray the expenses of the coming Local Option campaign in that municipality.

The secretary was instructed to notify the conveners of the different polling subdivisions to raise money for the funds of the Association by way of subscription or public entertainment.

Rev. W. A. Potter, of Shelburne, told how the successful Local Option campaign had been carried on in Shelburne.

Mr. C. R. McKeown, M. P. P., of Orangeville, told of the present work of the Ontario Government along the lines of temperance and moral reform, and some of his own experiences in the House.

Rev. Ben. H. Spence, of Toronto, Secretary of the Dominion Alliance, and editor of the Pioneer, gave the story of the present state of affairs in the temperance ranks of Canada from ocean to ocean, and gave interesting statistics as to the progress that has been made in fighting for abolition of the bar in the past years—not to mention figures to show just how much liquor dealers have to thank the three-fifths clause for.

Other speakers were Mr. R. J. Woods, of Corbetton; Mr. Geo. Little, of Elba, Police Magistrate Hamilton, of Grand Valley, and Rev. J. A. McKenzie, of Shelburne.—Economist.

GRAND VALLEY AROUSED

Big Visit of Alliance Representatives on Sunday and Monday—The Work in Eastern Ontario.

The temperance workers of Grand Valley were aroused on Sunday last, July 3rd, when the town was visited by three of the Alliance speakers in pursuance of the regular "Field Day" plan. Rev. Canon Walsh, of Brampton, Secretary Rev. B. H. Spence and Rev. R.M. Hamilton, Field Secretary, were the Alliance representatives, and as a result of their visit and the addresses given at the several church services, a considerable impetus was given to temperance work and enthusiasm in the town.

The day's programme covered the church services of the town and of a couple of outside churches.

In the morning Rev. Canon Walsh spoke in the Anglican Church. Rev. R. M. Hamilton to the congregation of the Presbyterian Church and Rev. B. H. Spence in the Disciples' Church.

In the afternoon Secretary Spence occupied the pulpit of the Waldemar Methodist Church and Rev. Mr. Hamilton that of the West Luther Presbyterian Church.

In the evening an enthusiastic mass-meeting was held in the Methodist Church, which was largely attended by members of the several congregations. All three speakers took part in this service, and a great deal of interest and a feeling that some action should be taken to banish the bars of the town was apparent.

On Monday evening following a mass-meeting of electors called to consider the advisability of submitting a Local Option by-law in January next, setting forth the details of the law and telling of its successful working in other municipalities. C. R. McKeown, M.P.P., Orangeville, occupied the chair at the mass-meeting and added an appreciated quota to the evening's proceedings. — The Pioneer.

THE MODERN CHILD AND THE SUNDAY SCHOOL PICNIC.

Alice Ashworth Townley.

And how did the picnic come off" asked I of Mary.

As a faithful teacher in St. Something's Sunday-school, Mary always participates in the summer outing. This joyful event took place the other day, and I had not seen my friend since.

"Oh, well enough," returned she, rather listlessly.

"You had a nice, fine day."

"Yes, the day was good" — still without enthusiasm—"and none of the youngsters got killed, and they seemed as little dissatisfied as usual, and the teachers survived—so that altogether I suppose it ought to be considered to have passed off in a highly satisfactory manner."

This tinge of irony was foreign to Mary's usual conversation. I regarded her with curiosity.

"A long course of annual picnics seems to have palled upon you," remarked I.

"Indeed it has! In my estimation the day of usefulness for the Sunday-school picnic is about over." Mary spoke in the tone of conviction of one who has considered the question in all its bearings and has come to a definite conclusion.

"How do you make that out! I know it's a little trouble to those who get it up, but it is always looked forward to and is a great pleasure to the children."

"I suppose there always are a few of the poorer children who enjoy it—and that's all that reconciles me to the affair at all! You must remember that the old-fashioned brand of easily-pleased child has died out, and there is no satisfying the child of to-day. Now, in a congregation such as ours" (Mary belongs to an uptown church) "there are very few of the children that are not taken out to the parks, or over to the Island for little trips on the boats, several times during the season. Most of them have too much jaunting, and they get critical, and it's no joke trying to get up an expedition that will please them."

"I do think these trips by water and rail are a mistake. It's too great a risk, with all those children. How can people look after them?"

"Nothing but a merciful Providence ever brings the little terrors home alive! We went to Lorne Park, you know, and the way those boys hung over the taffrail and chased one another around the deck, or crawled out on the bowsprit and danced and balanced themselves with airy grace thereon, was enough to turn your hair grey—and the girls were not much better! They all ran around wildly, playing tag and shrieking, and losing their hats overboard, and poking into the engine room, and falling down and tearing their clothes, and telling us they were hungry every ten minutes, and asking how soon we'd get there. I was very thankful when we did get there—for I thought some of those future pillars of the church would surely fill early and aqueous graves." And Mary sighed at the remembrance of their fearsome antics.

"Why didn't they take them somewhere by street-cars?"

"That's what a great many of the teachers wanted when we held our meeting to decide, but bless you! the youngsters turn up there noses at street-cars and High Park. 'Yah! street'cars! They'll be makin' us walk next thing!' I heard a boy say to his friends, in disgusted tones, when he heard of the suggestion. Street-cars, indeed! It will soon be that you'll have to take them to New York or Quebec by special train to satisfy the young beggars. When I was a little girl (we lived in a country town, to be sure) we used to have our picnic in one of the fields on the glebe farm after the hay was cut. The smaller ones were taken there in farmers' wagons, rigged up with a sort of rack to keep them from falling out, and the big ones walked. It was the same every year—and we always had a lovely time, and never thought of anything different. If it rained we just had tea in the schoolhouse, and there was nothing more about it. I don't say we never took more things on our plates than any human being could devour—and truth compels me to admit that bread and butter may have been slyly disposed of in some way that was not gastronomical when we saw something nice in the tart or cake line coming—but we never treated buns with the contempt the youngsters do nowadays."

"Buns! Don't they approve of buns?"

Mary looked uoutterable things.

"There seems to be something positively demoralizing about buns!" said she, impressively. "I think it's the shape of them—they're so handy to play ball with! Even the best of children yield to temptation and toss them about. They never dream of eating them. Carefully-made sandwiches and the best of cake are what they expect. In another year or two we'll have to give them salads and ice-cream and charlotte russe—and they won't be half as well pleased as children used to be with a bun and some cookies and a glass of milk. The farther you take them, and the more you give them, the more tired and cross and dissatisfied they are by the time you get them home. I have not the least doubt that, after all our trouble and work, half our scholars reached home grumbling, and told their people it was 'a ratty old picnic, anyway, and they never had no fun.'"

Mary's mimicry of the thankless small boy's complaining toue was true to life.

"Yes," she went on, "the Sunday-school picnic has grown out of all reasonable proportion. It's a dreadful undertaking for very little result—a toil of a pleasure. There are too many children to handle in a large school, and if the weather is bad it spoils all your plans. Now in winter you get up your entertainment and have it (except it's a sleigh-ride and the snow goes back on you), and the children are sometimes quite pleased with their recitations and tableaux, and Christmas trees and good things. You are not dependent on so many contingencies for success. The whole thing won't be spoiled because you find, when you are twenty miles from home, that somebody has forgotten to pack the cups, or the sugar has been left behind, or Johnny Smith has fallen overboard, or Lucy Brown been lost."

"We had an awful crowd on board coming home. The boat people had faithfully promised that they would take no other excursion on the same date as ours—they always promise that, its very decent of them!"

"Then why the crowd?"

"Oh, they didn't keep their promise—none of the lines ever do in that particular. There were two other picnics on hand that day, and the youngsters got mixed. I'm sure we fed hundreds that didn't belong to our crowd at all. And some of our own were overlooked, I hear, and there is dreadful trouble over it. That's the worst of the big picnic! It is almost impossible to manage everything satisfactorily. The commissariat department demands so much attention from those in charge of the expedition that there is hardly any time to devote to amusing the youngsters, and they just hang around most of the time. When the races begin they fall and hurt themselves, and quarrel over the prizes, and when they get them say they are no good. And the grown-up people come home nearly dead, and the children are cross and tired and ought to have been in bed three hours ago, and the parents all vow they'll never let them go again, and—oh, don't let us talk of it any more! It will be a year before the next one!" — From "The Opinions of Mary." William Briggs.

Mrs. Martin's condition as described in her letter below gives some idea of the extraordinary reconstructive power of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. Such cures as this have placed Dr. Chase's Nerve Food where it stands today as the most popular and most effective nerve restorative that money will buy.

Mrs. Edwin Martin, Ayer's Cliff, Que., writes,—"Before I began using Dr. A. W. Chase's Nerve Food I was in a terrible condition. Dizzy spells would come over me and I would fall to the floor in a faint. I could not even sweep the floor without fainting and my nervous system seemed to be entirely exhausted.

"The use of Dr. A. W. Chase's Nerve Food has built up my system wonderfully so that I can do my housework and washing without any trouble, and I want others to know about it." TEACHING HORSES TO STAND.

By J. W. Sangster.

A team or a single horse that will stand perfectly still, until asked to move forward, is about as sure a test of the kind of a horseman the driver is as can be found. How often do we see some spirited horse stamping around, backing up, and then straining on the rein. While its driver is alternately jerking at the rein, and endeavoring to get the rug around his knees, or assisting some lady perhaps, to get comfortably seated?

There is a time when this matter can be remedied. It is when the horse is receiving his first lessons. He should be taught to stand absolutely still at all times, until he receives the word of command to move on. Moderately still will not do. It must be emphasized in the horse's mind that he must not move. If this is once done, and it takes a good many lessons to do it, the matter is practically settled. The horse's one stock in trade is his memory, and he will afterward stand still, so that the driver can make all preparations in comfort.

Perhaps there is no one other thing which has done more to make nervous women apprehensive of horses than a few experiences with horses that would not stand still while the driver was getting ready. A horse which dances around at that time, exhibits little appearance of being under the control of the driver. As a matter of fact, he isn't, to the same extent, as if he were trained to stand.

ARCH. McCOLL CHIEF POLICE AT PORT COBALT.

Archie McColl, ex-soldier in the Boer war and former police officer, at present a Provincial Constable can be chief of police at Port Cobalt, says a Haileybury despatch, if he wants the job. At the meeting of the Burke township council in the offices of Clerk Hector McQuarrie, the members voted to delegate reeve Stewart as a committee to ask McColl to accept the position. Mr. McColl lives in Englehart. He has a good record as a police officer. After serving a time on Toronto police force he left for South Africa with a Canadian regiment where he saw active service. Later he returned and again served on the Toronto force. Three years ago he took the position as chief of police for Haileybury. Order was restored in the town and sanitary regulations put into force, something Haileybury had hardly known up to that time. Former chief of police for the province Archibald once said that McColl of all the young men he had sent out possessed rare qualities as a detective and would make good in any place he filled. Archie is well known about Inglewood where his folks live.

EXCITING RAILWAY EPISODE.

Three Freight Cars Ran Away From Bolton—Stopped at West Toronto

Says the Telegram: The Canadian Pacific Railway officials had an anxious few minutes on Saturday, July 2nd, when three cars got away from the train crew at Bolton and rushed down into West Toronto Junction at a mile a minute, a distance of 21 miles.

The train crew were shunting cars into the siding at Bolton in which the three cars were standing; these were struck by the shunted cars and immediately started, going over the switch point, which is a split one, out on the main line and down the grade. They didn't stop until they reached West Toronto. Word was ticked off to the chief despatcher in Toronto, whose first duty was to stop passenger express, No. 19, leaving Toronto at 5.20 p.m. This he succeeded in doing by a second, which, however, was enough to prevent what would have been a most serious disaster.

If the passenger train had met the three heavy freight cars many would probably been killed. The cars were loaded with heavy freight. While the cars were making their way towards Toronto the despatchers got busy and stopped everything along the line. They made provision in the meantime to detail the cars just west of West Toronto. There was a second danger point, and that was at the St. Clair ave. crossing. At this point suburban cars cross, and men were despatched to this point to avert an accident. They were on hand in time but none too soon.

Fortunately no one was injured, but the officials have scarcely recovered from their fright.

When the cars neared West Toronto their speed had slackened through climbing a grade, and a G. T. R. brakeman climbed up on the back car, put on the brakes, and brought the cars to a stop.

MUNICIPAL OWNERSHIP.

Time was when anyone who proposed municipal ownership of public affairs was looked upon as a visionary, says the Toronto Star. So radical is the change which has taken place that over a hundred places in Ontario own and operate their own waterworks systems, and seventy-five or more have built or acquired electric light plants. The motto of municipal ownership is service rather than profit, and the average of efficiency is higher than usual in towns and cities operating their own utilities. The report of the Ontario railway and municipal board demonstrates, moreover, that the proportion of civic plants which have deficits is small, and in nearly every case where there is a deficit it is for a minor amount.

Thus, of seventy-one municipally owned waterworks plants, reporting their year's operations, twenty-three have a deficit, but the total of these deficits is less than $52,000, as compared with a gross surplus of $369,000 piled up by the others. Forty-eight municipal electric light plants report a surplus. The deficits of the thirteen others reporting aggregate less than $7,500. Of half a dozen civic gas plants, two report deficits totalling a little over $1,200. The other four have a surplus of $31,000.

Privately owned plants, with all their record of inferior service, could hardly make a better showing.

BELLWOOD WELL-DIGGER KILLED BY CAVE-IN.

Jesse Edwards the Victim — Neighbors Tried Hard to Rescue Him.

Jesse Edwards, a well digger, was buried in a well on the premises of Mr. W. G. Gerrie at Bellwood and probably instantly killed. Edwards was at the bottom of the well, which was about 35 feet deep, when a cave-in occurred from the top, burying him completely. It is supposed that the crib work to support the sides had not been constructed carefully. The news of the accident quickly spread, and practically the whole village gathered at the spot. A gang of men were soon at work in an endeavor to reach the buried man. A faint hope was entertained that Edwards might still be alive, and, spurred on by this, the rescuing party worked with unremitting energy.

The progress made was slow, however, owing to the fact that a new crib had to be constructed to protect the workers.

About five o'clock the body of the unfortunate man was reached. It is believed by the doctors that death must have been instantaneous. Edwards was about thirty years of age, unmarried, and the only support of his widowed mother.

TELL THE EDITOR.

Every newspaperman has the experience that there are some weeks when it is difficult to secure local news, although the material may exist for many interesting paragraphs if only he knew the circumstances. The readers of the Banner could often help the editor out in this respect, if they would take the trouble to jot down a few notes of the occurrence or incident, of which they know the particulars and send them in. We want all the real news of the district without the gossip, and will appreciate any assistance our friends can give us in accomplishing that end.

The Conservatives of North York will hold their annual picnic at Jackson's Point on July 20th.

THE MODERN CHILD AND THE SUNDAY SCHOOL PICNIC.

Alice Ashworth Townley.

And how did the picnic come off" asked I of Mary.

As a faithful teacher in St. Something's Sunday-school, Mary always participates in the summer outing. This joyful event took place the other day, and I had not seen my friend since.

"Oh, well enough," returned she, rather listlessly.

"You had a nice, fine day."

"Yes, the day was good" — still without enthusiasm—"and none of the youngsters got killed, and they seemed as little dissatisfied as usual, and the teachers survived—so that altogether I suppose it ought to be considered to have passed off in a highly satisfactory manner."

This tinge of irony was foreign to Mary's usual conversation. I regarded her with curiosity.

"A long course of annual picnics seems to have palled upon you," remarked I.

"Indeed it has! In my estimation the day of usefulness for the Sunday-school picnic is about over." Mary spoke in the tone of conviction of one who has considered the question in all its bearings and has come to a definite conclusion.

"How do you make that out! I know it's a little trouble to those who get it up, but it is always looked forward to and is a great pleasure to the children."

"I suppose there always are a few of the poorer children who enjoy it—and that's all that reconciles me to the affair at all! You must remember that the old-fashioned brand of easily-pleased child has died out, and there is no satisfying the child of to-day. Now, in a congregation such as ours" (Mary belongs to an uptown church) "there are very few of the children that are not taken out to the parks, or over to the Island for little trips on the boats, several times during the season. Most of them have too much jaunting, and they get critical, and it's no joke trying to get up an expedition that will please them."

"I do think these trips by water and rail are a mistake. It's too great a risk, with all those children. How can people look after them?"

"Nothing but a merciful Providence ever brings the little terrors home alive! We went to Lorne Park, you know, and the way those boys hung over the taffrail and chased one another around the deck, or crawled out on the bowsprit and danced and balanced themselves with airy grace thereon, was enough to turn your hair grey—and the girls were not much better! They all ran around wildly, playing tag and shrieking, and losing their hats overboard, and poking into the engine room, and falling down and tearing their clothes, and telling us they were hungry every ten minutes, and asking how soon we'd get there. I was very thankful when we did get there—for I thought some of those future pillars of the church would surely fill early and aqueous graves." And Mary sighed at the remembrance of their fearsome antics.

"Why didn't they take them somewhere by street-cars?"

"That's what a great many of the teachers wanted when we held our meeting to decide, but bless you! the youngsters turn up there noses at street-cars and High Park. 'Yah! street'cars! They'll be makin' us walk next thing!' I heard a boy say to his friends, in disgusted tones, when he heard of the suggestion. Street-cars, indeed! It will soon be that you'll have to take them to New York or Quebec by special train to satisfy the young beggars. When I was a little girl (we lived in a country town, to be sure) we used to have our picnic in one of the fields on the glebe farm after the hay was cut. The smaller ones were taken there in farmers' wagons, rigged up with a sort of rack to keep them from falling out, and the big ones walked. It was the same every year—and we always had a lovely time, and never thought of anything different. If it rained we just had tea in the schoolhouse, and there was nothing more about it. I don't say we never took more things on our plates than any human being could devour—and truth compels me to admit that bread and butter may have been slyly disposed of in some way that was not gastronomical when we saw something nice in the tart or cake line coming—but we never treated buns with the contempt the youngsters do nowadays."

"Buns! Don't they approve of buns?"

Mary looked uoutterable things.

"There seems to be something positively demoralizing about buns!" said she, impressively. "I think it's the shape of them—they're so handy to play ball with! Even the best of children yield to temptation and toss them about. They never dream of eating them. Carefully-made sandwiches and the best of cake are what they expect. In another year or two we'll have to give them salads and ice-cream and charlotte russe—and they won't be half as well pleased as children used to be with a bun and some cookies and a glass of milk. The farther you take them, and the more you give them, the more tired and cross and dissatisfied they are by the time you get them home. I have not the least doubt that, after all our trouble and work, half our scholars reached home grumbling, and told their people it was 'a ratty old picnic, anyway, and they never had no fun.'"

Mary's mimicry of the thankless small boy's complaining tone was true to life.

"Yes," she went on, "the Sunday-school picnic has grown out of all reasonable proportion. It's a dreadful undertaking for very little result—a toil of a pleasure. There are too many children to handle in a large school, and if the weather is bad it spoils all your plans. Now in winter you get up your entertainment and have it (except it's a sleigh-ride and the snow goes back on you), and the children are sometimes quite pleased with their recitations and tableaux, and Christmas trees and good things. You are not dependent on so many contingencies for success. The whole thing won't be spoiled because you find, when you are twenty miles from home, that somebody has forgotten to pack the cups, or the sugar has been left behind, or Johnny Smith has fallen overboard, or Lucy Brown been lost."

"We had an awful crowd on board coming home. The boat people had faithfully promised that they would take no other excursion on the same date as ours—they always promise that, its very decent of them!"

"Then why the crowd?"

"Oh, they didn't keep their promise—none of the lines ever do in that particular. There were two other picnics on hand that day, and the youngsters got mixed. I'm sure we fed hundreds that didn't belong to our crowd at all. And some of our own were overlooked, I hear, and there is dreadful trouble over it. That's the worst of the big picnic! It is almost impossible to manage everything satisfactorily. The commissariat department demands so much attention from those in charge of the expedition that there is hardly any time to devote to amusing the youngsters, and they just hang around most of the time. When the races begin they fall and hurt themselves, and quarrel over the prizes, and when they get them say they are no good. And the grown-up people come home nearly dead, and the children are cross and tired and ought to have been in bed three hours ago, and the parents all vow they'll never let them go again, and—oh, don't let us talk of it any more! It will be a year before the next one!" — From "The Opinions of Mary." William Briggs.

Nerves Were Exhausted

Wants others to know of her remarkable cure by use of DR. CHASE'S NERVE FOOD.

Mrs. Martin's condition as described in her letter below gives some idea of the extraordinary reconstructive power of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. Such cures as this have placed Dr. Chase's Nerve Food where it stands today as the most popular and most effective nerve restorative that money will buy.

Mrs. Edwin Martin, Ayer's Cliff, Que., writes,—"Before I began using Dr. A. W. Chase's Nerve Food I was in a terrible condition. Dizzy spells would come over me and I would fall to the floor in a faint. I could not even sweep the floor without fainting and my nervous system seemed to be entirely exhausted.

"The use of Dr. A. W. Chase's Nerve Food has built up my system wonderfully so that I can do my housework and washing without any trouble, and I want others to know about it." Insist on getting the genuine Dr. A. W. Chase's Nerve Food, 50 cts. a box, 6 boxes for $2.50, at all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Toronto.

TEACHING HORSES TO STAND.

By J. W. Sangster.

A team or a single horse that will stand perfectly still, until asked to move forward, is about as sure a test of the kind of a horseman the driver is as can be found. How often do we see some spirited horse stamping around, backing up, and then straining on the rein. While its driver is alternately jerking at the rein, and endeavoring to get the rug around his knees, or assisting some lady perhaps, to get comfortably seated?

There is a time when this matter can be remedied. It is when the horse is receiving his first lessons. He should be taught to stand absolutely still at all times, until he receives the word of command to move on. Moderately still will not do. It must be emphasized in the horse's mind that he must not move. If this is once done, and it takes a good many lessons to do it, the matter is practically settled. The horse's one stock in trade is his memory, and he will afterward stand still, so that the driver can make all preparations in comfort.

Perhaps there is no one other thing which has done more to make nervous women apprehensive of horses than a few experiences with horses that would not stand still while the driver was getting ready. A horse which dances around at that time, exhibits little appearance of being under the control of the driver. As a matter of fact, he isn't, to the same extent, as if he were trained to stand.

ARCH. McCOLL CHIEF POLICE AT PORT COBALT.

Archie McColl, ex-soldier in the Boer war and former police officer, at present a Provincial Constable can be chief of police at Port Cobalt, says a Haileybury despatch, if he wants the job. At the meeting of the Burke township council in the offices of Clerk Hector McQuarrie, the members voted to delegate reeve Stewart as a committee to ask McColl to accept the position. Mr. McColl lives in Englehart. He has a good record as a police officer. After serving a time on Toronto police force he left for South Africa with a Canadian regiment where he saw active service. Later he returned and again served on the Toronto force. Three years ago he took the position as chief of police for Haileybury. Order was restored in the town and sanitary regulations put into force, something Haileybury had hardly known up to that time. Former chief of police for the province Archibald once said that McColl of all the young men he had sent out possessed rare qualities as a detective and would make good in any place he filled. Archie is well known about Inglewood where his folks live.

EXCITING RAILWAY EPISODE.

Three Freight Cars Ran Away From Bolton—Stopped at West Toronto

Says the Telegram: The Canadian Pacific Railway officials had an anxious few minutes on Saturday, July 2nd, when three cars got away from the train crew at Bolton and rushed down into West Toronto Junction at a mile a minute, a distance of 21 miles.

The train crew were shunting cars into the siding at Bolton in which the three cars were standing; these were struck by the shunted cars and immediately started, going over the switch point, which is a split one, out on the main line and down the grade. They didn't stop until they reached West Toronto. Word was ticked off to the chief despatcher in Toronto, whose first duty was to stop passenger express, No. 19, leaving Toronto at 5.20 p.m. This he succeeded in doing by a second, which, however, was enough to prevent what would have been a most serious disaster.

If the passenger train had met the three heavy freight cars many would probably been killed. The cars were loaded with heavy freight. While the cars were making their way towards Toronto the despatchers got busy and stopped everything along the line. They made provision in the meantime to derail the cars just west of West Toronto. There was a second danger point, and that was at the St. Clair ave. crossing. At this point suburban cars cross, and men were despatched to this point to avert an accident. They were on hand in time but none too soon.

Fortunately no one was injured, but the officials have scarcely recovered from their fright.

When the cars neared West Toronto their speed had slackened through climbing a grade, and a G. T. R. brakeman climbed up on the back car, put on the brakes, and brought the cars to a stop.

MUNICIPAL OWNERSHIP.

Time was when anyone who proposed municipal ownership of public affairs was looked upon as a visionary, says the Toronto Star. So radical is the change which has taken place that over a hundred places in Ontario own and operate their own waterworks systems, and seventy-five or more have built or acquired electric light plants. The motto of municipal ownership is service rather than profit, and the average of efficiency is higher than usual in towns and cities operating their own utilities. The report of the Ontario railway and municipal board demonstrates, moreover, that the proportion of civic plants which have deficits is small, and in nearly every case where there is a deficit it is for a minor amount.

Thus, of seventy-one municipally owned waterworks plants, reporting their year's operations, twenty-three have a deficit, but the total of these deficits is less than $52,000, as compared with a gross surplus of $369,000 piled up by the others. Forty-eight municipal electric light plants report a surplus. The deficits of the thirteen others reporting aggregate less than $7,500. Of half a dozen civic gas plants, two report deficits totalling a little over $1,200. The other four have a surplus of $31,000.

Privately owned plants, with all their record of inferior service, could hardly make a better showing.

BELLWOOD WELL-DIGGER KILLED BY CAVE-IN.

Jesse Edwards the Victim — Neighbors Tried Hard to Rescue Him.

Jesse Edwards, a well digger, was buried in a well on the premises of Mr. W. G. Gerrie at Bellwood and probably instantly killed. Edwards was at the bottom of the well, which was about 35 feet deep, when a cave-in occurred from the top, burying him completely. It is supposed that the crib work to support the sides had not been constructed carefully. The news of the accident quickly spread, and practically the whole village gathered at the spot. A gang of men were soon at work in an endeavor to reach the buried man. A faint hope was entertained that Edwards might still be alive, and, spurred on by this, the rescuing party worked with unremitting energy.

The progress made was slow, however, owing to the fact that a new crib had to be constructed to protect the workers.

About five o'clock the body of the unfortunate man was reached. It is believed by the doctors that death must have been instantaneous. Edwards was about thirty years of age, unmarried, and the only support of his widowed mother.

TELL THE EDITOR.

Every newspaperman has the experience that there are some weeks when it is difficult to secure local news, although the material may exist for many interesting paragraphs if only he knew the circumstances. The readers of the Banner could often help the editor out in this respect, if they would take the trouble to jot down a few notes of the occurrence or incident, of which they know the particulars and send them in. We want all the real news of the district without the gossip, and will appreciate any assistance our friends can give us in accomplishing that end.

The Conservatives of North York will hold their annual picnic at Jackson's Point on July 20th.

THE FORMULA OF "FRUIT-A-TIVES"

Is On The Outside Of Every Box For All The World To See

Every user of "Fruit-a-tives" knows exactly what is being taken. The formula of this famous fruit medicine is printed plainly on the outside of every box. We have stated many times—and now state clearly—that "Fruit-a-tives" is made of the juices of apples, oranges, figs and prunes, with valuable heart and nerve tonics and antiseptics.

Everyone knows that fruit juice is healthful—but perhaps some do not understand why this is true.

Fruit juice consists of about 91% water, 8% of sweet principle, and 1% of a bitter substance. It is the quantity of bitter principle in fruit that gives the fruit value as a medicine. An eminent physician of Ottawa, after years of experimenting, found a method of increasing the bitter principle in fruit juice, thus increasing the medicinal or curative qualities.

The juices are first extracted from fresh, ripe oranges, apples, figs and prunes. By a secret process, some of the sweet atoms are replaced by the bitter principle. Then tonics and antiseptics are added, and the whole made into tablets, now known far and wide as "Fruit-a-tives."

"Fruit-a-tives" is the only medicine in the world that is made of fruit juices, and is one of the few remedies that have let their composition be known from their introduction to the public.

"Fruit-a-tives" is nature's stimulant for the liver, bowels, kidneys and skin. In cases of obstinate Constipation, Liver Trouble, Indigestion, Backache, Rheumatism, Headaches and Impure Blood, this wonderful fruit medicine cures when everything else fails.

"Fruit-a-tives" is sold everywhere at 50c. a box, 6 for $2.50, or trial box, 25c., or will be sent, postpaid, on receipt of price by Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

If you want to make your hair bright and glossy, rub it night and morning with an old white silk handkerchief.

If hooks for the bathroom, kitchen and pantry are dipped in enamel paint, there will be no trouble from iron rust.

In case of sudden croup, heat a little vinegar on a plate, wring out a piece of flannel in it and bind quickly around the throat. The smell and heat seem to penetrate at once.

Old case knives when broken off at the point can be filed down to paring knives of any length or width.

Small mice that cannot be caught in a trap may be disposed of by spreading sticky fly paper in places frequented by them.

Grained wood should be washed with cold tea, a small surface only at a time, and rubbed well with a flannel cloth before it comes dry.

Cabbage water is the cause of disagreeable smells when it is not thrown away. To avoid the smell, some people put a piece of charcoal in with the cabbage when boiling.

Turpentine should be sprayed or sprinkled in the haunts of cockroaches. It will often quite destroy the pests and will always disperse them.

A large brass hanging cone massed with drooping clusters of wistaria blossoms was an effective corner decoration in a country house hall scene the other day.

Cod liver oil stains on linen may be eradicated by soaking the marks with equal parts of liquid ammonia and hot water, mixed. Afterward wash with soft water and soap.

There should be a separate grater for onions. Do not use a combined grater in circular form with different sized teeth for nutmeg, cheese and cabbage, or you may lament spoiled foods.

Some people use the whites as well as the yolks of eggs in making mayonnaise. Just before serving the mayonnaise the white of the egg is whipped stiff and beaten into the dressing.

To shade lace mix five cents' worth of yellow ochre with an equal quantity of rice powder and put into a box. Put in the lace and shake it up. Brush off all the powder possible. It will be a fast color.

Never rinse lace in blue water with the idea of improving its color. Real lace should be finally rinsed in clear, soft water, or, better still, in skim milk, which will give it a soft, creamy color.

New boots which sometimes do not take a good polish should be rubbed over with a cut lemon before blacking. A cut raw potato will also serve the purpose, although the lemon is preferable.

Carpets can be cleaned and freshened by going over them once a week with a broom dipped in hot water that has a little turpentine in it (proportion a tablespoonful to a quart of hot water).

To Can Rhubarb.—Wash carefully, cut in small pieces, fill jars that have been warmed (to avoid cracking). Then pour boiling water over it until the rhubarb is well covered. Seal immediately.

After frying doughnuts, place the kettle of hot grease out of doors and pour in a little cold water, enough to make the grease bubble. This will take out the burnt taste, and the grease may be used again.

In cold weather put the clothes pins in a pan and set in the oven until they are hot. Then the fingers will not suffer when hanging out the clothes, especially if the clothes are rinsed the last time in warm water.

A clever device for letting the oil drip slowly from the bottle when making a salad dressing is this: Cut two grooves in the cork on opposite sides; one groove admits air, while the other permits the oil to run slowly and evenly.

To thoroughly clean a porcelain sink, take equal parts of chloride of lime and a good soap powder, rub well and then follow with lemon juice and salt. Let this remain on for several hours, and all the rust spots will disappear.

To make kitchen aprons, take as many widths and lengths as desired of calico or gingham, sew together and hem both ends. Draw a tape through one end to tie around the waist; either end can be used to draw tape through. When washed take out the tape and you have flat work to iron. Aprons made this way are made quicker than the apron with band and strings are laundered in half the time.

SOME CANNING RECIPES.

Miss Lucy Bowerman, graduate of Toronto General Hospital Training School for Nurses, has compiled "The Canadian Cook Book," a manual of Cookery and Domestic Economy, with blank pages for memoranda.

From this book, we select several recipes for canning fruit. The first is:—

Make a syrup of one cup of white sugar to two cups of cold water. Let boil while filling jars with fruit. Pour hot syrup into jars, put on the covers but not the rubber rings. Stand jars in boiler with boards under the jars to keep them from breaking. Pour cold water into boiler up to necks of jars, put cover on boiler and let come to a boil. This is sufficient for pineapples and raspberries, but other fruits need longer. Open jars, put rubber rings on quickly, fill with more syrup and seal bottles.

As a second method, place fruit in jars, putting glass covers on the jars. Put in boiler with towels under and around to keep from touching each other or the bottom of the boiler. Pour cold water into boiler and cook until fruit is tender. Then fill jars with syrup made from white sugar and water in the proportions of two to one. Cook ten to twenty minutes longer and then seal, being careful to have the jars quite full.

The third method, make a syrup as described above. Prepare the fruit and cook slowly in the syrup until tender. Dip out carefully, fill the jars until some of the juice runs over and seal. To prevent breaking the jars, wrap in a hot towel after scalding them or put in a knife or spoon while filling. The jars must be well sealed and tightly sealed. To make sure, turn jars upside down on table to cool. If any juice leaks out there is a defect in the sealing. Any juice left over keep for pudding sauce or mince-meat.

For fruit jellies, place fruit in jar in pan of tepid water. Let come to a boil and cook until fruit is broken to pieces. Strain through jelly-bag (do not squeeze the bag). For each pint of juice allow one pound of loaf sugar. Put the sugar in the oven to heat, stirring to prevent burning. Boil juice twenty minutes from the time it begins to boil. Add the sugar, stirring rapidly until thoroughly dissolved. Let come to a boil and remove at once. Bottle while hot, but do not seal until next day.—Canadian Farm.

It's easy to grow plants in a Sunshine-heated home

Pure, Warm Sunshine Air

PEOPLE living in homes heated with ordinary furnaces often claim they cannot grow plants with any degree of success. This is due to the fact that ordinary furnaces are not provided with an Automatic Gas Damper. There is nothing to prevent coal-gas, which is deadly to plant life, being forced up through the registers.

Now, when the gas in the combustion chamber of the Sunshine reaches a certain pressure it opens the Automatic Gas Damper and passes up the chimney, consequently there is no chance for it to escape through the registers. Instead, the air that passes through the registers is pure, warm, Sunshine air, laden with the proper degree of moisture from the water-pan. It's the kind of air that makes plants thrive and is good to breath into your own lungs.

If you want to guard your home (and who doesn't?) against evil-smelling, deadly coal gas order our agent to install the Sunshine Furnace guaranteed in your cellar.

MY SISTER'S FLIRTATION

With a Girl at a Window Opposite Who Mistook Her For Me.

By EDWARD C. HANCOCK.

(Copyright, 1910, by American Press Association.)

"What a lovely room!" exclaimed my sister Alice. She had come to inspect my new bachelor quarters in the city.

"I'm glad you like it. There's something lovelier over there in the back of that house. A pretty girl sits every afternoon in the middle third story window."

A girl came to the window designated, leaned a pair of white arms on the sill, looked down at the clothes-lines below and went away without seeing us.

"You don't mean to say you call her pretty?" said Alice.

"I consider her beautiful. I would like to attract her attention, but dare not."

"What are you afraid of?"

"Being a stranger to her, I am afraid of offending her."

"Suppose I coach you on starting a flirtation with a girl at an opposite window?"

"I wish you would."

"Will you do as I say?"

"Certainly."

"Very well. If she comes to the window again while I'm here I'll tell you what to do."

Alice went about the room opening drawers and closets, poking her nose everywhere. I never saw anything like the curiosity of a girl. Presently, looking out, she saw the girl sitting at the window opposite. She was darning stockings. Alice, keeping far enough back not to be seen, watched her for a few minutes, then said to me:

"Go to the window, pull up the shade or something to make a noise that will attract her attention, and when she looks at you throw her a kiss."

"Do you suppose I'm crazy to do such a thing?"

"I thought you promised to do as I said."

"I didn't promise to offer an insult."

"Stupid!"

"What do you mean?"

"Am I not a girl, and don't I know what would please a girl?"

"You wouldn't wish a man you had never seen to throw you a kiss, would you?"

"Never seen! Do you suppose she has never seen you?"

"I don't know that she has. Anyway, I have no reason to suppose she has noticed me."

"I have. I saw her casting glances over here."

"Oh, you see too much! I've been watching her too. She hasn't taken her eyes off the heel of that stocking since she has been at the window."

"There's nothing to be made of a fellow like you. Get me out some of your clothes. I'll put them on and do the trick myself. You and I are the image of each other, and she won't know the difference."

She put on just enough of my clothes to represent me and went to the window, giving a loud "Ahem!" The girl turned, and Alice threw her a kiss. The girl pulled down the sash with a bang and left the window apparently in high dudgeon.

"There," I said to Alice, "you've spoiled everything!"

"You mean I've started a flirtation."

"What can I do to"—

"Nothing. I'll do it for you. You'd spoil it all."

"But you're not here except occasionally."

"I'm going to stay here. Get me a room for a few days."

I would much rather have got rid of her, for I was sure she had offended the girl opposite, and I didn't wish her to get me any deeper into the mire. But she insisted, and I secured a room for her. That afternoon the girl opposite sat down by her window with her back turned to the light. She held a book in her hand.

"You see," I said to Alice, "to escape being insulted she must keep her back."

"Nevertheless I shall insult her again."

"I forbid you."

"Nonsense! If she had considered herself insulted she wouldn't have come to the window at all. She's playing it on you."

Alice had brought in some roses from home for me. She took up one, went to the window, took deliberate aim at the girl opposite and fired the rose, striking her on the back of the head. The girl started, turned, scowled, glanced at Alice and, supposing her to be a man, showed every evidence of being offended. Then she got up from her chair, closed the blinds and shut us off.

"Very likely she won't come to the window again today," said Alice. "It's too near dinner time. She'll have to do her hair before dinner, and then it will be too late."

"You seem to know all about it. Why will she have to do her hair before dinner?"

"Because it isn't fit for the dinner table."

"I thought it delightfully negligee."

"Delightfully frowsy you mean."

I took Alice to the theater that night, and the next day she was ready to resume her efforts with the girl opposite. After breakfast Alice called me to come to the window.

"There, stupid!" she said, pointing to the window opposite. "What do you think of that?"

On a stand near the window was a tumbler and in the tumbler was a rose.

"That's the identical rose you threw at her."

"You don't mean it?" I cried. "What's the next move?"

"I would like to have you make it yourself, only you might act silly. You see, at this time of day the sun shines on this window, and I'm afraid she'll suspect I'm a girl."

"I'll do it. I'm all right now. I'm not afraid of anything."

"Bosh! You have no pluck at all."

However, it was arranged that I should make the next move, whatever that might be, though Alice was to decide upon it. We sat, I reading the paper, Alice keeping watch on the window opposite. Presently the girl appeared in a very becoming morning costume. She looked up at the sky.

"She's pretending she's interested in the weather," said Alice, "but that's pretty thin considering there's not a cloud in the sky. Stay where you are. She can't see either of us. She'll think you have gone out and will give herself away by and by."

After the girl had examined the heavens she swept her eyes in a lightning glance across my window. Then she disappeared.

"Too bad," said Alice, "that she has put on her finery to be disappointed."

"What finery?"

"What finery! Do you suppose girls dress that way in the morning when they are doing household duties? She expected after yesterday's performances to see her admirer at least for a moment before his going downtown."

Alice went shopping during the morning, and I went to my club. Not yet being settled in an occupation, I am obliged to get away with the day as best I can. I met Alice at a glove counter and took her to lunch. Then we went to my room ready to continue my wooing by proxy. Alice concluded to close the blinds in order that she might observe the enemy through the slats; but, fearing the girl opposite would see her watching, she called a maid for the purpose. Then Alice and I lounged, awaiting developments. About 3 o'clock the girl came to her window and, seeing my blinds closed, did not scruple to fix her eyes upon them. Alice, who was watching her, directed me to suddenly throw the blinds open. I did so. The girl beat a precipitate retreat.

After awhile Alice told me to go to the window and sit there reading a paper with my back to the light. I did so, while Alice herself went to another window and watched through the slats. Presently she caught sight of a dim figure in the back of the room opposite. She could see that the girl was watching me. Then the girl came forward, unconscious that she was under observation. Suddenly Alice burst into a laugh.

"What is it?" I asked.

"She's throwing a kiss at the back of your head."

This was too much for me to endure without seeing. I turned just in time to catch a glimpse of a figure getting back out of the light.

"Now I have started you," said Alice, "I leave you to do the rest yourself. I shall go home tomorrow."

"Do you think I can get on alone?" I asked.

"There's nothing more to do in this way. If you wish to follow the matter up you must find a way to make her acquaintance, and, having met her, you must be careful not to mention anything you have learned of her interest in you. Better not mention this part of it. Treat her as a perfect stranger."

"Would you mind, Alice," I asked, "telling me how you learned all this?"

"I haven't needed to learn it. I'm a girl."

"But how about your experience in similar circumstances?"

"Oh, bother! There haven't been any similar circumstances in my case."

"You got it all by instinct?"

"Yes."

"Well, all I have to say is your instinct is mighty strong."

I at least had the ability to find out who the girl opposite was and hunted among my friends till I found a mutual acquaintance who introduced me. I courted her, but blundered, and it was a long time before I won her.

GOOD ENOUGH FOR ME.

(In Canadian Farm).

The world, they say, is gettin' old,
an' weary as can be,
But write me down as sayin', it's good enough for me!
It's good enough, with all its grief,
its pleasures and its pain,
And there's a ray of sunshine for every drop of rain!

They stumble in the lonesome dark,
they cry for light to see,
But write me down as sayin', it's light enough for me!
It's light enough to lead us on, from where we faint and fall,
An' the hilltop nearest heaven wears the brightest crown of all.

They talk about the fadin' hopes, that mock the years to be,
But write me down as sayin', there's hope enough for me!
Over the old world's wailin' the sweetest music swells,
In the stormiest night I listen and hear the bells—the bells!

This world o' God's is brighter than we ever dreamed or know;
Its burdens growin' lighter, an' it's love that makes it so.
An' I'm thankful that I'm livin',
when love's blessedness I see,
'Neath a heaven, that's forgivin'
when the bells ring home to me.

HUTCHINSON—NELSON.

A quiet, but pretty, wedding took place at the beautiful home of Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Flett, St. Therese, Que., at 7.30 p.m., Wednesday, June 29th, when their friend, Ina Edna May Nelson, of Mono Road, Ont., was united in marriage to John Wesley Hutchinson, of St. Therese, Que., formerly of Sand Hill, Ont., by Rev. A. Bowman, in the presence of about twenty guests from Montreal, Ottawa and St. Therese. The bride, looking charming in a very pretty gown of biscuit silk and carrying a shower bouquet of cream roses, was given away by Mr. J. H. Flett, the wedding march being played by Miss Julia Kimpton. The groom's gift to the bride was a handsome brooch in the form of an acorn, with pearl settings. After the usual congratulations and good wishes the guests repaired to the dining room, which was decorated for the occasion, where a dainty supper awaited them, after which a pleasant social evening was spent. The bride was the recipient of many beautiful and useful gifts, among them being a silver tea service from Mr. and Mrs. John Hutchinson, mahogany parlor table from Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Flett and a handsome easy chair from the employees of the Dominion Furniture Co. of which Mr. Hutchinson is first-engineer.

By-Law No.....

A By-Law to provide for drainage work in the Township of Amaranth, in the County of Dufferin, and for borrowing on the credit of the municipality the sum of three thousand, one hundred and eighty-four dollars, and seventy cents, for completing the same. Provisionally adopted the 9th day of July 1910.

WHEREAS for the better maintenance of certain drains heretofore constructed under the provisions of the municipal drainage act, and to prevent damage to certain lands and roads, caused thereby, it is deemed expedient to change the course, enlarge, and extend the outlet, and otherwise improve certain of the creeks of rivers as is necessary for the free flow of the water.

AND WHEREAS the said Council has procured an examination to be made by the said A. R. Leicester, being a person competent for such purpose, of the drains requiring the hereinafter mentioned improvement, and has also procured plans, specifications and estimates of the proposed alterations or improvements to be made by the said A. R. Leicester, Engineer, and an assessment to be made by him of the lands and roads to be benefited by drainage work, and of all lands and roads liable for contribution thereto, stating as nearly as he can the proportion of benefit, outlet liability and injuring liability, which in his opinion, will be derived or incurred in consequence of such drainage work by every road, and lot or portion of lot, the said assessment so made, being the assessment hereinafter by this by-law enacted, to be assessed and levied upon the roads and lots or parts of lots, hereinafter in that behalf specified, set forth, and described, and the report of the said A. R. Leicester, in respect thereof, and of the said drainage work, being as follows :—

59 Yonge St., Toronto, Ont.,
July 2nd, 1910.

To the Municipal Council of the Township of Amaranth, County of Dufferin.

Dear Sirs,—In accordance with the petition signed by R. J. Wallace and others, under section 75 of the drainage act, and with the instructions of your Council, I have made the necessary surveys, levels, and elevations to locate drain No. 47, to drain the lots through which it passes and answer all other purposes for which it is intended. I consider the outlet into the Grand River, with the removal of logs, etc., around this point, sufficient for the present, but if any additional drainage is put into the river above this point, the question of deepening the channel of the river will have to be considered.

I herewith beg to hand you the necessary plans, profiles, assessments, and roll appertaining to the said drain No. 47.

Yours very truly,
MILLS, A. R. LEICESTER.

AND WHEREAS the said Council of the Township of Amaranth, pursuant to the provisions of the Municipal Drainage Act, enacts as follows :—

1. The report, plan, specifications, assessment and estimate, are hereby adopted, and the drainage, as therein indicated and set forth, shall be made and constructed in accordance therewith.

2. The Reeve of the said Township of Amaranth may borrow on the credit of the Corporation of the said Township of Amaranth, the sum of three thousand, two hundred and forty dollars and seventy cents ($3240.70) being the funds necessary for the work not otherwise provided for and may issue debentures of the Corporation to that amount in sums of not less than $50.00 each and payable within fifteen years from the date thereof with interest at the rate of four per cent. per annum, that is to say in equal annual instalments, such debentures to be payable at the Bank of Hamilton, in the City of Toronto, and to have attached to them coupons for the payment of interest.

3. For paying the sum of ten hundred and twenty-four dollars ($1024), the amount charged against the said lands and roads for benefit, and the sum of eleven hundred and two dollars and seventy cents ($1102.70), the amount charged against said lands and roads for outlet liability, and the sum of six hundred and fifty-four dollars ($654), the amount charged against said lands and roads for injuring liability, apart from lands and roads belonging to or controlled by the municipality, and for covering interest thereon for fifteen years at the rate of four per cent. per annum, the following total special rate, over and above all other rates, shall be assessed, levied and collected in the same manner and at the same time as other taxes are levied and collected upon and from the undermentioned lots and parts of lots and roads :—

4. For paying the sum of four hundred and sixty dollars ($460), the amount assessed against the said roads and lands of the municipality, and for covering interest thereon for fifteen years at the rate of four per cent. per annum, a special rate on the dollar, sufficient to produce the required yearly amount therefor, shall, over and above all other rates, be levied and collected in the same manner and at the same time as other taxes are levied and collected upon and from the whole rateable property in the said Township of Amaranth, in each year for fifteen years after the final passing of this by-law during which the said debentures have to run; said debentures shall be payable on the 28th day of December of each year for the following years, namely :—1910, 1911, 1912, 1913, 1914, 1915, 1916, 1917, 1918, 1919, 1920, 1921, 1922, 1923 and 1924.

5. That the Council are hereby appointed Commissioners to let the contract for completing the said drainage work therewith by public sale, (not exceeding the estimate), but every such contractor, with one good and satisfactory surety, shall be required forthwith to enter into bonds for the due performance and completion of contract according to said plan and specifications, and within the time mentioned in said bond, unless otherwise ordered by the Council, and it shall be the duty of said Commissioners to cause said drains and works connected therewith to be made and constructed in accordance with such plans and specifications and to grant orders on the Treasurer to each contractor, less twenty-five per cent. of the amount due, until the contract is fully completed and duly accepted, and for the due performance of these and all other duties of commissioners. The said commissioners shall be entitled to receive a fee of two dollars per day for each day of actual service.

6. This By-law shall be published, or served, once in every week for four consecutive weeks in the Banner Newspaper, published in the Town of Orangeville, and shall come into force upon and after the final passing thereof, and may be cited Outlet to Drains By-Law by Cleaning out of Grand River.

THE GLADSTONE FAMILY.

Origin of the New Governor-General of South Africa.

Mr. Herbert Gladstone's title, Viscount Gladstone of Lanark, revives in a very interesting way the old connection with a part of Scotland in which members of his family were settled for several generations. The connection, however, is not with the town of Lanark; it is with the county of that name. It was really to the Biggar district of Lanarkshire that the new peer's ancestors belonged. Indeed, the name of Gladstone is still a somewhat common one in Biggar, of which town the viscount's great-great-grandfather was an honored inhabitant. In the churchyard close to the doorway of the parish kirk there is a large throughstane inscribed with the names of many Gladstones.

The first is that of John Gladstones, "portioner," who died on June 1, 1756, aged 63 years. He was a prosperous maltman—the malting industry was then an important one in Biggar—and was "keeper of the baron's girnal"; that is, custodier of the rents paid in kind by tenants to the Lords Fleming. An elder in the kirk, a Freemason, and holding a good social position, he was a man of considerable importance in the town and district. This John Gladstones was the great-grandfather of William Ewart Gladstone.

He had a large family—six daughters and five sons. One of the latter, James, was destined for the Church of Scotland, but failed in the pulpit, and, like many other "stickit ministers" of the age, turned to teaching. More successful in this profession, he became rector of the Grammar School of Leith. His brother, Thomas (the fourth son of John Gladstones), started business as a corn merchant in that seaport and was very successful. He had a son, John, who was also in business in Leith, but who removed to Liverpool, where he engaged in the West India trade. Acquiring a fortune, he purchased the estate of Fasque, and in 1846 was created a baronet. His third son was William Ewart Gladstone.

Originally the family name appears to have been Gledestane. The first of whom there is any record is, curiously enough, a Herbert—Herbert de Gledestane. He appears in very unpatriotic guise on the Ragman Roll as one of those who in 1296 did homage to Edward I. of England. The connection of the family with the Border district began in the reign of David II., son of Robert Bruce, who in return for some services bestowed upon William de Gledestanes a grant of the lands of Woodgreenynd, on the Eddlestone Water, in Peeblesshire. Other lands in the neighborhood were acquired by marriage, and the family appears to have developed an acute attack of land hunger.

Several claims were advanced to common lands, and, although these claims were set aside by the courts, the Gledstanes were not seriously discouraged, and on more than one occasion attacks were made on burghers who resisted them. John Gledstane in 1561 was indicted for the slaughter of two burghers whose death had occurred in one of these forays, although nothing seems to have come of the prosecution.

"But other days and other fortunes came." There does not appear to have been any sudden catastrophe, and there is nothing to suggest that the change in the feudal position of the Gledstanes was due to the political revolutions and unrest which proved the undoing of so many Scottish families; there appears rather to have been a gradual decline in the family fortunes. First the estate of Gledstanes went; it was followed by that of Hundleshope, and eventually the last of the family possessions, the estate of Arthurshiel, went also. Then William, the son of the last of the Gledstanes of Arthurshiel, settled in Biggar as a maltman about the end of the seventeenth century. From this time the family became identified with commercial pursuits. William was succeeded in the same business by his son, John, already mentioned.

It seems to have been this John who changed the name from Gledstanes to Gladstones. The final s was not dropped until 1835, when Sir John Gladstones of Fasque obtained the royal license to change the name to Gladstone.

The old ancestral stronghold of the Border Gledstanes—the Gledstanes of that ilk—has completely disappeared. There was—there must have been—an ancient castle, but none of it remains. Easter Gledstanes has a farmhouse, and at Wester Gledstanes there are a few small cottages for agricultural laborers, but there are no traces, no relics, and no landmarks of the old Gledstanes on their ancient ancestral estates. It is to Biggar in Lanarkshire that one must turn for such relics and landmarks.

High Life.

Up to a short time ago it was believed that the highest human habitation was a Buddhist convent in Tibet, where twenty-one monks devote their lives to the adoration of Buddha at an altitude of some 14,000 feet above sea level. It has been established lately, however, that a colony of mine laborers engaged in working tin and bismuth mines on Mount Chorolque, province of Chiches, Bolivia, are living in a settlement more than 17,000 feet above sea level.

A Dying Island.

An island in Puget sound near Vancouver, B. C., about twenty miles in circumference, is apparently dying from old age. Last summer it was observed that every fir and cedar tree on the island was dead. Near the water's edge vegetation seemed withered, and thin vapor hung over the island all day. There is not a living thing on the island. Not even a crow rests upon the topmost branches of the new dead dead.

THE GLORIOUS TWELFTH

Lodges from Dufferin, Peel, Halton and Simcoe Counties Celebrated in Orangeville on Tuesday.

22 Lodges Take Part in Afternoon Procession.

The Celebration held in Orangeville on Tuesday under the auspices of Dufferin County Orange Lodge was a success in every respect. 15 of the 23 primary lodges in this County spent the day here and were joined by seven visiting lodges from Peel, one from Halton, and one from Simcoe Counties. Orangeville Citizens' Band and the members of the local lodges met the visitors on their arrival and escorted them to the Town Hall, where the colors, drums, etc., were deposited during the noon hour. The rain in the early forenoon kept many people at home, but the Demonstration attracted an enormous crowd, notwithstanding the unfavorable day. There were easily 6000 or 7000 people in town.

The afternoon procession to Reid's grove was marshalled by W. Bro. J. A. Patterson, County Director of Ceremonies, who got the lodges into order with commendable despatch. It was about 1.30 when the long line of lodges began to file out of Alexandra Park and march to Broadway by way of Third St. The order of the procession was as follows :—

W. Bro. H. A. Duke, P. D. M., Orangeville, Mounted.

Carriages with speakers and aged members of Order.

W. Bro. J. G. Ward, Co. Master of Dufferin, and W. Bro. Jas. A. Patterson, County Director of Ceremonies, Mounted.

W. Bro. Jas. G. Ward, County Master of Dufferin, occupied the chair during the speech making.

The addresses given at the Park attracted a large and attentive audience, who were entertained for nearly two hours by a flow of oratory worthy of the occasion. After the welcome greeting by Mayor Riddell, and a few words of introduction by C. R. McKeown, M.L.A., who did did not wish to take up the time of the speakers from a distance, Rev. William Walsh, of Brampton, delivered a stirring oration. Canon Walsh is a witty Irishman, a great favorite as a platform speaker, and frequently rose to high flights of eloquence. He shewed the broad charity of the Orange Order, and emphasised its tolerant principles. Referring to the situation of affairs in the public schools in Prescott and Russell, where Protestant children are being forced to take place in Roman Catholic religious exercises, the speaker was emphatic in his denunciation, and was glad the province had a premier strong enough to see the law was observed. The early history of the Orange Order was traced, and its present strong position noted. Canon Walsh made the most eloquent speech of the afternoon, and was frequently applauded. Rev. Mr. Ketterson, Anglican minister, Erin, followed. The reverend gentleman has a fund of humor, and a fine Scotch accent, and rapidly put himself on good terms with the crowd. Concluding, Mr. Ketterson said next year there would be a big Orange Demonstration in his village, and invited every one to come to Erin.

Mr. Thos. Duke, now a prominent merchant of Vancouver, B. C., had a seat on the platform, and was welcomed by the brethren as he arose to address them. Mr. Duke is well-known in these parts, being a son of the late William Duke, sixth line, Mono, and married to a sister of J. T. Scott, of Caledon East, where he formerly kept store. Going to Vancouver some years ago, Mr. Duke embarked in the grocery business and has been eminently successful. Mr. Duke, who has a pleasing address, told of the progress of the Order in the western province. He was the first Provincial Master of the Orange Order in British Columbia, and is now Master of a lodge in Vancouver, with a membership of 190. Revs. J. R. Bell, T. R. White, Kennedy and Davies, each delivered brief patriotic addresses.

Richard Blain, M.P., for Peel, dealt with the school question as it affected the members of the House of Commons. The great North West had formerly a dual school system, and on the creation of the two new Provinces of Alberta and Saskatchewan, the question had become an important one. The member for Peel thought then, and thought so still, that the twenty-five members elected by, and responsible to the people of these great provinces were the proper parties to determine the question for themselves. Mr. Blain spoke appreciatively of the kindness he had always received in Dufferin County, and resumed his seat amid applause. Sam. Charters, M. L. A. for Peel, was wise, epigrammatic, and eloquent. He is also developing a veritable genius for statistics, and told the brethren just how big and how great this country was in a manner which would have done a credit to Hon. George E. Foster in his palmy days. Among the good things the Brampton editor-statesman said was that, "Orangemen were not met to fan the dying embers of a fire, but to remember the principles of toleration." Robert Johnston, ex-M.P. Registrar of Peel, spoke briefly, and a hearty vote of thanks was moved by Rev. J. R. Bell, and seconded by Mr. William Duke, and tendered to the speakers. Mr. John C. Ward, County Master, made an efficient chairman.

An interesting programme of musical contests and foot races was run off on the High School grounds in the presence of a large concourse of interested spectators. The winners in these and the lodge contests judged during the march, were :

The following timely and [illegible] article appeared in a recent [illegible] The Canadian Farm :—

On this pure water question [illegible] ever occur to you what filthy [illegible] water the live stock kept on [illegible] farms have to drink? The barnyard well is the source of supply [illegible] there is a running stream on the farm. For convenience this well is located right up near the stables and frequently in the centre of the barnyard itself. There it does [illegible] in providing water for the live[illegible] year in and year out. It receives the drainage from the barnyard and pollution from other sources. The water takes on the color of its surroundings and the stench as well, and becomes the breeding ground for all kinds of injurious germ life. The [illegible]ands of animals kept on farms [illegible] water of this description, and [illegible] owners wonder why they [illegible] make live stock keeping a profitable business. Disease-laden water [illegible] affect a domestic animal just as much as it will affect a person. It is [illegible]ing short of cruelty to animals [illegible] compel them to quench their [illegible] at these foul cess-pools, to say [illegible]ing of how the farmer's pocket [illegible] is affected by such practices. Fill the barnyard well if it cannot be [illegible] clean, and dig one elsewhere. [illegible] all farm animals pure water to [illegible] and they will give a better return.

PROF. TELEGMAN DEAD.

Gravenhurst, July 7.—Prof. H. B. Telegman, who has been conducting performances of H. M. S. Pinafore throughout the country, was found dead in bed this morning at Anderson's summer resort, Koshee Lake. He held a concert here about a week ago, and intended to give a repetition of it Thursday night. Thursday morning he drove to Koshee Lake with Mr. Passmore of this place for a day's fishing. In the evening he had been in the best of spirits, playing the violin and singing. About 10 p.m. he went to his room, but about an hour later he went downstairs for a glass of water. On returning he entered Mr. Passmore's room and apparently dropped on the bed. Mr. Passmore, who was sleeping soundly, was not aware that there was anything wrong until he awoke next morning and found Mr. Telegman dead beside him. Heart failure appears to have been the cause of his death. He had been complaining of heart trouble for several weeks. His relatives live in Kingston.

BE SURE you do not miss St. Mark's Church Tea and Garden Party WEDNESDAY, JULY 27th, from 6 to 10.30 p.m. (Look out for Programme)

Eczema's Tortures

All treatments failed for three long years—Cure complete with DR. CHASE'S OINTMENT.

Mrs. Link, 12 Walker St., Halifax, N. S., writes: "After three years of miserable torture and sleepless nights with terrible eczema, and after trying over a dozen remedies without obtaining anything but slight temporary relief, I have been perfectly and entirely cured by Dr. Chase's Ointment. After the third or fourth application of this grand ointment I obtained relief, and a few boxes were sufficient to make a thorough cure. It is six months since I was freed of this wretched skin disease, and as there has been no return of the trouble I consider the cure a permanent one."

Such cures are not brought about by imitations and substitutes for Dr. Chase's Ointment. It is therefore necessary for you to be certain that the portrait and signature of A. W. Chase, M. D., the famous Receipt Book author, are on the box you buy. 60 cts. a box, at all dealers or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Toronto. Write for a free copy of Dr. Chase's Recipes.

GROWTH OF RURAL TELEPHONES.

(From Canadian Farm).

To any one who travels the country roads, one of the most striking features is the continuous evidence of the growth of the rural telephone. Even the most remote and sparsely settled parts of the country have their strings of wired poles, spreading like a network along highway after highway and branching off here and there to take in some connecting link of electricity, would indeed be isolated.

The call of the telephone bell is no uncommon sound in the farmhouse to day. Men are called for the threshing, prices are learned, buying and selling is done, orders go to the butcher and the grocer, and friendly gossip and chat are all among the many things that keep the busy rural lines buzzing. The farmer with a tele phone is no more isolated than his brother in the city indeed,often far less so; for the city man as a rule, does not know his next door neighbor. The farmer knows everybody and thanks to the wonderful invention of Prof. Graham Bell, can talk to them all any day or minute of the night. To comment on the value of the telephone to the farmer, from the standpoint of prices and markets would be almost superfluous when one considers to how great an extent the instrument is used for this purpose.

"My telephone," says one farmer, "has, I calculate, paid for itself fifty times over since it has been installed. The times when it has told me to sell and the times when it has told me to hold for higher prices, are numerous.

"More than that, our compeny is only a little independent concern owned just among ourselves. Yes, I suppose you can credit me with a good part of its organization," he said in response to an inquiry. "You see, it happened this way: I noticed the advertisements of one of the big electrical supply houses and got interested. I wrote these people for their book on the organization of rural telephone companies, and they sent me full information on how to proceed. They told me everything I wanted or needed to know—told me a lot of things that I never even knew there was to know. They told me, not only about their telephones themselves, but posted me on the steps that I had to take to organize. All I had to do when I got that information was to go out to my neighbors and you bet, I was able to answer everything they asked me. Say, we had a telephone company organized and operating almost before you would know it and there's not a single one of our men to-day who would go back to the old way of doing without a 'phone for anything.

"No, it didn't cost us much. There's nothing prohibitive about the cost and, as I told you, we own the company among us. Last year, we paid a good dividend and it will only be a question of a few years till we have back every cent we invested and a telephone service into the bargain. Our running expenses are almost nothing—just the cost of maintenance and the salary of a girl at central. It is not worth speaking of. That's one advantage, you see, of a co-operative company such as ours.

"It's a surprising thing to us that more farmers don't organize telephone companies of their own. I believe they're doing it now more generally than they used to, but there are lots more that would and could organize if they only knew how simple it was to get started,and how great the benefits were.

"If there's one thing that I would advise more than another, it would be for some farmer in every locality to write in to one of the big telephone supply-houses to find out what they have to tell him. There's no reason either, why one man should put it off expecting another to do it; write yourself. Rural telephones are a thing a farmer can't know too much about—especially when there are concerns who are ready to tell him everything and not charge him a cent for the information.

"All I ever invested for the knowledge was a two cent stamp, and I read over the books they sent me in the evenings."

For eight months of the fiscal year, the succession duties have amounted to $379,055. The estimated receipts for twelve months are $650,000. THE LATE ALEXANDER GALE

We regret to announce the death of Mr. A. Gale, which occurred at his residence here on Friday last after a lingering illness of nearly two years duration. The deceased, who has resided here for the past ten years, conducted a general store until last March, when owing to continued ill health he was compelled to dispose of his business. He was a man of a quiet and retiring disposition, but genial and sociable, was a great reader and thoroughly acquainted with the public questions of the day. He was honest and upright in his dealings, and was universally respected by all with whom he did business. He was a member of the Presbyterian church and in the absence of the pastor, Rev. Robt. Fowlie, the funeral service at the house on Monday morning was conducted by the Rev. W. A. Bradley, B.A., of Berlin, an old acquaintance and friend of the family, the Rev. Mr. Hilts also taking part. The interment took place to the family plot at Salem Cemetery near Elora, a large cortege following the remains to the C. P.R. station here, from whence they were taken by train. Out of respect for deceased the places of business were all closed during the hour of the funeral. He is survived by his widow and three brothers,—Rev. James Gale, Missionary at Corea; Dr. Gale, of Bay City, Mich., U.S.; and Mr. R. Gale, who resides near Elora; and a sister, Mrs. Cleghorn, of Berlin, the three latter being present at the funeral. The bereaved widow and relatives have the sympathy of a large circle of friends in their time of sorrow.—Erin Advocate.

A COSTLY PAINTING.

"My! but these art works do run into money," remarked a passenger. "When I was in Chicago I saw a little painting, about a foot square, that was held at five hundred dollars. If I had a million of money you'd never catch me paying five hundred dollars for a painting like that." "That's the way you talk," spoke up a bashful traveller, "but I'll guarantee that you have paid four times as much money for a painting not a tenth part as big." "What, me." "Yes, you." "What kind of a painting." "The one at the end of your nose."

PILES.

THE BERRY PICKERS.

It is a call of the wild, the impulse to pick berries. Some time away back, a long time before the Fenian Raid anyway, our hairy forbears, like the other bears, the grizzlies, the cinnamons and the blacks, fed on berries in the sweet and ample summer time. Methinks that was the golden age. Think of it! Wild strawberries, wild raspberries (three or four kinds), blackberries, wild gooseberries, and currants, wild grapes, plums, sakatoons, dogberries, huckleberries, blueberries, wild cherries—what more do you want? And then as the berries gave out, our forbears, with the other bears and a racoon thrown in for luck, climbed trees and ate beech nuts till they got so fat and indolent that they wouldn't take the trouble to climb, but lay on the ground and fed on acorns that the squirrels pelted them with. Of course, our forbears, like the other bears, wore no clothes to speak of, and they had no religion—or, rather, religions; one religion is a tame affair—worth while. And yet those fellows, living as they did so close to the event, must have been in a position to give expert evidence, on the Flood, for instance.

In this artful age we are prone to pity the antediluvian man. I never could see that he was an object for pity. If he was hungry he went and picked berries and dug pit nuts. If he was thirsty a great spring flowed at the foot of every hill; and if he wanted a wife he just went and took her, same as you take a shirt off a line or grab a turkey on the fence and make off with it. And he wouldn't run any more risk than you would.

The ideal days in the country are near at hand. Early in the morning the girls will tog themselves out in their wrappers, and they will put on their sun-bonnets, or, better still, some will go bareheaded, and in little, noisy, happy groups they will trudge off to the "patch." Sometimes it is only ten acres, sometimes it is hundreds of acres, hill and valley, woodland, cornfield, pasture and swamp—an Eden of a place, wild and free.

At night, tired, but happy and laden with their spoils, they will come trooping home in time to milk. They work under no boss; they don't get so much a basket; there is no overseer more or less exacting. They are working for the loved ones at home. Their ambition is to fill so many gem jars, to have so many bottles of raspberry vinegar. There will be stewed berries at every meal, and always deep raspberry tarts for tea.

Some of the girls will take their pails of rich, ripe, wild fruit to the nearest town and come home with the makings of a new dress or a silk petticoat, or a set of dishes — something worth while.

I like to see the girls go across the farm berry picking, and yet I don't. They walk right through my crop. They rarely shut a gate behind them, and they stampede the sheep.

But he who has eaten a wildraspberry tart while the freckleface girl who picked the fruit around your wheat field sits on the verandah steps and pretends to be penitent, will forgive her anything.

—"The Khan," in Toronto Star.

AN EXCITING RUNAWAY.

Last night about nine o'clock a horse attached to a delapidated buggy, said to be owned by a young fellow named Thump, of Mono Mills, who is now working for W. T. Tait of East Luther, almost killed two children, besides hurting several grown up people, and smashing a plate glass window in J. Starkman's store. The horse bolted out of Swain's alleyway, with such speed that before it could turn on the road it was right up on the sidewalk in front of Starkman's store. The street was crowded at the time, Mrs. Starkman and baby were knocked off a chair and into the store; two children of C. Dillon's were pulled out from beneath the horse little damaged beyond a black eye and scraped chin; a baby carriage that held a child 30 seconds before was crushed out of shape; and the plate glass window broken. There was a little excitement and then some more. The chaps drove off immediately after they got hitched up again.—Grand Valley Star & Vidette.

ENTRANCE PAPERS DIFFICULT.

General Dissatisfaction Over Large Percentage of Unsuccessful Candidates

Arithmetic Paper Was Worst of the Lot.

From different parts of the Province come reports of general dissatisfaction over the recent Entrance examinations. Some of the papers, it is said, were not only difficult, but catchy as well. It is said too that undue severity was used in "plucking" candidates, whose answers showed that they were well prepared, but who made slips giving incorrect answers, although their methods were right. The arithmetic paper, which many of the public school teachers say was altogether too catchy, seems to be the chief cause of complaint. Thirty per cent. of the marks awarded were dependent upon absolute accuracy in mechanical operations, no credit being given for right methods if the slightest slip were made, causing an incorrect answer. This, say many teachers, and even some of the examiners who read the papers (but were not responsible for setting them), is too high a percentage to place upon the "accuracy test."

The geography paper proved too much for a good proportion of the candidates, especially the girls. The boys did pretty well with it, probably owing to their taking more no. tice of what goes on in other countries—they read the papers more, and have better general information than the girls.

Complaint is made about the composition paper, especially objecting to questions 2 and 4. Question 2 reads: 'A school debate is to be held on the subject: 'Resolved that Canada has greater natural advantages than the United States for the making of a great nation. Give an outline of the arguments by which you would support either the affirmative or the negative side of the debate." It is objected that public school pupils cannot reasonably be expected to understand the rules of debate, or even to be familiar with the terms "affirmative" and "negative" as applied in debate.

Question 4 called for the writing of a letter to a bookseller enclosing a bank draft to cover the cost of books and 50 cents for express, and requesting him to forward certain books by express, and the candidate was further required to write in a ruled space the bank draft and the envelope address. It is pointed out by a number of the teachers and others who protest against this question that writing of drafts of any kind, particularly such special kinds as bank drafts, is no part of an English composition course proper, but is commercial work. Further, it is claimed that very few even of business men have occasion to write a bank draft; they simply give the particulars to the bank clerk and he writes the draft.

The dictation paper is generally admitted to be fair enough, but some criticism is offered of the English of the passage chosen. No particular criticism has been made of the grammar paper unless of its length. The paper in what is called "written reading," but is perhaps better known as "literature" or "sight English," a lengthy one, and some think it rather difficult for Fourth Book scholars, being suited more to the capabilities of high school pupils.

The identity of the men who set the papers is a mystery. The policy of the present Department of Education, under the Superintendency of Dr. Seath, is not to publish the names of the examiners who set the various papers. In former years it used to be different, and the university matriculation papers gave the name of the maker of each paper on that paper.

It is understood that some of the boards of examiners, for example, in Barrie and Collingwood, are appealing to the department for leniency in the cases of pupils who failed only on one or two of the more difficult papers. Some of the parents, too, are asking, will not the department forgive the arithmetic paper altogether, because of its having been found so generally beyond the abilities of the candidates? To these questions the department as yet has made no answer.

WITH JACK & BOWL

Orangeville Lawn Bowling Club Hold a Successful Tournament.

Wright of Owen Sound Carries Home Trophy Prize.

The Orangeville Lawn Bowling Club held its first annual Tournament on its beautiful green on John St. on Wednesday of last week. The event was favored with ideal bowling weather and was in every respect a splendid success. 13 outside rinks were present, representing Owen Sound, Shelburne, Grand Valley, Mount Forest, Wingham, Elora, Brampton and Bolton Clubs. The Erin Club sent in two entries Tuesday afternoon, but withdrew them again Wednesday morning. The home club entered 10 rinks, so that 23 rinks competed for the fine prizes hung up for the winners in the three series of matches. The Tournament opened at 1.30 Tuesday afternoon. Before play started, Mr. C. R. McKeown, M.P.P. extended a hearty welcome to the visiting bowlers on behalf of the home Club. Photographer A. Henderson took a couple of excellent group photos. The grounds were prettily decorated with small flags and bunting and looked exceedingly attractive in their gala attire. A large marquee had been erected just west of the Club House and here the young ladies of the Charity Society, under the direction of Miss Hughson and with the assistance of Mrs. Fremlin, served coffee, sandwich, cake and other light refreshments. The ladies looked after this important part of the programme in capital style and the visitors were outspoken in their praises of the kindness and hospitality of their fair entertainers. Wednesday evening Orangeville Citizens' Band spent a couple of hours on the grounds and delighted everybody with a captivating musical programme. The home club made ample provision for seating the spectators, of whom there were large numbers Tuesday afternoon and evening and again Wednesday evening.

Tuesday afternoon's play left three rinks in the Trophy match, namely, Pow, of Grand Valley, who reached the finals after a hard game with Dr. Bowles, of Orangeville, and Wright, of Owen Sound, and Kirkwood, of Orangeville, in the semi-finals. Wright put Kirkwood out Wednesday morning and won a comparatively easy victory over Pow in the afternoon game. The Grand Valley quartette played good bowls, but seemed unable to score. The winners were presented with their prizes, four Hurndall Automatic Reclining Chairs, upholstered in leather, by Mr. A. A. Hughson. Each of the members of the winning rink replied briefly. After the presentation they were given three hearty cheers by the assembled players. The members of the Pow rink, who also came in for generous applause, were each presented with a handsome brass jardiniere. The Association semi-finals, which were reached early Wednesday afternoon, found three Orangeville rinks—Ritchie Dr. Carson and Dr. Bowles—and the Martin rink from Mount Forest surviving. Ritchie defeated Martin after a hard fight and Carson worsted Bowles in an exciting game. Dr. Carson won the final game from Ritchie, thereby capturing four solid leather club bags hung up as first prizes. The runners-up got panama hats. Dr. McGregor, of Elora, lost his first games in the Trophy and Association series and then turned his rink over to Dr. Robertson to change the luck. The Rocks quartette took a new lease of life in the Consolation and finally landed in the semi-finals, with the Lugsdin rink as their opponents. They put it over the Orangeville rink to the tune of 14 by 6 and Dr. Bowles did likewise with the E. C. Clark rink. The final, which was one of the best games of the Tournament, was played by electric light Wednesday night in the presence of 150 enthusiastic spectators. The Elora rink got a big lead right at the start and was never headed although the Orangeville quartette was dangerously close on two or three occasions. The final score was 14 to 11. Mr. C. R. McKeown, M.P.P. presented the winners with their prizes—four silver mounted silk umbrellas—immediately after the games. Each of the members of the Bowles rink got a set of carvers. One of the interesting features of the Tournament was the playing of the Lugsdin rink, composed of Mr. W. H. Lugsdin, Manager of the Bank of Commerce, and his three brothers who have been visiting here. One of the visitors, Mr. C. R. Lugsdin, comes from Winnipeg, and the others, J. H. and S. G. Lugsdin, from Toronto. The rink got as far as the semi-finals in the Consolation series. The players and results of the different matches were:—

TWELFTH ECHOES.

Mr. Wm. Fleming, of Toronto, was among the visitors in town.

• • •

Mr. Chas. Willoughby, of Toronto, celebrated the day here, marching with the Mono Mills lodge.

Laurel, Prince of Wales, Tullamore and Brampton lodges were headed by good fife and drum bands.

• • •

Mr. Jas. H. Corbett, of Proton, spent the day in town and was warmly greeted by scores of old friends.

The members of Relessey L. O. L. 1083 looked extremely well in their new white suits. The lodge made a large turnout.

Alton Band and Alton L.O.L. 770 headed the Dufferin Lodges. The brethren of L.O.L. 770 looked well and marched even better.

The Daughters of the Empire were active during the day and many of the visitors were tagged for contributions to the Orangeville hospital.

Sandhill lodge had a handsome new banner, which was just about the finest in the parade. It was painted in Toronto and cost the brethren $114.

• • •

The fife and drum band competition created great interest, the crowd applauding the rival bands in a manner that betokened the liveliest appreciation.

Ex-County Master John Baird, of Halton, accompanied the Brampton brethren and expressed himself as greatly pleased with the size and character of the Celebration.

Of the 23 lodges in the County, 15 celebrated in Orangeville. Grand Valley went to Wingham, Colbeck, Campania, Rich Hill and Primrose went to Shelburne, Connor and Ballycroy to Tottenham and Bowling Green did not take out their colors.

• • •

The Erin brethren are already after the 1911 celebration. Hundreds of dodgers were distributed on Tuesday inviting the Dufferin and Peel lodges to celebrate at Stanley Park next year. It is three years now since the last Celebration in Erin.

• • •

There were a number of veteran Orangemen in the procession. James Grahame, of Snelgrove, looked alert and youthful despite his ninety years and showed the stuff he is made of by taking a turn at the drum on Broadway. Wm. Burt, of Brampton, who is ninety-four, was one of the smartest men in the parade. Wm. Maxwell, of Inglewood, while not so old, marched for the fiftieth time on the Twelfth. Thos. Holmes, Sr., of Caledon, who was with the Mono Britons brethren, is 84 years of age, and has been in every Twelfth of July walk for nearly sixty years.

The Brampton Conservator had the following good word for the Orangeville hotels:—

"Orangeville hotels provided first-class accommodation for the visitors. Good meals were promptly served in all of the houses. Local option did not interfere with the quality of the service provided, nor did it add to the prices charged. While the wants of the brethren were ministered to in this direction there was no indication of the existence of intoxicating drinks. It is safe to say that since Orangeville was Orangeville no public gathering was ever conducted in a more orderly and becoming manner. There was no more indication of anything that there should not be than would be manifest at a Sunday School picnic, a fact which bears testimony to the manner in which the law is being observed."

On WEDNESDAY, July 27th, the ladies of St. Mark's Church, Orangeville, will give a splendid tea in the basement of the Church in connection with their GARDEN PARTY. ONE 25c. Ticket will admit you to all.

ALTON.

Local baseball fans are emphatic in declaring that on Saturday last they witnessed the most closely contested match seen here for a long time. The contesting teams were Belwood and Alton and Saturday's game was no exception to the recognized rule that when these old-time and doughty rivals come together there is always a strenuous struggle for victory. The rain, which had been threatening all morning, ceased at noon and at 4 o'clock the game was called. Considering that the grounds were rather soft, the fielding of both teams was remarkably fast. Belwood scored three runs in the first innings and two in the sixth, while only four Alton men completed the circuit, making the final score, 5 to 4 in favor of the visitors. One hour and fifteen minutes was the time required for the nine innings. In the seventh Belwood was retired in two minutes, Campbell only throwing four balls. The batteries were:—Alton, Campbell and Baughman; Belwood, Brawley and Black and Sargeant.

LIFE A NIGHTMARE

Helpless and Broken Down, Dr. Williams' Pink Pills Came to the Rescue.

There are many who think anæmia is a trouble confined to growing girls and women, but this is not the case. Thousands of men are anæmic, and attribute their growing weakness to mental or physical overwork, or worry, and who do not appear to realize that they are swiftly passing into that condition known as general debility, and that their trouble is due entirely to the fact that their blood is watery and impure. If the trouble is not taken in time, they pass from one stage to another until the breakdown is complete, and often until a cure is beyond hope. To men in all walks of life there is no medicine so valuable as Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. If you feel jaded, weak or worn out these Pills will make that rich, red blood that puts vim and energy into every portion of the body. Making good blood is the mission of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and good blood is the one secret of good health and vigorous life. An excellent case in point is that of Mr. R. W. Ellis, of Balcarres, Sask., who says: "Just four years ago I was in England making preparations to fulfill the long cherished ambition of coming to Canada. My health at that time was normal, though I was never very strong. Three weeks before the time of my departure I was overcome with a feeling of general weakness and faintness which rendered me so inert and lifeless that my days were shrouded in gloom. Consultation with a doctor brought me no consolation. Debility was my trouble and I was on the point of a breakdown. 'Canada in your condition means death,' said the doctor. 'You must have a complete rest.' A rest, however, was out of the question, a fortnight's holiday I had and then back to earn my daily bread. The next years were a series of misery and despair, body and brain undermined with a complaint the doctor could only call debility, but apparently could not cure. Snatching holidays when I could I struggled on until the opening of 1909, when completely prostrated I was compelled to go to my parents and become a burden to them. My life was simply an existence and friends said, behind my back, 'consumption.'

"In April, 1909, I began taking Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. Three months later, on July 1st, I sailed from Liverpool on the Tunisian for Montreal, full of new life, energy and hope. In this great country I am making good and I owe it all to Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. In three months they changed me from a nervous wreck to a healthy man. When doctors failed they succeeded, and I honestly believe they saved my life."

You can procure this great health-giving medicine from any dealer or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

JAMES MAXWELL.

Mr. James Maxwell, a well known resident of this locality, died very suddenly Tuesday afternoon, at the home of his brother, Mr. Allan Maxwell, 2nd line, Caledon, with whom he lived. Deceased had been subject to weak spells for the last two years and was overcome while sitting outside. Mr. Maxwell, who was 73 years and 11 months of age, was formerly a school teacher and followed that profession in this neighborhood for more than twenty years. He is said to have been quite wealthy, owning a farm in Caledon, besides having large deposits to his credit in two of the Orangeville banks. He was a bachelor and somewhat eccentric in his habits. Messrs. Allan and Wesley Maxwell, of Caledon, and William Maxwell, of Toronto, are brothers. Mrs. James McMaster, of Mono, is the only surviving sister. The funeral will take place from his late home to the Forest Lawn Cemetery at two o'clock this afternoon.

MRS. JOHN LOVELL.

Mrs. Annie Lovell, wife of Mr. John Lovell, Sr., a well known resident of Alton, passed away at her home in that village on Monday in her 67th year. The deceased lady had been in indifferent health for some months, but was only bedfast a little over a week prior to her death. Mrs. Lovell was born in Cranswick, Yorkshire, England, and came to Alton with her husband and family about twenty-two years ago. Besides her husband, who feels keenly the loss of his trusted and well-loved partner, a family of four sons and a daughter survive. These are Robert Lovell, of Credit Forks; Mrs. Albert McClellan, of Winnipeg, and J. A., Leonard and Arthur Lovell, of Alton. The late Mrs. Lovell was a staunch member of the Congregational Church. She was a woman who was both loved and respected and her demise will be sincerely mourned. The funeral was held from her late home to Alton Cemetery yesterday afternoon, Rev. Chas. Langford conducting the services at the house and grave.

A SUDDEN DEATH.

Mr. Thomas T. King, an old and well-known resident of this town, died very suddenly at Truro, Nova Scotia, a week ago Sunday. Mr. King was the representative of Girard & Cadin, of Three Rivers, Que., dealers in undertakers' supplies. A number of years ago Mr. King and his brothers conducted a large furniture business here. They were also actively identified with the local building trade and erected a number of stores and residences in the town a couple of decades ago. The deceased was 54 years of age and leaves a widow, one son and two daughters. W. P. King, Toronto; Chas. King, this town, and Walter King, East Garafraxa, are brothers. The remains reached Orangeville on Wednesday evening, and the funeral was held from his late home on West Broadway to the Forest Lawn cemetery Thursday afternoon. Rev. Dr. Harper conducted the funeral services.

MRS. GEO. ZILLIAX.

Mrs. George Zilliax, Sr., died at the Queen's Hotel, about eight on Monday evening, from the effects of a stroke of paralysis. The deceased was stricken about two weeks ago, and as it was the third attack, little hope was held out for her recovery from the first. She lingered in a semi-conscious state until the end came peacefully, as stated. Mrs. Zilliax, who was in her 65th year, came here with her husband some eight years ago from Listowel when Mr. Zilliax purchased the Queen's Hotel from the late Mr. Marsden. On disposing of the business some two years ago, Mr. and Mrs. Zilliax went to reside in Toronto, but returned here about two months ago and took up their abode at the hotel, which is now conducted by Mr. W. L. Wettlaufer, a son-in-law. The late Mrs. Zilliax took an active part in the management of the Queen's, during her husband's proprietorship, and was well known to the travelling public, by whom she was much appreciated for her kindness and hospitality. All her sons and daughters were present during her last illness, except Mr. John Watson, a son by a former marriage, who resides in Listowel. Besides her husband, Mrs. Zilliax leaves the following family: Adam Zilliax, of Prince Albert, Sask.; George Zilliax, Jr., of this town; Mrs. C. H. Smith, Toronto; Mrs. C. A. Wilson, of Qu'Appelle, Sask.; Mrs. McMillan, of Innisfail, Alta.; Alex. Watson, of Detroit, and John Watson, of Listowel. The funeral took place on Tuesday morning at 9.45 to the C.P.R. depot, thence to Listowel, where the interment took place yesterday afternoon at two o'clock from the residence of her son. The Rev. J. R. Bell, of the Presbyterian Church, Laurel, read the burial service at the house here, and the pallbearers were Adam and George Zilliax, sons, and C. H. Smith, C. A. Wilson and W. L. Wettlaufer, sons-in-law of the deceased, and D. B. Brown.

HOW TO KEEP YOUNG.

Keep in the sunshine. Avoid excesses of all kinds. Eat moderately at regular intervals. Cultivate a spirit of contentment, and keep the bowels regular and liver active by using Dr. Chase's Kidney and Liver Pills. No treatment is so definite and so satisfactory for this purpose. None so trustworthy and economical.

LEGAL ABSURDITIES.

Fine Distinctions That Are Found In the Criminal Law.

Burglary is the crime of breaking in and entering in the nighttime of another's dwelling house with an intent to commit a felony therein. This means precisely what it says. If a door or window is broken open, or the knob of an unlocked door is raised, or an unlocked window is raised, it is burglary. But if the door or window is left slightly open or even raised as little as an inch and a thief pushes or raises it entirely open and enters, it is not burglary. It means, too, a "dwelling house." Therefore if a family is sleeping in a tent or booth and a thief enters it is not burglary. If all the other conditions are met and it happens that the dawn has broken, there can be no burglary, for that part of the definition specifying the nighttime is strictly adhered to.

We meet another of these fine distinctions in "larceny," the stealing of personal or movable property, which requires that the thief must get complete control. Thus if a thief in attempting to steal a watch lifts it out of a man's pocket and it is not attached to the owner by a chain, if the thief gets it into his hand for a moment only it is larceny and felony. If, however, the watch is attached to the clothing, even though the pickpocket cannot see the chain, as might happen in a crowd, he has not had complete control, and the act is not larceny, but only a misdemeanor. The difference of the two terms relates only to the length of the sentence. But if it is your watch and you wish to see the trial of the would be thief proceed you will do well to see that the indictment does not choose the wrong word.—Charles B. Brewer in McClure's Magazine.

Baggage Insurance.

This is a modern business age wherein a pianist may insure his fingers, a dancer may insure her ankles or a man with important business on hand may be indemnified against late arrival of a passenger train which failed to convey him to a certain point in time to close an important deal involving millions. But there is still a new kind of indemnity, and not Lloyd's either. It is the mere insurance of your personal belongings while traveling, and this very latest idea is through a system of tourists' baggage tickets. A traveler bound anywhere can insure his baggage for a short period as readily as he can get personal accident insurance to cover the perils of the journey.—New York Tribune.

The Nobel Prizes For This Year.

A statement just published by the managers and trustees of the Nobel foundation shows that the five winners of the Nobel prizes for the year 1910 will each receive, in addition to the decoration, a money prize of about $38,000. The fund consists of 83,729,698 kronen, about $9,107,018. According to a provision in the deed of gift, 10 per cent of the income must be returned to the fund and about 25 per cent of the remainder is set aside for taxes, expenses incurred by members of the various juries in the discharge of their duties, etc. "But for these drafts on the fund," says the report, "the five prizes for 1910 would each be greater by about 60,000 kronen."

The Secret of Good Pies

PIE CRUST, more than any other delicacy of the oven, ought to be tempting and appealing to the taste.

You do not eat pie as a nerve tonic or to strengthen your appetite. You eat it for pleasure mostly.

You want it, of course, to taste good, at the same time you want the crust to be light, flaky, wholesome. Now, pie crust properly made from is always good food, the absolute uniformity of this best of all flours eliminates failure entirely. You get the same delightful results every time and your pies are more healthful and nourishing than if made from ordinary flour.

The reason is that "ROYAL HOUSEHOLD" having a larger percentage of high quality gluten, assimilates more readily, is more satisfying than ordinary flour, comes out of the oven flakier, more tender and more digestible.

Be sure to try "ROYAL HOUSEHOLD" when next you make pies. It is the finest flour in the world not only for Pastry but for Bread and all family baking.

"Ogilvie's Book For A Cook" containing 125 pages of tried and tested recipes will be sent free to any user of Royal Household Flour who asks for it. 23

HOW LONG ?

There can be no two opinions as to the advisability of regulating in some way the use of stallions in this country. If the licensing plan is not the one best adapted to meet the needs of the situation then adopt some plan that will do so. This sitting still and doing nothing policy, which the Ontario Government has evidently adopted is ruinous to the horse-breeding interests of the country. Good stallions are being brought into the country and there are good stallions in the country, hundreds of them, but their good work is largely counteracted by the supply of inferior scrub stuff that is still doing duty in the land. Let us havesome reasonable, carefully compiled legislation that will meet the needs of the situation and will, make it impossible for a farmer to be taken in by the owner of some "skate" of a stallion, just because he is not up on good breeding and good type in horse-flesh. There should be some central bureau where the farmers could get reliable information regarding every entire horse standing for service in this country.—Canadian Farm.

CHILD BITTEN BY A DOG.

On Saturday afternoon, Percy, the seven-year-old boy of Mr. John W. Connor, of Bowling Green, was pretty badly bitten by a dog at his aunt's, Mrs. Wesley Bates. He and two other children of the house went over to Mr. Bates' for the afternoon, and had just reached the house where the dog, which had a general dislike for children, made a dash at them, bursting through a screen door. The little fellow's neck was cut and tore to require four stitches, and in addition his body was badly scratched. The doctor cauterized all abrasions, and does not fear any serious results. There is nothing to believe the dog had rabies. He was not accustomed to children and always appeared cross when any came about the place. At the present time when the rabies scare is still to the front, such an affair has a different aspect, and furnishes more argument for the muzzling ordinance which is supposed to be in operation.—Star & Vidette.

ABOUT SIR THOMAS.

How the Great Irish Yachtsman Made His Money.

Sir Thomas Johnstone Lipton, Bart., K.C.V.O., one of Britain's most noted merchant princes, is widely known also as a practical philanthropist. But most of all is Sir Thomas popular and famous for his plucky attempts to win that much coveted of yachting trophies, the America Cup.

So far, success has not rewarded his ambitious and costly endeavors in that direction, but the many admirers of Sir Thomas join with him in the hope that he may yet experience the joy of "lifting that cup" for which he has hitherto challenged in vain. His victory would be indeed popular on both sides of the Atlantic. No man has displayed greater enterprise and ardor combined in the fascinating pursuit of yachtsmanship; no truer sportsman ever trod deck, or stood at the helm than the man who owned the Erin and the Shamrocks, and who belongs to most of the crack yacht clubs in his native isles, as well as to that of New York.

Interested in aviation and keen on motoring, the chief recreation of Sir Thomas Lipton's strenuous business life has been sailing under "white wings." For the sea and yachting he has a perfect passion.

But first he earned the right and the wherewithal to engage to his heart's delight in his aquatic hobby by diligence in business.

For Sir Thomas has been the architect and builder of the huge fortune which he now enjoys.

Born in Glasgow in 1850, of parents who had migrated thither from the North of Ireland, with but little of worldly gear, he quite early in life created a thriving business out of nothing in a "mean street" of the city of good St. Mungo.

A glutton for work from the first, he displayed a perfect genius for shopkeeping. His motto was to get the best only of everything he had to sell, and to force it under the eyes of buyers. A born advertiser, the people who passed his stores were attracted by the goods cunningly displayed, in the beginning by his own hands, and later on under his watchful oversight. They became purchasers in steadily increasing numbers, and young Lipton prospered exceedingly.

His business, in course of time, expanded enormously; and then to supply his ever-lengthening provision counters Thomas Lipton became breeder, planter, and manufacturer. To and fro he went to America, and to and fro again, to make sure of steady and sufficient streams of trading-stock, raised under his own control.

Then he made Ceylon his tea-garden; soon thereafter transferring his commercial headquarters to London.

He started biscuit factories in Scotland, fruit farms down in Kent, mammoth meat stores in the United States, and markets in many different towns all over the British Isles.

Sir Thomas Lipton is, in his modest way, proud of being a self-made man, and often gloried in his great central warehouses in the City Road, London, in recalling the time when he, perforce, had to toil something like seventeen hours a day. From the London centre he and his staff are directly in communication with the main branches of the business in Liverpool, Glasgow, and Dublin.

Cheery and full of humor always, Sir Thomas is instinct with kindly charity. One outcome of this was his founding of the Alexandra Trust for providing the poor with cheap wholesome meals.

Peculiarities of the Baronetage.

One of the peculiarities of the baronetage is that while the precedence of a baronet is before all knights save Knights of the Garter, that of his wife is before the wives of all knights; and his eldest son and daughters rank before the children of all knights. So that if there were another instance of a K.G. who had no higher title, all baronets' wives would precede his wife and the eldest sons and all the daughters of baronets would precede his children.

Another curious thing is that a baronet's patent virtually creates his wife a baronetess in her own right. She is a lady "for and during her natural life," whereas the style and precedence of peers' wives continues only during their widowhood.

A baronet's wife's style title is "lady, madame, or dame"; and I think that the strict consequence of the terms of a baronet's patent is that the widow of Sir A.B. marrying Mr. C. could call herself Lady C. with perfect legal impunity—that is, instead of calling themselves Mr. C. and Lady B. she and her second husband could be announced as Mr. and Lady C. This curious departure from invariable custom has passed almost without notice, but there is no doubt that every baronet's patent creates two life-holders of the dignity.—The Graphic.

Narrow Escapes.

Before entering the 13th Light Dragoons in 1855, Field Marshal Sir Evelyn Wood, V.C., who kept his seventy-second birthday the other day, spent three years in the navy. He served in the Crimea with the Naval Brigade, and was severely wounded while carrying a scaling ladder at the Redan. On another occasion, in the same campaign, his cap was removed from his head by a chip from a shell; while once he was nearly frozen to death when trying to snatch a few hours' sleep. His V.C. was the reward for personal bravery displayed while hunting down the rebels in the Sironga jungles in 1859.

Royal Lady Doctors.

Seeing that the Queen of the Belgians is the only royal lady who can boast of the degree of M.D. we are proud to think that Queen Alexandra has not escaped doctorial distinction. As far back as 1885 the Queen Mother received the degree in music from the Royal University of Ireland. Queen Mary, too, has a similar degree, but appropriately enough from the University of Wales. Perhaps the most curious doctorate in the royal family is the Duke of Connaught's diploma in literature, which his Royal Highness received from the University of the Punjab.

CANADA'S NEXT CENSUS.

How the Different Schedules Will Be Made Out—Will Be Taken Next June.

The next census of Canada will be taken under date of June 1st, 1911, and will embrace the subjects of population, mortality, agriculture, manufacture, minerals, fisheries and dairy products.

Population will be recorded under the heads of residence and personal description; citizenship, nationality and religion; profession, occupation and trade or means of living; wage-earnings and insurance; education and language spoken, and infirmities.

Every person living on 1st June will be entered on the schedule of population by name; as member of a family, institution or household, together with place of habitation, sex, relationship to head of the family or household, and whether single, married, widowed, divorced or legally separated. The month of birth, year of birth and age of last birthday will also be recorded.

Entries will be made for each person to show the country or place of birth, year of immigration to Canada if born elsewhere, year of naturalization if formerly an alien, and dian by racial or tribal origin, unality and religion. Every person of alien birth who has become a naturalized citizen is a Canadian by nationality; and every British subject with residence in Canada, as well as every native of Canada who has acquired citizenship by birth or naturalization, is also a Canadian by nationality. But there is no Canadian by racial or tribal origin, unless the Indians are so counted.

Every person having an occupation or trade will be entered for it, but if employed in the census year at some other occupation for part or whole time he will be so recorded also. If the person is working on his own account, the entry will be so made. An entry is also required to be made showing where the person is employed, as on farm, in woollen mill, at foundry shop, in drug store, etc.

Wage-earners are entered to show the number of weeks employed in 1910 at chief occupation or trade; at other than chief occupation if any; the hours of working time per week at chief occupation, or at other occupation if any; the total earnings in 1910 at chief occupation; the total earnings at other than chief occupation; and the date per hour when employed by the hour.

Entries are required to be made for each person showing the amount of insurance held at date of the census upon life, as well as against accident or sickness, together with the cost of such insurance in the census year.

Under the heading of education and language records will be taken for every person of five years of age and over showing the number of months at school in 1910, and if the person can read and write, and the language commonly spoken by each person. The cost of education in 1910 for persons over 16 years of age at College, Convent or University is also called for.

The last question on the schedule of population relates to infirmities. It calls for a record of each person having an infirmity. If blind, deaf and dumb, crazy or lunatic, idiotic or silly, a record thereof will be made in the proper column, and the age at which the infirmity appeared is required to be specified.

The Postal Card Rage at Washington.

About the first thing that a visitor in Washington decides to do is to get a full supply of postal cards to send home. Many have inquired who first set the fashion. At the postoffice the other day it was revealed that the first postcards ever issued in the world were sent out from Austria in 1869, following a suggestion made in 1865. Professor Herman of Vienna is the saint on whom the postoffice clerks visit their benisons when they find difficulty in handling the sheaves of postcards coming in all the year around.—National Magazine.

SAMER HOUSES.

On this question of farm houses there is a gratifying change in their style and manner of building as compared with a few years ago. The change from the old log house of some years back was about as startling as could be imagined. Farmers seemed to get the big house mania and reared structures that were a bill of unnecessary expense and entailed an endless amount of work to keep them in order. In fact, so big were some of the homes reared upon the site of the old log house, that the farmer and his family could not begin to occupy it all. They moved into the kitchen, and with an extra room or two furnished, continued to live on as they had been doing in the old structure. But the thing looked good from the outside. A big house with its broadside to the road presented an imposing appearance. But it was largely a hollow mockery, and many a farmer was lost in its bigness. In these later years we have come upon better things in the farm house line. The compact, convenient structure, with enough room to house the family comfortably is the popular thing nowadays. And this style of structure is entitled to all the popularity it can get. By expending more on comfort and convenience in the home than on bigness, the farmer and his family will be happier in their home life.—Canadian Farm.

HOUSEHOLD HINTS.

Women who are interested in the culinary art know how frequently the success of a dish depends upon its flavoring. Professional cooks pay special attention to the seasoning and flavoring of the viands they prepare, but the amateur cooks usually is so glad to get through her work that she doesn't bother with any superfluous details.

Just now women who are on the alert for novelties vary the croutons served with soup by making them of rye bread. The crusts are trimmed away from a thick slice of the bread, the surface of which is then rubbed ever so slightly with a clove of garlic cut in half. After being cut into the conventional squares or triangles they are transferred to a baking dish and browned delicately in a quick oven.

Others vary the grape fruit salad now and then by the addition of stuffed Malaga or hothouse grapes. To prepare it this way seed the grapes, put a blanched hazel nut. Mix with the grape fruit and serve on white lettuce hearts with French dressing.

When other ideas for sandwiches fail, try the unusual and tasty ones made of baked beans, says The New York Times. The tinned beans can be used, although the home product is preferable. Mash the beans through a wire sieve and work into a soft paste, using a few drops of warm water if necessary. Spread on tiny oblongs of buttered white bread and press together.

Or press through the sieve in the same way and moisten a little with any favorite condiment, spread on small thin slices of rye bread and form into sandwiches as before. The latter recipe makes a "hot" and substantial sandwich.

One woman who, her friends think, has inspirations for cookery, never makes stuffing for poultry without including in it a little chopped sausage. Usually the sausage is cooked, but of late she has discovered that the raw porcine product is even better. This makes a rich and very "filling" stuffing for either turkey or chicken, one which will meet with favor among folk of hearty appetite and strong digestion.

For an old-fashioned treat which is so old that it will be new to many of the present generation, make five cornmeal griddle cakes the size of a breakfast plate, and put one upon the other with shaved maple sugar and plenty of butter between. Cut in triangular shape like pie and serve thus.

In serving cocoa some time drop a marshmallow in each cup, and notice the delicate flavor it imparts in addition to looking pretty and novel.

When something out of the usual run is desired for a home luncheon try creamed hazel nuts. Shell the nuts, blanch and boil until soft, then cover with cream sauce flavored delicately with sherry. This dainty can be served in individual ramekins or in paper cases. The flavor is new and appetizing.

Serve pineapple ice cream or water ice in "surprise style" for the next guest luncheon, for which novel touches are in order. This is done by cutting the top carefully away, including the green spray itself, and scooping out the pulp with a spoon. Fill with water ice or frozen pineapple made from the pulp, replace the top and bring to table flaunting the green top as before.

Or, instead of the water ice for the filling, use a delicate cream made by this formula: Stew the pulp of the pineapple, sweeten well, strain through a press, add juice of one lemon and freeze. When partly frozen stir in a cup of whipped cream and freeze again until stiff.

THE BEST WELLS.

Driven and Drilled Types Less Liable to Contamination.

An Interesting Article on Farm Water Supply.

The following article from the pen of Dr. C. J. Lynde, of Macdonald College, Montreal, appeared in a recent issue of the Canadian Farm. Dr. Lynde, who is a nephew of Mr. J.W. Aiken, West Broadway, received his High School education in Orangeville and was a prominent lacrosse and football player while living here. His article, which has an interest for every farmer, reads as follows :—

Wells are known as dug wells, driven wells or drilled wells, according to the method used in sinking

The dug well is simply a hole dug down below the ground water level and lined. It is the one must commonly used in the country, although it is the most undesirable type and for the same depth is more expensive than either the driven or the drilled well.

This type of well was discussed in an article in Canadian Farm on June 24th. It was noted there that since the purpose of a well is to give pure water. (1) It should be located at least 100 feetfrom any source of contamination; (2) It should be so constructed that any surface water entering it penetrates at least 10 feet of soil.

A good type of dug well was illustrated with (1) The upper ten feet of lining backed by a layer of puddled clay one foot thick which is not porous to water. (2) The lining carried above the surface of the ground and fitted with a tight cover. (3) The ground sloped away from the well. (4) The pump set at one side.

With these precautions no surface water can enter without having been properly filtered by passing through at least 10 feet of soil.

A cheaper well than the dug well and one less liable to contamination by surface water is the driven well. In this type of well a drive well point is attached to a galvanized wrought iron pipe and driven down below the ground water level. The drive well point is a three-ply pipe, usually 2 feet long and 1¼ in. diameter. The inner pipe is of wrought iron perforated with 100 or 120 holes to let in the water; this is covered with fine wire gauze and this again is protected by a perforated brass casing. The lower end is fitted with a cast iron pointed shoe for penetrating the soil.

The process of driving the well is as follows :—The drive well point is screwed to a length of galvanized wrought iron pipe, a driving cap is screwed to the other end of this pipe and the whole is driven down by means of sledge hammers or a "monkey," an arrangement similar to a pile driver. The cap is unscrewed; another length of pipe screwed to the first pipe; the cap replaced and the whole driven down, etc. The driving is continued until water is found by letting a plumb down inside the pipe, a pump is then attached to the pipe and a test made of the quantity of water given. If this is sufficient the well is finished, if not, the driving is continued. The water at first always contains fine sand and grit, but after a little pumping the space about the drive point is freed from these fine particles and the water comes up clear.

Driven wells may be used where the water bearing stratum is of gravel, coarse sand or chalk. They cannot be used to obtain water from clay, marl or very fine sand, although they may be used to pass through such non-porous strata as clay, etc., into a porous stratum beneath.

If the ground water level is within suction distance (25 feet) of the surface, the pump is attached to the top of the pipe. The whole pipe then becomes the suction pipe.

To make the pump anti-freezing the cylinder is lowered 4 feet and attached to the pipe bt the bottom of a dry well 5 feet deep. A ½ inch hole bored in the pipe just above the cylinder drains the water out of the pump. When the pump has the cylinder lowered in this way it will pump water when the ground water level is as much as 30 feet below the surface. If the water level is lower than 30 feet a larger drive pipe is used and a deep well pump is placed inside it.

A driven well is much cheaper than a dug well because no digging is required. It is less liable to contamination if the point is over 10 feet below the surface, because the water passes through more soil. If the point is say 15 to 30 feet below the surface, all the surface water which enters the pump must have passed through from 15 to 30 feet of soil. With the dug well, the depth of soil the surface water must pass through before entering the well is only 10 feet.

The best type of well is the drilled well. It is a hole usually from 3 to 6 inches in diameter drilled down through the surface soil; through the non-porous layer of clay or rock beneath it, and into the second water bearing stratum. A wrought iron casing is carried down through the surface soil and wedged firmly into the rock; no casing is used through the rock. The drilling is done with a well drilling machine and the contract price is about $2.00 per foot for a 4 inch well when rock is penetrated. This price includes the cost of casing.

This is the best type of well, because (1) all surface water is excluded by the casing; (2) the water in the well comes from the second water bearing stratum, and it has penetrated a great distance (sometimes many miles) through soil and rock and thus is perfectly filtered.

If the water level in the well is within suction distance (25 feet) a 1¼ inch suction pipe is attached to an ordinary pump and let down into the wrought iron casing. If the water level is somewhat below suction distance the pump cylinder is lowered to within 10 feet of the water level, and the suction pipe attached to the cylinder extends down below the water level. If the water level is over 50 feet below the surface a deep well pump is used with the cylinder placed below the water level.

In some cases the water in a drilled well rises above the surface, and the well is a flowing well.

The drilled well taps the second water bearing stratum. The water in this stratum falls on the hill as rain Since the strata above and below are non-porous, the water cannot escape and the level rises until water flows over the edge of the depression at some point. If this point is above the ground level the well is a flowing well.

If the area of the depression is very large the water will flow for a long time. If the amount of water flowing from the well is less than that supplied by the rains the well will flow for ever.

THE CONDOR COMING.

Lord Charles Beresford's Famous Gunboat for the C.N.E.

That Lord Charles Beresford is still deeply interested in the Canadian National Exhibition is evidenced by the fact that he is sending over for this year's Exhibition a complete model of the little gunboat Condor with which he first fought his way to fame. During the bombardment of Alexandria with this little boat carrying an armament of one 4½ ton gun and two 64-pounder guns he engaged Fort Marabout for 4½ hours and practically silenced the enemy's guns before being reinforced. As the armament of the fort consisted of two 18-ton guns, two 12-ton guns, two 10-inch guns, two 9-inch guns, twenty 32 pounder guns and five mortars, it is not hard to explain how he earned the title of "Condor Charlie," particularly as he so manoeuvred the Condor that she was only hit twice during the engagement.

Dramatist and Politician.

As an office boy in the City of London, Eng., Sir J. W. Benn, the leader of the Progressive Party on the L.C.C., was once sternly rebuked by Lord Mayor Cotton for sketching Mincing Lane celebrities on trade catalogues. In his younger days Sir John achieved considerable fame as a lecturer, and illustrated his lectures with lightning cartoons. He has also written and produced a play at his house and played a double part himself. It may be remembered that he was defeated during the recent general election while contesting Devonport. Of the House of Commons he has said: "It is like one of the ancient clocks in the Guildhall Museum, a splendid piece of old work, which excites the admiration of everyone, but useless for modern timekeeping. It wants a new mainspring and the latest improvements to make it go."

Lord Curzon's Irish Peerage.

The agitation for reform of the House of Lords recalls the anomalous position of Lord Curzon in that House. He is of course the holder of an Irish peerage, which he selected upon his appointment to the Viceroyalty of India in preference to one of the United Kingdom, so that on his return from India he might be eligible to the House of Commons. Political circumstances prevented him from gratifying his well known desire to return to the Commons, and as an Irish peer he was not qualified to sit in the Lords.

Dividing Something.

A farm laborer in one of the western counties was requested to vote for a candidate at the election, but he refused. Being asked for his reason, he made answer:

"Why, because them chaps be well enough paid."

They then tried to explain to Hodge that members of parliament in this country were not paid for their services But he was not to be convinced.

"Doan't 'ee tell me!" he replied somewhat angrily. "I believe my eyes, and when I zees in the paper as they divides almost ev'ry night I knows they be dividin' summat!"—London Tit-Bits.

Old Scottish Words.

Here are a few quaint old Scottish words still used a good deal in East Aberdeenshire: "Mowse"—To say anything is nae mowse means it is uncanny or dangerous. "Connached"—Spoiled; clean connached would mean utterly destroyed or rendered useless. "Blaud" — To blaud anything would mean to soil it. A child would be told, "Dinna blaud your clean pina." "Gardies" or "Gaurdies"—A child's forearm. The last is a very old expression, but we have heard it used. "Sic bonnie gardies he has" means the baby has plump arms.—Glasgow Herald.

Laid Up With Lame Back

Pain, helplessness and suffering are overcome by DR. CHASE'S KIDNEY-LIVER PILLS.

Mrs. Frank Bloom, Hardwood Lake, Ont., writes: "I want to tell you of the great benefit I found in the use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. I suffered so badly with kidney disease that when I lay down I could not get up without help. I was completely laid up with lame, aching back. I read about Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills in the almanac, got them and they cured me of kidney disease and backache.

"My husband had dreadful pains in his sides and obtained cure by using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. These pills are the best on the market and I am glad to recommend them."

Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills are definite and certain in action, enliven the liver and bowels as well as the kidneys, are lastingly beneficial and economical. But to obtain these results you must get the genuine Dr. A. W. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. One pill a dose, 25 cents a box, at all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Toronto.

OLDTIME LACROSSE

The Game As It Was Played in Orangeville Back in the '70's.

Money Was Scarce, but There Was Enthusiasm to Burn.

The following appeared in the Saturday issue of the Toronto Telegram of July 9th, and it recalls events that are long since of the past :

"Yes, the good old days furnished more excitement and enthusiasm. The game was played for what glory was in it—not for the money," spoke an old lacrosse sport the other day, who has followed the game for years.

Many will agree with him. Those were the days when there were no gate receipts. The game was played on the town lot with very little financial backing.

In the '70s lacrosse was at its height in the little town of Orangeville. That place, as is well-known, has developed more experts in the Indian pastime than a good many more twice its size. They played it there for fun. It was good advertising too. The town became well-known through that noble sport. When the name Orangeville was broached it was usually answered with: "Oh, that's the place where all the lacrosse players spring from."

Well, to be precise, so it is. Names of stars of the gutted stick who played their first game in Orangeville can be run off very simply on your finger tips.

LEFT HOME

It was in 1875 that the lacrosse stick first made its appearance in the home of the Dufferins. From that day until later than 1900 Orangeville held many championship teams. The "Green and White" captured the shield the first year the Canadian Lacrosse Association put it out for competition. That is about seven or eight years ago. St. Catharines holds it now. The Dufferins fell to pieces the following year. The reason? Well, when those big promoters of the game—the men with the alluring bundle of greenbacks—appeared on the scene looking for material, they grabbed up as many men as possible. Promoters of the game, when it turned professional, recognized the ability of the Orangeville boys and they deprived the rude forefathers of Dufferin of seeing another real, good contest in fast company. The Dufferins disbanded when rays from greenbacks were seen in the horizon. They left home for places where they could swell their purses. There was no money in Orangeville to hold them, so the town lost its grip. Amateurism went out, professionalism came in.

SOME STAYED

Some of the old stand-bys stayed at home and are still staying, not enough though to make a stellar team. Besides they are getting older. Of course, they have a twelve up there, but it is not good enough for big company. They're coming stronger, however, and within a few years Orangeville will probably redeem lost laurels. Boys just big enough to handle sticks swarm to "Idylwyld," the old stamping ground where many a game was fought and won; and are developing.

WHERE IT STARTED

As is well known, the game originated in Detroit among savage Indians about a century ago. Then they played it with sticks about as wide as the goal, so 'tis said. The soldiers got into the game at Detroit, and it gradually started to pick up among the "pale faces." In 1849 we find it in Montreal. Some doctor, name unknown, established it in the Island city. It gradually started to creep this way and boom. It came into vogue in Orangeville, as aforesaid, in 1875.

FORMED TEAM

They didn't know how to handle a stick then nor scoop up the rubber, but still they formed two teams. Then they started to "clean up."

"There were some hot games," explained Mr. Thomas Mara, of Brampton, who was captain of the first team. "Other places in our vicinity started to get teams. We got on a few games with them and we were generally victorious Some of our men complained of the width of the goal posts. They were then about as wide as those used to football games. However, we remedied that and increased the width of the stick."

LIVELY

"You know the game then wasn't as it is now. No doubt it wasn't as well played. It suited us though. My, but we had the exciting times. Talk about fights! Why we were scrapping continually at every game. They usually finished when it was dark and more than a few were carted home. There were no restrictions, that is, none of any account. There were free-for-all set-tos. When players started, so did the opposing factions in the crowd. I've seen the time when games have been called off on account of fights. That's nothing to boast about, but that's just how it was played.

"THE MECHANICS"

'The Mechanics' was the name of the first team in Orangeville. They existed when the game was being inaugurated. They hardly left the town, except to go to a few villages around-about. A rival team in Orangeville was soon formed called the Olympians. The Mechanics used to play in Grand Valley, Shelburne and Bolton. The latter was the first we played in. Shelburne was certainly a hot lacrosse town. Keen rivalry existed between Orangeville and Shelburne. We always went there with a dread in our minds and a fear of getting broken heads, and vici versa. Being nearly forty years ago I can't remember much about the incidents connected with the games. One time we journeyed to Bolton and had to walk half way. We never used trains—just carry-alls. Money was scarce.

THE DUFFERINS

"In 1878 I think the Dufferins loomed up, after the Mechanics and Olympians amalgamated, a name which has lasted ever since. When the Duffs. started, lacrosse started to flourish in real earnest. Nobody was paid and everybody took a hand in the game, barring financial backing. We couldn't get money. That was one drawback. I remember once we had a team up from Toronto during a July 1st or 12th celebration. It was a fierce game. How we came out alive was a miracle. We won by 3 to 2, and, I think, the deciding goal was a fluke. It was thrown into the crowd and an Orangeville spectator threw it to our inside home man and he scored. You know how much we collected that day? Well, just $3.35. There was no fenced enclosure. It was played on the town commons. No gate receipts—the hat was passed around and we secured that sum. So you see we couldn't afford very well to bring teams from other places or go very far ourselves. We got a field with a fence around it later and charged a fee. We got what was due us then from the spectators, except the kids, who used to crawl underneath or leap over the jagged fence. We just played independent ball—there were no leagues then."

The accompanying photo shows the first team in Orangeville—the Mechanics. Not all of them are living now. Thomas Mara (in the centre), of Brampton, was captain. The man in civilian's clothes is Mr. Wm. Fountain, "My Valet," Adelaide street, the president. He is now president of the Dufferin County Old Boys' Association. He always was and is a staunch Dufferin County Old Boy.

SOME ENTHUSIASM

Orangeville was the hub of lacrossedom up to a few years ago. The town was a hot-bed of enthusiasm. How the home-brews did fight to win! Lacrosse games now don't seem to be in it with the hard-fought matches of the earlier years. After a win the town players were lionized by the young blood and older persons. At night every old box, slab or board that could be obtained in the town was thrown in the centre the roadway on the main street. Oil was carried from the hardware store and was poured on. A match was touched to the shavings. A large flame would shoot up. During the entire night the bon-fire would burn. Early the next day it would be smouldering. The whole town would stand alongside and participate in the celebration. The town band would render lively yells. There's no doubt about it they were good old days—nothing can touch them now.

HOW THEY DID IT

And then if the Dufferins happened to win a victory away from home, the town would flock to the station and meet the "up" or "down" trains Cheers would rend the atmosphere as the big mogul noised into the yard. Some husky individual would grab the players on the steps, hoist them to their shoulders and convey them to waiting rigs. The "dense" mob would yell itself hoarse. The players would be taken to the scene of the celebration on the main street and would tell how they "done" it. The crowd followed. Many a time just such a celebration happened in the little town of Orangeville.

LOOKS BRIGHT

But now, alas and alack, there has been an evolution. Things have decidedly changed. The good 'uns have left. The old teams have gone to other parts. Some members have died. There are no more celebrations, no bonfires. The old lacrosse field like "The Deserted Village," is practically dead. But still there's one consolation to the rude forefathers—the little fellows are getting busy. There is one bright spot in the cloudy sky. Some day a grand team will replace the old Dufferins. They will loom up large in Orangeville. The Green and White will flash forth once again in glory. The pent-up enthusiasm which has been accumulating for years will suddenly burst forth like the volley from mighty cannons and echo throughout the country.

The "Radium King."

Mr. Harry March, the British engineer who was recently made a knight by King Manuel in recognition of his discovery of valuable radium mines in Portugal, is popularly known in scientific circles as the "Radium King." Mr. March has mined in almost every corner of the earth. In the Guarda Belt mountains, 4,000 feet above the level of the sea, he suffered terrible privations. When hungry he would have to trust to his gun for a meal. Sour wine was the only drink procurable, and even that difficult to obtain. For nearly three years this brilliant young engineer endured great hardships, till his perseverance was rewarded by the discovery of the world's richest radium mines. Mr. March is taking a great interest in the new National Radium Bank.

By-Law No .....

A By-Law to provide for drainage work in the Township of Amaranth, in the County of Dufferin, and for borrowing on the credit of the municipality the sum of three thousand, one hundred and eighty-four dollars, and seventy cents, for completing the same. Provisionally adopted the 9th day of July 1910.

WHEREAS for the better maintenance of certain drains heretofore constructed under the provisions of the municipal drainage act, and to prevent damage to certain lands and roads, caused thereby, it is deemed expedient to change the course, enlarge, and extend the outlet, and otherwise improve certain of the creeks of rivers as is necessary for the free flow of the water.

AND WHEREAS the said Council has procured an examination to be made by the said A. R. Leicester, being a person competent for such purpose, of the drains requiring the hereinafter mentioned improvement, and has also procured plans, specifications and estimates of the proposed alterations or improvements to be made by the said A. R. Leicester, Engineer, and an assessment to be made by him of the lands and roads to be benefited by drainage work, and of all lands and roads liable for contribution thereto, stating as nearly as he can the proportion of benefit, outlet liability and injuring liability, which in his opinion, will be derived or incurred in consequence of such drainage work by every road, and lot or portion of lot, the said assessment so made, being the assessment hereinafter by this by-law enacted, to be assessed and levied upon the roads and lots or parts of lots, hereinafter in that behalf specified, set forth, and described, and the report of the said A. R. Leicester, in respect thereof, and of the said drainage work, being as follows :—

59 Yonge St., Toronto, Ont.,
July 2nd, 1910.

To the Municipal Council of the Township of Amaranth, County of Dufferin.

Dear Sirs,—In accordance with the petition signed by R. J. Wallace and others, under section 75 of the drainage act, and with the instructions of your Council, I have made the necessary surveys, levels, and elevations to locate drain No. 47, to drain the lots through which it passes and answer all other purposes for which it is intended. I consider the outlet into the Grand River, with the removal of logs, etc., around this point, sufficient for the present, but if any additional drainage is put into the river above this point, the question of deepening the channel of the river will have to be considered.

I herewith beg to hand you the necessary plans, profiles, assessments, and roll appertaining to the said drain No. 47.

Yours very truly,
J. MILLS, A. R. LEICESTER,

AND WHEREAS the said Council of the Township of Amaranth, pursuant to the provisions of the Municipal Drainage Act, enacts as follows :—

1. The report, plan, specifications, assessment and estimate, are hereby adopted, and the drainage, as therein indicated and set forth, shall be made and constructed in accordance therewith.

2. The Reeve of the said Township of Amaranth may borrow on the credit of the Corporation of the said Township of Amaranth, the sum of three thousand, two hundred and forty dollars and seventy cents ($3240.70) being the funds necessary for the work not otherwise provided for and may issue debentures of the Corporation to that amount in sums of not less than $50.00 each and payable within fifteen years from the date thereof with interest at the rate of four per cent. per annum, that is to say in equal annual instalments, such debentures to be payable at the Bank of Hamilton, in the City of Toronto, and to have attached to them coupons for the payment of interest.

3. For paying the sum of ten hundred and twenty-four dollars ($1024), the amount charged against the said lands and roads for benefit, and the sum of eleven hundred and two dollars and seventy cents ($1102.70), the amount charged against said lands and roads for outlet liability, and the sum of six hundred and fifty-four dollars ($654), the amount charged against said lands and roads for injuring liability, apart from lands and roads belonging to or controlled by the municipality, and for covering interest thereon for fifteen years at the rate of four per cent. per annum, the following total special rate, over and above all other rates, shall be assessed, levied and collected in the same manner and at the same time as other taxes are levied and collected upon and from the undermentioned lots and parts of lots and roads :—

4. For paying the sum of four hundred and sixty dollars ($460), the amount assessed against the said roads and lands of the municipality, and for covering interest thereon for fifteen years at the rate of four per cent. per annum, a special rate on the dollar, sufficient to produce the required yearly amount therefor, shall, over and above all other rates, be levied and collected in the same manner and at the same time as other taxes are levied and collected upon and from the whole rateable property in the said Township of Amaranth, in each year for fifteen years after the final passing of this by-law during which the said debentures have to run; said debentures shall be payable on the 28th day of December of each year for the following years, namely :—1910, 1911, 1912, 1913, 1914, 1915, 1916, 1917, 1918, 1919, 1920, 1921, 1922, 1923 and 1924.

5. The said commissioners shall be entitled to receive a fee of two dollars per day for each day of actual service.

6. This By-law shall be published, or served, once in every week for four consecutive weeks in the Banner Newspaper, published in the Town of Orangeville, and shall come into force upon and after the final passing thereof, and may be cited Outlet to Drains By-Law by Cleaning out of Grand River.

THE CROPS AND LIVE STOCK OF CANADA.

Ottawa, July 12.—The Census and Statistics Office to-day reports on the condition of field crops and the number and condition of farm animals of the Dominion at June 30. For the three years 1908-1910 the field crops range in condition from 82.16 for spring wheat to 91.42 for hay and clover this year to 80 for spring wheat and 82 for rye and peas in 1908. Fall wheat is 85.47 this year compared with 77.28 in 1909, and 89 in 1908. Oats was 90 in 1908 and 93.61 in 1909, and this year it is 86.29. Peas is 86.94 this year; last year it was 84.40 and in the previous year 82. The condition of mixed grains is nearly the same, being 84.53 this year, 86.94 in 1908. Hay and clover is better this year than in either of the previous years, being 91.42 compared with 76 in 1909 and 87 in 1908. The condition of alfalfa has been recorded this year for the first time, and its average is 88.04. Pasture has a condition of 89.02 this year, compared with 99 in 1908 and 87.7½ last year. The conditions of all field crops are good in Ontario, the highest being 94.29 for fall wheat and the lowest 84.79 for spring wheat. Quebec crops range from 74.45 for mixed grains to 102.58 for hay and clover. Peas is 84.42 and its condition is the next above mixed grains. In Prince Edward Island and Nova Scotia all field crops are reported for a condition above 90 except alfalfa, which is 83.33 in the Island. Hay and clover are 104.31 in the Island and 105.79 in Nova Scotia. Wheat, oats, mixed grains and alfalfa are reported in a condition above 90 in New Brunswick, and all other crops between 83 and 89 except alfalfa, which is 97. Hay and clover are reported at 109.68. Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta have low averages throughout owing to a light rainfall in June. The general condition of crops in Manitoba is much below the average. Correspondents in nearly every district report no rains—only a few light showers and hot drywinds absorbed the moisture and withered the crops. The lowest average condition is reported from around Brandon and Morden, and the highest from Marquette, where it is placed at a standard. In Saskatchewan the crops do not appear to have suffered from climatic conditions to the same extent as in either Manitoba or Alberta, as there have been many local showers. The reports from Lloydminster, Battleford, Indian Head and Qu'Appelle are very favourable, the condition of wheat being placed at 100 and over. The prevailing condition of crops in that part of Alberta south of townships No. 30 is below the average in consequence of drouth and hot winds. In the Edmonton district the grains, although suffering to some extent from the same causes, are in much better condition. The best reports come from the Strathcona district, and those from Athabaska Landing and Saddle Lake districts are also particularly favorable. The field crops of British Columbia are all good. The areas of late cereals—buckwheat, flax, corn for husking, beans, potatoes, turnips and other roots, sugar beets and corn for fodder—have increased this year to 2,150,382 acres, which is 279,526 acres more than last year and 247,869 acres more than in 1908. But this increase is altogether in flax, which owing to the high price offered for seed has come into favor with the farmers of the Northwest.

The only farm animals which show a noticeable increase since 1907, are horses, while sheep and swine have declined. The condition of all these animals over the Dominion exceeds 99.

Sciatic Rheumatism

Unable to work or sleep—Six years of suffering—Cured by DR. A. W. CHASE'S NERVE FOOD.

Mr. Alex. Ethier, Jr., Clarence Creek, Russell Co., Ont., writes:—"My nervous system was run down to such an extent that I suffered a great deal from weakness of the nerves and sciatic rheumatism, and at times was like one paralyzed. I could not work, was unable to sleep, and had no appetite.

"Nothing seemed to build up my nerves until I made use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. After having used about $12.00 worth of this medicine I feel like a new man. I can walk all right, do a great deal of work, have a good appetite and sleep well every night."

When you have tired of experiments you can turn to Dr. A. W. Chase's Nerve Food knowing that persistent treatment is bound to be rewarded with lastingly beneficial results. But you must get the genuine, bearing portrait and signature of A. W. Chase, M. D. 50 cts. at all dealers or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Toronto. Write for free copy of Dr. Chase's Recipes.

3800 Trainmen Went On Strike Monday Night.

Men Reject Company's Offer to Arbitrate Differences.

One of the most far-reaching strikes ever launched in Canada began Monday evening at 8.30, the Grand Trunk conductors and trainmen having been ordered out by Vice-President Murdock of the Brotherhood of Trainmen.

Although both parties evidently felt that a strike was in the air, the breaking off of negotiations was a surprise to the public generally, who thought that President Hays would give in at the last moment, and that perhaps, the men also would not go so far as to strike.

Now, however, the die has been cast, and 3500 men on the Grand Trunk, from Portland to Chicago, and 350 men on the Central Vermont, are now pledged to fight the company to the bitter end, in order to enforce their demands for the standard rate of wages in that particular territory.

The bolt from the blue heaven was the announcement from the company that their shops at Montreal, London, Toronto, Stratford, Port Huron, Battle Creek, Portland, Chicago, and all other points would be closed indefinitely, throwing perhaps over 5000 men out of employment. This will affect 2520 men in Montreal, 700 in Toronto and 100 in Stratford, and its effect may be calculated from the fact that the payroll at the Montreal shops amounts to $150,000 per month.

President Hays, discussing this feature of the great industrial upheaval, stated that he regretted having to deprive so many good men of their work, but that the company was face to face with a great conflict which, he held, had been unjustly forced upon them, and which left an absolute necessity for the course he had taken.

President Hays offered Monday afternoon to leave the dispute to an independent arbitration, the decision to be binding on both sides, but the men would not hear this, and negotiations came suddenly to an end.

It came out Monday evening that the company have for weeks past had private detectives and other officials scouring the country for days past getting together non-union train crews and it remains to be seen what success has attended their efforts. On Saturday over 40 delegates left Montreal for their respective districts carrying orders to strike unless the company would come to time before 9.30 Monday evening.

At 10.30 Monday night a fairly sized crowd gathered at Bonaventure station in Montreal, to see if the 10.30 Toronto train would run out. There was very little delay, however, and the train left only a few minutes late, manned by a non-union crew aside from the engine. Vice-President Murdock, after telling of the men who had left Saturday, added: "We met Mr. Hays to-day when he elaborated somewhat on his original offer, that the standard wage would be adopted by January, 1913. The committee replied that they could not set aside the expressed wish of the men, even if they felt like doing so."

In the afternoon the committee and officers presented Mr. Hayes with the last possible basis of settlement that could be considered, which proposed to put into effect a temporary modification of the standard till 1911. Mr. Murdock went on to say that Mr. Hays had refused completely the board's recommendation to standardize conditions on the Grand Trunk, proposing to perpetuate existing conditions.

Mr. Murdock also said: "There is a protective fund of $1,000,000 back of us and we will have no trouble about getting $350,000 monthly. $50 a month will be paid to the members of the order of conductors and $35 a month to trainmen.

The Grand Trunk telegraphers will not strike as before intimated. They had a meeting Monday afternoon with President C. M. Hays and agreed to let their differences go to arbitration.

The following official statement was issued late Monday by President Hays: "Messrs. Berry and Murdock, with a committee representing the Grand Trunk trainmen and yardmen, met the officers of that company this morning. We advised them that we were not in a position to do more than had been offered in my former proposition, giving the men an increase of approximately 18 per cent., with the promise that they should be given the same standard rate of pay as the Canadian Pacific as soon as the Grand Trunk through its relation with the Grand Trunk Pacific, is in a position to participate in the high rates obtaining on traffic in the northwest, by reason of the completion of that road, and the obtaining of through rail connections between the Grand Trunk and Grand Trunk Pacific, which should be accomplished within two years.

"It was explained that if there was any question of indefiniteness as to the date when the standardization of rates was to take effect, we would agree that it should not be later than Jan 1, 1913, or earlier if the board of railway commissioners, upon hearing of the facts of the case, should so determine. This was not considered as satisfactory and the conference was adjourned untill the afternoon, when they were handed the schedule of rates of pay and rules which are practically the eastern standard. To this reply was made that we could do no better than what had already been offered, and we had no further propositions to make.

"Should a strike be ordered we are confident that it will be found that many of the employees of the company in the train service will disregard such strike and will continue service with the company. We have a large number of applications from other parties desirous of obtaining employment, and shall also recruit largely from our own forces in other departments.

"In the meantime we shall make effective the rules and rates of pay offered the employees. Pending settlement of matters all shops on the system will be closed."

It is estimated that there are at least 3850 men on strike. The men out are the conductors, brakemen, baggagemen and yardmen. The engineers and firemen are not out. They have an agreement with the Company that has not expired. The operators and despatchers did not strike, as they have reached a satisfactory agreement with the Company.

Amaranth Council Should Not Block Proposed Improvement of Town Line, West of Orangeville.

To the Editor of The Banner.

Dear Sir,—Kindly allow me space in your columns to express my surprise at the action of the Amaranth Council in declining to supplement the county grant of $100 on the townline west of the Town of Orangeville. I cannot imagine why the Amaranth representatives should be so short-sighted in this matter. The road in question is sadly out of repair, it is travelled by the farmers of a large portion of this township and it is assuredly to their interest that steps should be taken to put it into better condition. The County Council made a special grant of $100 to improve the road, the money being voted on the condition that Orangeville supplement with a grant of $200 and Mono, Amaranth and East Garafraxa with $100 each. The Mono and East Garafraxa representatives were both satisfied with this, although the former municipality has no great interest in keeping up this particular road, as very few Mono people have occasion to travel over it. The whole kick came from the Amaranth men, particularly from Reeve Hosick, and if improvement is blocked the responsibility will rest with the men who represent this township. It is surely poor policy to refuse to spend $100 to improve a road that is used by the farmers of nearly one half of Amaranth, particularly when by voting this paltry sum our Council can ensure the expending of $600, an outlay sufficient to put the road in first-class shape. The money, be it remembered, is to be spent west of the railway crossing and therefore on what is to all intents a country highway.

The writer, who has to travel this road very frequently, hopes that the Amaranth Council will reconsider the matter and vote the $100 necessary to bring about this greatly needed improvement. Thanking you, Mr. Editor, for the use of your columns, I am,

Yours Faithfully,
FARMER.

THE JUDGE'S COURT.

Local Hotelkeepers Secure Another Cut on Their Assessment.

A number of appeals from the decisions of the Court of Revision were disposed of by His Honor, Judge McCarthy, in the Judge's Court on Tuesday morning. The appeals were nearly all by local hotelmen, who were dissatisfied with the reductions made by the Assessor and Court of Revision. In most instances the appellants were successful, the net result of the morning's proceedings being a further reduction of $2800 in the town's assessment. John Bennett, of the Hotel Alexandra, got a reduction of $500, making his assessment $4500. The Court of Revision had previously granted Mr. Bennett a reduction of $500, so that his assessment now stands $1000 below the figure fixed by Assessor Bailey. The assessment of $1000 on the Hicks' warerooms was confirmed, but Mr. Bennett got the assessment of his vacant lot, corner Mill and Water Sts., lowered from $250 to $200. The assessment of the Queen's hotel was lowered from $6000 to $5500 and that of the Grand Central from $6000 to $5000. The Court of Revision refused to make any reduction on either property. R. Young, of the Commercial, and J. E. Morrison, of the Dufferin House, each of whom was allowed a reduction of $500 by the Court of Revision, were allowed another $400 apiece by the Judge, bring their assessments down to $3200. W. N. Irwin acted for Messrs. Bennett, Wettlaufer, Young and Morrison and C. R. McKeown appeared for G. M. Englert, of the Grand Central. Mr. A. A. Hughson represented the town.

MAY—FARNELL.

On Thursday last, July 14th, the home of Mr. and Mrs. William Farnell was the scene of a pleasant event, the occasion being the marriage of their daughter, Mary Solina, to Mr. James Henry May, of Orangeville, son of Mr. and Mrs. William J. May, of West Toronto. The ceremony was performed by Rev. T. R. White, pastor of the Methodist Church, Laurel. The bride, carrying a bouquet of white carnations and leaning upon the arm of her father, entered the drawing room to the strains of Mendelssohn's wedding march, played by Miss Cruikshank, of Orangeville. Miss Jessie Farnell, carrying a bouquet of sweet peas, was ring bearer. The bride was becomingly attired in a gown of white net over silk. After the ceremony the bride and groom led the way to the dining room, where a sumptuous wedding breakfast was partaken of, after which Mr. and Mrs. May left on the evening train for Toronto and other points south. The bride travelled in a smartly tailored suit of Copenhagen blue with hat to match. The beautiful gifts received testify to the esteem in which the young couple are held by their many friends. Mr. and Mrs. May will reside in Orangeville.

CHARLESTON GARDEN PARTY.

There was a splendid attendance at the annual garden party of Knox Presbyterian Church, Charleston, which was held on Mr. Thos. Smith's fine lawn in the Caledon capital on Tuesday night. The event was set down for July 12th, but the rain that night made a postponement necessary. The programme was carried out pretty much as originally advertised, Alton Brass Band, which was in fine form, being responsible for most of the numbers. Mr. Wm. Algie, of Alton, gave a clever and entertaining address on aviation and its probable effect upon existing methods of warfare. The gate receipts, we understand, were in the neighborhood of $140. In addition to this the refreshment tent realized quite a large sum.

GOD'S STONE WITNESS THE GREAT PYRAMID.

The Ancients in recounting the Seven Wonders of the World, placed at the head of the list, the Great Pyramid. Its interior passage ways evidently symbolically represent the Ages and Dispensations in the Divine Government in connection with humanity. Its witness is only beginning to go out to the world of mankind. It is commonly credited to the foolishness of an Egyptian King. Such claims as to the other Pyramids which are inferior to this one, are not questioned, but the great Pyramid evidently was constructed under Divine supervision. In symbolic language the Pyramid interprets itself if figured an inch for a year. The downward passage way from the entrance to the bottomless pit represents the way traversed by the human race to death. The ascending passage way represents an escape from death and corresponds to the giving of the Law to Israel. "If ye do these things ye shall live by them." The intervening years to the end of Jewish favor, A. D. 32, have thus exact fulfillment in Pyramid inches, bringing us to the Grand Gallery, which symbolizes the Gospel Age, the period of the High Calling, the Lord coming "that we might have life and that more abundantly." The grand scheme of Pyramid passage way measurements tells us that the Gospel Age is soon to end and that the time for Divine favor to return to Israel is about due. The measurements seemingly say that by 1915 the Jews should be re-established in their Promised Land.

The Pyramid covers an area of about 13 acres; is 486 feet high, and 764 feet broad at its base. It is estimated to weigh about 6,000,000 tons. It contains stones weighing three or four times as much as one of the obelisks. Some of the stones are thirty feet in length, and fit so closely together that you may run a pen knife over the surface without discovering the breaks between them. There is now no machinery so perfect that it will make two surfaces thirty feet in length which will meet together as these wonderful stones in the Great Pyramid. Its four corner stones are sunken in the earth in fulfillment of Job xxxviii, 3-7. It is supposed to have been built B. C. 2170, at which time the star, Draconis, symbolizing death, looked down the descending passageway, and at which time the Pleiades were in line and looked down the ascending passageways leading to life, the Pleiades representing the throne of Jehovah, the source of all life-giving power.

THE WOMEN SAVED HIM.

Mr. Joseph Snell met with a serious mishap on Saturday last. He was making some repairs on a mowing machine, and finding the nuts rusted, he used coal oil to get them to work off easily. Subsequently he poured more coal oil on them, when poured more coal oil on them, when the liquid took fire suddenly, and made its way to the can, which exploded in Mr. Snell's hands, throwing the burning oil over his body and hands, which were severely burned. Though fatal results are not looked for, the suffering man will be forced to remain idle for a couple of weeks, or perhaps longer. We regret Mr. Snell's misfortune, and hope he may soon be able to attend to his usual duties. Had it not been for the presence of mind and good common sense of two women, matters might have been worse, but seeing Mr. Snell's extreme danger as he rolled about the ground, they tore off both shirt and trousers, and sent him into the house naked. Some women have so much mock modesty they would see a man burn to death rather than be horrified at the sight of a pair of bare legs. These women can laugh now over the incident, but women with such good common sense have a right to do so. We heartily commend them for their action. — Durham Chronicle.

Sinking Spells Every Few Days

"At the time I began taking Dr. Miles' Heart Remedy I was having sinking spells every few days. My hands and feet would get cold; I could scarcely breathe, and could feel myself gradually sinking away until I would be unconscious. Those about me could not tell there was life in me. After these spells I would be very weak and nervous, sleepless and without appetite; had neuralgia in my head and heart. After taking the remedy a short time all this disappeared and in a few weeks all the heart trouble was gone."

AMERICAN PEAT SOCIETY.

The approaching convention of the American Peat Society, of which Dr. Eugene Haanel, Dominion Director of Mines, is president, and Mr. Julius Bordollo, of Kingsbridge, New York City, secretary, to be held in Ottawa, on July 25-27, will bring together many experts in peat manufacture, and may be expected to result in some new information of value on the subject of peat utilization reaching the public. An important part of the programme will be a visit to the Dominion Government experimental plant at Alfred, Ont., where about 2,000 tons of peat fuel is being manufactured this summer by a well-known and successful European process, under direction of Mr. A. Anrep, a son of the inventor of the process. There will also be a practical demonstration of power production from peat fuel at the producer gas plant in Ottawa now being successfully operated by the Department of Mines.

A broad invitation is extended to all who are in any way interested in the development of the peat industry in Canada, whether as a source of power, domestic fuel, or otherwise, to attend the meetings and to witness the demonstrations of the fuel and power plants. The Dominion Government has made provision for the expenses of the demonstration and meetings, and arrangements for the entertainment of members of the society and guests are in the hands of a reception committee comprising the Director of Mines, members of Parliament, and the Legislature for Ottawa and vicinity, the Mayor and members of the Board of Control, several members of the Board of Trade and Publicity Committee, and others. It is anticipated that the attendance and interest in the matter will be such as to lead to formation of an organization more especially devoted to Canadian peat interests.

On WEDNESDAY, July 27th, the ladies of St. Mark's Church, Orangeville, will give a splendid tea in the basement of the Church in connection with their GARDEN PARTY. ONE 25c. Ticket will admit you to all.

Rev. Wm. Savage, a well known Methodist divine, died at his home in Guelph recently at the great age of 92 years.

Mr. Charles Ramage of the Durham Review and Mrs. Ramage left recently on a couple of months' trip to the Old Country. Mr. Ramage emigrated from Scotland 42 years ago, and has not been back since.

SCHOOL BOARD TROUBLES.

The proposed addition to the public school, as demanded by the Inspectors, is the cause of no little trouble to the school board. When that body made the request for $3500 to the council to make the alterations, they thought they were well within the limit. The tenders on the plans prepared, however, called for an expenditure of close to $5000. The plans were considerably modified, and the contracts let to R. Dixon and J. Galvin for $1627 and $1150, respectively, and it is understood the contracts signed. It then developed that Mr. Galvin had made an error of about $100 in basing his calculations and estimated that he did not care to go on with the work. Another tender was got from Mr. Dixon for this part of the work at $1945.00, and it is just possible that the Board would have accepted this and proceeded with the work had not Mr. Dixon made the discovery that he left out an item of $241.00 in his first estimate. Messrs. Sargent and Hunt took advantage of this to make their well-known opposition to the proposed extension effective, and at a meeting on Friday night talked out a motion of Buchanan and Perkin to accept the Dixon tender so that an adjournment till Saturday night was necessary. At this meeting, Mr. Buchanan could not get a seconder to the motion he put the former evening, while a motion of Sargent and Hunt to defer the building till next year was lost. It was then moved by Campbell and Hunt, that on account of increased tenders for new building, that we call a meeting of the ratepayers for Friday, the 15th inst., at 8 p.m. and refer the matter to them, and the motion carried. — Star & Vidette.

WORLD'S DEBT TO CANADA

A Wonderful Achievement

Discovery of "Fruit-a-tives" has meant health for all

Canada's fame does not rest solely on her furs and wheat fields. Her rise in the esteem of the world is not due to her Cobalt mines. It is the work of her great men that has made her great. A graduate of McGill University has won lasting renown for his original researches in the realms of Physics.

Everyone knows that fruit is wholesome, when eaten judiciously. Physicians generally recognize the fact that fruit juices have a beneficial effect on the various organs of the body.

It remained for a Canadian physician to discover a process whereby the medicinal action of fruit could be so increased as to make the intensified juices a wonderful cure.

"Fruit-a-tives" is this combination of fruit juices and tonics. Since its introduction to the public, "Fruit-a-tives" has met with a success accorded to no other medicine in the world. The reason is plain. "Fruit-a-tives" is the one remedy that is actually made of fruit, and is the only remedy that naturally cures Constipation, Biliousness, Indigestion, Headaches, Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Backache, Kidney and Skin Troubles. At all dealers at 50c. a box, 6 for $2.50, or trial size, 25c., or from Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

SERIOUS ACCIDENT TO HERBERT BURNS.

While horseraking on a hillside on his farm on Saturday last, Mr. Herbert Burns, of Churchville, met with a very painful accident. Mr. Burns was driving a young team, and had got but a few miles down the hillside when the coupling which held the pole snapped. The horses at once became frightened and began to run at a terrific pace. There being no other means of escape the unfortunate man dropped between the frame of the rake and while so doing managed to catch the trip, but the rake was being pulled too rapidly to permit of the dog catching, and as a result he was dragged until one of the wheels struck a stone about twenty-five yards below the foot of the hill. This gave the dog a chance to work and the rake lifting, Mr. F. Benham, who had seen the horses dashing through the barnyard, surmised that something was wrong and immediately ran to Mr. Burns' assistance. On examination it was found that no bones were broken but Mr. Burns had received a bad cut on the leg and many very painful bruises. Drs. Hall and Brydon dressed his injuries and Mr. Burns is doing as well as can be expected. — Brampton Conservator.

The marriage of Miss Eleanor Margaret Macdonnell, elder daughter of the late Rev. D. J. Macdonnell, of St. Andrew's Church, Toronto, to the Rev. W. L. Findlay, of Selkirk, Manitoba, is arranged to take place at "Kirkhall," Fergus, on Tuesday, July 26th.

The 3-year-old daughter of Mr. Jno. Deacon, of Colbeck, while fooling around a mower, had about an inch of the index finger severed except the skin, by being caught by the pitman rod.

The new shed of Melville Church, Fergus, is almost completed and will be opened in the near future. The shed is 108 feet by 55 feet, with arched roof.

Samuel Marshall, of Orangeville, who is in the employ of Theodore Denny, met with a bad accident a week ago. The two men were engaged moving a portable sawmill to Albert Myers' farm in Amaranth. Marshall and another man were riding in a buggy in which they had a sharp axe. In getting out of the rig by some means Marshall got a bad cut on the front of his right leg.

Most things have a limit, but the difficulty is to locate it sometimes. The Advance man is beginning to wonder when the wheat and barley in this district are going to stop growing. We have been handed fall wheat six feet, eight inches long, and now Walter Akitt drops in with barley five feet, four inches long. The old childhood yarn of Jack-and-the-bean-stalk bids fair to be enacted in this district with wheat and barley replacing the dwarfish corn.—Flesherton Advance.

Action has been entered by Mrs. Agnes German, of Owen Sound, to recover alimony from George Henry German, of Shelburne. On motion of the plaintiff before Geo. S. Holmested, K. C., acting Master in Chambers at Osgoode Hall, an order was made for the payment of $3 a week for interim alimony and $30 for disbursements, to enable her to bring her action to trial. The principals were married in Toronto in 1907. The defendant is a salesman, who earns $9 a week, owns two lots valued at $550 and supports his mother.

THE ORANGE ORDER.

A Little Bit of Its History.

The Orange Order, a society established in England, at Exeter, in November, 1688, on the arrival of the Prince of Orange from Torbay, for maintaining the Protestant religion and the rights and liberty of the people, was so called because it was established to support and defend the Prince of Orange, who was invited to England, and accepted the Crown as William III. in order to maintain "the Protestant religion and the liberties of England." The Order was established by the leading men of England signing a declaration "to stand by the Prince and one another," and to "persevere until the liberties and religion of England should be effectually secured."

The word "Protestant" is derived from "prostestari," which means "to bear public witness," Historically, it is derived from the Protest of Spires, the central principle of which was the affirmation that the authority of the Bible is supreme above that of councils and bishops. Dr. Dorner, in his "History of Protestant Theology," says the true meaning of the word is, "A free and candid testimony to Scriptural and evangelical truth, in opposition to all perversions of it."

No one seems to know exactly when the Orange Order first took root in Canada. It is believed it was founded by British soldiers who were in the country around 1812, but even this lacks absolute confirmation. The settlers in Lanark, Carleton, Durham, Northumberland, Peterboro, York, Peel, Simcoe, and Wellington had lodges about this time. They had their charters from Worshipful Masters who came to Canada from Ireland. In the knapsack of one of the Canadian soldiers who went out with Wolseley in the days of the first Riel Rebellion was carried the warrant of the first lodge in Manitoba. The soldier who carried that charter stayed in the country, and died one of the most prominent citizens of Emerson. It was in Manitoba that Lord Wolseley joined the order.

It was a long and strenuous fight that the Orange Order had to go through before it finally obtained incorporation in Canada. The struggle began away back in the fifties, in the Parliament of Old Canada, and lasted until 1890, on March 3rd of which year the House of Commons, by a vote of 86 to 61, passed the third reading of the bill of incorporation.

One of the events commemorated by Orangemen is the siege of Londonderry, which lasted over one hundred days, the army of James II. commencing the siege about April 20th, 1689. The garrison and inhabitants were driven to the verge of famine, but, under the Rev. George Walker they defended it until the siege was raised by General Kirke on July 30th and the army of James, under Gen. Rosen, retired with the loss of about 9,000 men.

Enniskillen is another name that stands high in Orange annals. It was here that the flower of the Protestant population of Munster and Connaught found shelter, when the Protestants of Leinster were finding shelter behind the walls of Londonderry. It was from here that many successful forays were made against the forces of James. And it was the men of Enniskillen who won so signal a victory over the forces of James at Newton Butler.

But it is the battle of the Boyne that is the shining light of the Orange annals. It was on the first day of July, 1690, that the contending armies of the two kings met at the Boyne. Macaulay gives an account of the battle that all good Orangemen should read. "Each of the contending princes had some advantages over his rival. James, standing on the defensive behind entrenchments, with a river before him, had the stronger position, but his troops were inferior both in men and number and in quality to those which were opposed to him. He probably had thirty thousand men. * * * William had under his command near thirty-six thousand men, born in many lands, and speaking many tongues. Scarcely one Protestant church, scarcely one Protestant nation, was unrepresented in the army which a strange series of events had brought to fight for the Protestant religion in the remotest island of the west. * * * * The first of July dawned, a day which has never since returned without exciting strong emotions of very different kinds in the two populations which divide Ireland. The sun rose bright, and cloudless. Soon after four both armies were in motion. William ordered his right wing, under the command of Meinhart Schomberg, one of the Duke's sons, to march to the bridge of Slane, some miles up the river, to cross there, and to turn the left flank of the Irish army. * * * James, anticipating some such design, had already sent to the bridge a regiment of dragoons, commanded by Sir Neil O'Neil. O'Neil behaved himself like a gentleman; but he soon received a mortal wound; his men fled; and the English right wing passed the river. * * * It was now about ten o'clock. William put himself at the head of his left wing, which was composed exclusively of cavalry, and prepared to pass the river not far above Drogheda. The centre of his army which consisted almost exclusively of foot, was entrusted to the command of Schomberg, and was marshalled opposite to Oldbridge. At Oldbridge had been collected the whole Irish army, foot, dragoons, and horse, Sarsfield's regiment alone excepted. * * In a few minutes the Boyne, for a quarter of a mile, was alive with muskets and green boughs. It was not till the assailants had reached the middle of the channel that they became aware of the whole difficulty and hanger of the service in which they were engaged. They had as yet seen little more than half the hostile army. Now whole regiments of horse and foot seemed to start out of the earth. A wild shout of defiance rose from the whole shore; during one moment the event seemed doubtful; but the Protestants pressed resolutely forward; and in another moment the whole Irish line gave way. * * * During near half an hour the battle continued to rage along the southern shore of the river. All was smoke, dust, and din. Old soldiers were heard to say that they had seldom seen sharper work in the Low Countries. But, just at this conjuncture, William came up with the left wing. He had found much difficulty in crossing. The tide was running fast. His charger had been forced to swim, and had been almost lost in the mud. As soon as the king was on firm ground he took his sword in his left hand—for his right arm was stiff with his wound and his bandage—and led his men to the place where the fight was the hottest. His arrival decided the fate of the day."

It was on the 12th of July, 1691, that the battle of Aughrim took place. The Irish troops, under Saint Ruth, the Frenchman, were smarting from the success of the forces of Ginkell at Athlone. St. Ruth had his army drawn up on the slope of a hill, which was almost surrounded by red bog. The afternoon was far advanced when Ginkell's 20,000 faced 25,000, with only a bog between them. An instant attack was made. After two hours' fighting, the English cavalry succeeded in passing the bog, the Irish flank turned, St. Ruth's head was carried off by a cannon ball, and his forces routed completely.

LIKE FILLING A LEAKY GRANARY.

Periodically a cry is raised in some quarters for more effort to secure immigration to Eastern Canada to relieve the labor problem. Many fancy that because this imported labor is cheap it must be economical. But the more we try this class of labor, the more do our hopes of thus really solving the labor problem sink. There are some good laborers secured from these immigrants. Those who voluntarily come here to better their fortunes frequently do all right, but very often the Europeans and Englishmen lured to Canada by glowing immigration literature descriptive of Western or other opportunities, make discontented laborerers, and are liable to leave us about the time they have gaineda little experience. If, instead of seeking this cheap labor, we were topay a proportionate figure to Canadians accustomed to the country and trained to the work, hiring them by the year, providing good houses and treating them well, we would find farm helpers not quite so scarce as they seem and would not only be benefiting ourselves, but laying the foundations of an enduring economic and sociological structure. Once more we repeat that the problem of Eastern Canada is not immigration; it is not how we can induce the riffraff of Europe to come and toil for us, but how can we provide more remunerative and more congenial employment for our own people at home? He who sets himself individually to solve this problem in his own and his country's best friend. He who tries to find some expedient such as pauper immigration, is allowing himself to become a victim of circumstances. Immigration, by increasing the competition among laborers, may lower wages temporarily, and may alleviate labor scarcity, but it will never solve the problem. It requires deeper thought and more earnest mental effort than that, else it would have been settled long ago. It may be all right for a young, and growing country, with large, undeveloped resources, to swell its population by welcoming worthy emigrants from the Old World; but, while doing so, it is well to remember that the only way we can really solve the labor problem is by getting down to the causes, dealing with economic conditions, and meeting them with sweeping, if gradual, changes in farm practice. Seeking European immigration merely as a means of solving the labor riddle, is like trying to keep a leaking granary full by dumping in inferior wheat. The only economic or permanent remedy is to stop the leak. This may be awkward, but it is the sensible thing to do.— The Farmers' Advocate.

PURIFIED HIS BLOOD

Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills Healed Mr. Wilson's Sores

When the sewers of the body—bowels, kidneys and skin ducts—get clogged up, the blood quickly becomes impure and frequently sores break out over the body. The way to heal them, as Mr. Richard Wilson, who lives near London, Ont., found, is to purify the blood. He writes:

"For some time I had been in a low, depressed condition. My appetite left me and I soon began to suffer from indigestion. Quite a number of small sores and blotches formed all over my skin. I tried medicine for the blood and used many kinds of ointments, but without satisfactory results. What was wanted was a thorough cleansing of the blood, and I looked about in vain for some medicine that would accomplish this.

At last Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills were brought to my notice, and they are one of the most wonderful medicines I have ever known. My blood was purified in a very short time, sores healed up, my indigestion vanished. They always have a place in my home and are looked upon as the family remedy."

Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills cleanse the system thoroughly. Sold by all dealers at 25c a box.

SMELLING THE CARPET.

(From the Cincinnati Enquirer.)

Jerome S. McWade, condemning the evils of intoxication said in the course of a temperance address in Duluth:

"Colonel Ingersoll, as an example of a drunken man, used to quote the case of him who lay on his back in a field and felt up in the air for the grass.

"You know, of course, the British definition of intoxication:

"'Not drunk is he who from the floor
Can rise again and still drink more;
But he is drunk who prostrate lies,
Without the power to drink or rise.'

"The Canadian idea of a thoroughly drunken person is one who tries to smell the flowers in the carpet.

"Another example of total drunkenness came to my attention recently.

"Three New York men after a protracted evening at the club, took a taxicab and drove to the residence of Smith, one of their number.

"They rang the bell, and, when Mrs. Smith put her head out of the window, they said in thick chorus:

"'Will Mrs. Smith — hic — please come down and—hic—pick out her husband?'"

HEALING POWER A MARVEL

So remarkable is the healing power of Dr. Chase's Ointment that the results of a single application are often a marvel to persons who witness them for the first time. Mrs. C. Hopkins, St. George, Ont., tells how her son was cured of blood poisoning which got started in a wound received at a threshing. Relief was prompt and cure effected by three boxes.

The Weyburn Herald, founded by T. H. Blacklock, formerly of The Dundalk Herald, and sold by him a couple of years ago, changed hands again on June 6th. The foreman, Mr. Bundy, purchased the plant and Dr. R. M. Mitchell, formerly of Dundalk, purchased the property. The retiring editor, Andrew Miller, intends to engage in newspaper work in Alberta.

A despatch from Winnipeg, dated Monday, 18th inst., states that the estimate of one hundred million bushels made ten days ago is now away above the mark. "Has anybody here seen Kelly?" goes beautifully when well sung or played, but on tipsy tongues, under constant reiteration, as on excursion cars where youths march to and fro and libitum, it becomes monotonous and flat. In the constituency of Beautiful Plains in Manitoba the returning officer has declared elected because of an informality on the formality on the nomination paper of his opponent. What the local law is on the point at issue we do not know. But elections by a technical process are not to be encouraged. Operations of this kind ought to be abolished.

HEALING POWER A MARVEL

So remarkable is the healing power of Dr. Chase's Ointment that the results of a single application are often a marvel to persons who witness them for the first time. Mrs. C. Hopkins, St. George, Ont., tells how her son was cured of blood poisoning which got started in a wound received at a threshing. Relief was prompt and cure effected by three boxes.

We want to say a good word for the man who meets his small obligations promptly. They are not as plentiful as they should be and the men need encouraging. Most men will pay but fewer will pay promptly. Almost any firm will testify that counting the time, postage, booking and the like, it costs all some accounts are worth to collect them, and still the man owing it to them is perfectly responsible in a financial way. It very often happens that the worst sinner in this particular is the man best able to pay.

A deaf and dumb individual of advanced age solicited subscriptions from door to door in town during the past ten days and was generously received. Towards the end of last week, however, he showed signs of weakness common to indigents—a fondness for booze. He also displayed a vicious disposition that was quite a contrast to the harmlessness of his appearance a few days before. He is reported to have threatened to burn or blow up the Hanna House because landlord Foster would not give him drinks, and even went so far as to follow Mr. Foster with a stone in his hand. For this latter offence he was given summary treatment. When the old wretch left town it was not altogether of his own free will. He should not be allowed to run at large.—Paisley Advocate.

A gentleman called on us on Tuesday and jocularly complained that he had been the victim of a downright hold up at the hands of a no less important organization than the fair Daughters of the Empire. He declared that the said ladies invited himself and other guileless male persons to a picnic at Pike Lake and he innocently thought the ladies intended to stand treat being infatuated fairly by his manly beauty and winning manners What then was his surprise, when he found that he had to pay his share of the entire outing, conveyances, boats, refreshments and various extras. Now, the girls would surely leave that tight wad at home on future outings. If he had any sand in him he would never have registered a kick at all. We will not give him away as the daughters might be inclined to black list him entirely and he is not such a bad chap on the whole.—Harriston Review.

THE BANNER

THURSDAY, JULY 28, 1910

It is encouraging to notice the attention that is being given to the question of obtaining pure water for stock on the farm. There is no doubt that many farmyard wells are so situated that the water is badly polluted by surface drainage. Human beings could not drink the water without experiencing ill effects and running a grave danger of contracting disease. The effect upon horses and cattle must be injurious and in the case of milch cows anything but conducive to the production of pure wholesome milk. The farmyard well needs all the attention it is getting these days and it is to be hoped that the agitation will speedily lead to a general improvement. In this connection a leading agricultural journal points out editorially that in the making of cheese and butter pure water is as necessary as in the farm home. Sometimes the drainage is defective and washings from cheese factories find their way into the well, through the soil, or directly from the surface. Where such a condition exists it is impossible to turn out butter or cheese of the best quality. As the journal, just referred to, states, "The finest cheese and butter cannot be made, where impure and polluted water is used in and about the factory."

The World's Work, a New York magazine, reminds its readers in a recent issue that New York is still very far from being the financial centre of the world. England and France are the great investing nations and the financiers of London and Paris are still in control of the money markets. Scores of millions of dollars of United States bonds find their way to Paris every year. During the first four months of the present year English buyers have taken $107,000,000 worth of United States bonds. At that the United States is not the only field for British investment. English capital is helping to develop Canada, the South American republics, is behind great enterprises in Australia, China, South Africa and Mexico, finds its way in fact into all parts of the civilized world. We are told that "not one out of ten American investors owns or ever did own any security that represented anything outside of the United States." To quote from World's Work: "In one small country whose centre is London, investors in 1909 subscribed for securities worth $1,070,000,000. Nearly every dollar of it went to work either in the peaceful pursuits of British commerce, or out on the firing lines in Canada, the United States, South America, South Africa or Asia — where the armies of commerce fight wars of conquest. We are not the only people under the sun, and the long-accumulated and well-managed wealth of England is simply prodigious in comparison with our smaller, newly-acquired capital."

Last week the writer drove through parts of three of the oldest and wealthiest townships in Ontario County. It would be difficult to find a finer agricultural district anywhere in the province. Toward Lake Ontario the land is quite level, but when the traveller gets away from the Lake he enters a rolling country, devoted largely to grain and stock farming. In some respects the district surpasses the country about Orangeville; in others it does not. The land is more uniformly good and there is less waste than here. Trees are plentiful along the roadsides and fences on the farms and add greatly to the charm of the landscape. Being an older country the barns are not as large nor as modern as the barns that the yeomanry of Dufferin and northern Peel have been erecting during the past ten or twenty years. In certain respects, however, the country is much in advance of Dufferin county. Perhaps the most important is the matter of roads. The roads are excellent and are constructed after modern plans They are well graded and rounded, not too wide between ditches and generally speaking well gravelled. There is a noticeable absence of the boulders that are so conspicuous upon our roads. "Snake" fences have just about disappeared in southern Ontario. There is a great deal of wire fencing and wherever rails are used the fence is nearly always a straight one. Another respect in which southern Ontario compares very favorably with this part of the province is in the condition of the roadsides. The great majority of the farmers appear to make a practice of cutting the weeds and thistles along the highways opposite their farms. Consequently the roadsides are comparatively clean and give the passerby an impression of tidiness and neatness. One has only to drive through this beautiful country to realize how much roads, fences and clean roadsides contribute to the appearance of any farming district.

JEWS COMMITTED FOR TRIAL.

The case against two Jews, Moses Seigel and William Levosy, charged with stealing a stove from Samuel E. Greer, of Melancthon, was further heard before P. M. Rutherford at Shelburne on Monday last. The accused, who gave evidence on their own behalf, were committed for trial before Judge McCarthy, at the next Sittings of the Peace for the County of Dufferin. Bail was accepted. McKay for Crown, Vance, K. C., for defence.

E. A. Donald, for ten years proprietor of the Maple Leaf Hotel, Tottenham, has gone to New Liskeard, to take charge of the Canada House.

SUMMER COURSE FOR RURAL PREACHERS.

The last may not always be the best, but in this case it is at least one of the best. Amherst Agricultural College (Massachusetts) has a summer course for country preachers. This work was first begun last year and twelve pastors attended. These have spread the report of the benefits of the course, so that many more are expected to be in attendance this year, and success seems evident for the plan.

What do the ministers study at the Agricultural College? The practical problems of the farm. They receive lectures upon live stock, crops and soils; they study co-operation on the farm, rural literature, rural education, agricultural economics, and the social organization of rural communities. And for their wives is given a course in domestic science, which is calculated to assist them in becoming more fully helpful leaders of the country women.

Why should these things not be? The congregation of the country preacher and the village pastor is made up of farmers, their wives, sons and daughters. These are his people, his associates, his friends, his peculiar charge. Until he can meet them as friends, talk to them not only on the beauty of the chafacter of Christ, but also on the beauty and character of their Clydesdales; until he can show a mastery of the everyday problems of the farm, and of the youth thereon, he cannot expect to command their respect and confidence when he essays into the higher realms. He seeks to be the adviser, the leader of these young farm people; first, he must gain their respect and friendship. Can he do it if he shows small desire for that close touch with Mother Earth which is their lot, and which is not usually associated with a standing collar, a Prince Albert coat, patent shoes, and dainty hands?

The wonder is that the country preachers have not asked for this work years ago; that the divinity schools have not incorporated such work in their theological courses, for the great majority of ministers turned out each year must go to the country and small-town pastorates, and must remain there, whatever their ambitions may be. The great toleration of the rural population, and their reverence for the divine calling of the preacher, has given them a passive leadership which has taken more of the outward form than of the real spirit of masterful directing.

The country church and the country school should be the two centres about which the community rallies, and from which its life may de directed.

The summer agricultural school for the preacher will do much to accomplish this end. It is a splendid idea, and should be more widely introduced.—Farmers' Advocate.

SUMMER MONTHS FATAL TO SMALL CHILDREN.

Every mother must know how fatal the summer months are to small children. Cholera infantum, diarrhoea, dysentry and stomach troubles are all common at this time and many a precious life is snuffed out after only a few hours illness. As a safeguard mothers should keep Baby's Own Tablets in the house. An occasional dose of the Tablets will prevent stomach and bowel troubles, or, if the trouble comes on suddenly, will bring the little one through safely. Mrs. R. E. Sanford, Inverary, Ont., writes:—"My baby was sickly for over a week with stomach and bowel troubles and cried night and day. Nothing helped her till I began giving her Baby's Own Tablets, but they helped her right away and now she is a big healthy child with fine rosy cheeks. The Tablets are certainly a wonderful medicine and I recommend them to all my friends who have little children." Sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

FILED A CAVEAT.

Dr. A. J. Hunter, who is one of the executors of the will, and Messrs. D. J. and H. A. Hunter, two of the sons, have filed a caveat with the object of preventing the widow of the late W. H. Hunter from obtaining letters of guardianship to the estates of her four infant sons. As reasons for this action, the caveat states that Mrs. Hunter does not possess business caapacity and practical knowledge to properly manage and administer the large estates of the four infants, that the guardianship is unnecessary and would put the estates to needless expense, that the testator made provision for the management of the estates by the executors and that the application by the mother is not made in the best interests of three of the infants. The claim is also made that if letters of guardianship are granted at all, it should be to some person or persons possessed of the business experience required to properly manage and administer the estate, and finally that if letters are issued to the applicant then some other person or persons should be appointed to protect the interests of the three younger infants. The caveat was filed by Mr. A. A. Hughson.

In the case of Hand vs. Greer tried at the May sittings of the Stanton Division Court, before Judge McCarthy, judgment was reserved. Geo. Hand had sued Archy Greer for harboring a home boy and claimed $96 damages. The judge gave his decision at the last sitting of the court here in favor of the defendant, Greer—the plaintiff to pay all costs.

MRS. PEARSON DEAD.

Wife of Former Orangeville Clergyman Succumbs After an Operation.

Mrs. Pearson, wife of Rev. Marmaduke L. Pearson, a former pastor of Orangeville Methodist Church, passed away at the Toronto General Hospital at an early hour on Monday morning. The deceased lady had recently undergone a serious operation, which was not entirely successful She sank gradually and after lingering for nearly two weeks died as already stated. Rev. Mr. Pearson, who had just accepted superannuation at the last Conference, had only recently removed from Strathroy to Toronto, taking up his residence at 377 Ruskholme Road. He had been in the active ministry of his church for forty-eight years, and was formerly President of the Toronto and Bay of Quinte Conferences.

Besides her husband, there survive three sons and two daughters:—Rev. Edward A. Pearson, B.A., now of Central Church, Hamilton; Mrs. F. Wilson White, wife of the Assistant General Manager of P. D. Armour's packing establishment, Chicago; William P. Pearson, living in South Africa; Harold W., of Toronto, and Miss Kathleen, at home. The funeral, which was private, took place yesterday at 2.30 from the family residence on Rusholme road to Prospect Cemetery.

The late Mrs. Pearson was an aunt of Rev. W. M. Morris, pastor of St. Andrew's Church.

DEATH OF ARTHUR ISLAND.

Word reached his father and brothers here on Wednesday of last week of the death at Duluth, Minn., on the previous day of Mr. John Arthur Island, a son of Mr. George Island, Corner Second St. and Third Ave. Particulars of the cause of his death, which seems to have been rather sudden, have not yet arrived. When last heard from, a short time prior to his demise, he was apparently in the enjoyment of his usual health. The deceased, who was 34 years and 9 months of age, received his High School education in Orangeville, completing his course about sixteen years ago. He taught school for some time and then went west settling in the town of Kenora, where he lived for four years. He went to Duluth about six years ago where he embarked in the real estate business and speedily established a large connection. Six years ago he was married to Miss West, of Toronto, who survives, with two children, a boy of five years and a girl of three. He also leaves to mourn his untimely demise his father, a sister, Mrs. J. A. Jenkins, of Mono, and five brothers, S. L. Island, Caledon; G. E. Island, Sandhill, and Robert, W. A. and Frank, of Mono. The remains were brought here for burial, arriving in Orangeville on Monday morning. The funeral was held from his father's residence to the Forest Lawn cemetery on Monday afternoon, Rev. W. McLean, of Cardwell, conducting the services at the house and grave. The pallbearers were the five brothers and brother-in-law, Mr. Jenkins. The sympathy of the community is extended to the bereaved widow, father and other relatives.

JOHN CHAMBERS.

The death of Mr. John Chambers, an old and much respected resident of the township of Caledon, occurred at his home, lot 10, 1st line, west, on Wednesday, July 20th. The deceased had lived to the remarkable age of 95 years and was vigorous and comparatively active until a week or so prior to his demise. He was ill only a week, death being consequent upon a general breakdown of the system due to extreme old age. The late Mr. Chambers was born in England, but was brought to Canada by his parents when only three years of age. The family settled in Napanee, whence Mr. Chambers came to Caledon when a lad of perhaps 15 years. Soon afterwards he settled on lot 10, 1st line, west, where he has since lived. He was married twice and is survived by a widow, one son, Harold, and a daughter, Elsie. Mr. Chambers was a staunch supporter of the Methodist Church and a Conservative in politics. He was honest and straightforward in all his dealings and few men enjoyed the respect and good-will of the community to a greater extent. There was a large attendance of sorrowing friends and neighbors at the funeral, which was held from his late residence to Charleston cemetery on Friday afternoon. Rev. Chas. Langford and Rev. S. R. Robinson conducted the services at the house and grave. The pallbearers were Messrs. John Nesbitt, John Warnock, Jas. Warnock, Samuel Stubbs, David and Thos Patterson.

MRS. JAMES LACKEY.

The death occurred last Saturday morning at her home on the Bay Shore road, near Carney's mills, of Margaret Walker, wife of Mr. James Lackey. Death was due to heart trouble. The deceased, who was in her seventy-first year, was born in Perth County and came from there to Artemesia, her family being early settlers in that township. In 1857 she was married to Mr. Thomas Lackey. From this union three children were born:—Samuel, who resides at Orangeville; Mrs. S. J. Foster, Innisfail, Alta.; and Thomas, Sault Ste. Marie, Michigan. Mr. Lackey died in 1863 and five years later Mrs. Lackey married Mr. James Lackey, who survives her. Six children also survive:—Robert, Berkeley, Mrs. John Thompson, Owen Sound; Mrs. R. Iredale, Toronto; Mrs. Leslie Elliott, Derby; Mrs. Wesley Sparling, Sydenham; Mrs. Gordon Iredale, Sault Ste Marie, Ontario. Three children died in infancy. Fourteen years ago Mr. and Mrs. Lackey moved into Owen Sound and resided here until 1907, when they took up residence on the Bay Shore line, where Mrs. Lackey died. The funeral was held on Monday morning to Greenwood cemetery, Rev. Rural Dean Ardill, of St. George's Church, of which deceased was a member, conducting the services at the house and at the grave. The pall-bearers were two sons, Messrs. Samuel and Robert Lackey, three sons-in-law, Messrs. J. Thompson, W. Sparling, and L. Elliott and Mr. Thomas Lackey, of Dundalk. — Owen Sound Times.

KILLED AT BEAVERTON.

John McDevitt, Formerly of Caledon, Meets With Instant Death.

At Beaverton on Saturday, July 24th, John McDevitt and John Hunter, both of Toronto, were killed at the Canadian Northern Station and it is a miracle that several others did not share the same fate.

The two men were employed by the company, one of them, McDevitt, as a craneman. They were working in a gravel pit near Pefferlaw, about nine miles south of Beaverton. An excursion train engine ran back from the latter place, to fetch the men to the station so that they might get back to the city by the excursion train. The engine ran back from the gravel pit tender first, and was in charge of Engineer Morrison. It approached the train to which it was attached with such force that the tender was smashed. McDevitt being killed instantly, and Hunter so seriously injured that he died in two hours. Had the train beed loaded with passengers a terrible disaster would have followed.

Engineer Morrison says the brake and steam lever both failed to work, and so he could not stop his engine in time to prevent the smash. The accident delayed the train for over two hours.

At 12.15 a.m. Monday Dr. Grant opened an inquest. The jury viewed the bodies, and the inquest was adjourned till Wednesday.

It was proposed to open the inquest at 3 o'clock Sunday afternoon, but the acting County Crown Attorney advised against doing so. The midnight inquest was then decided on, so that the bodies might be sent to Toronto by the first train on Monday morning.

John McDevitt, one of the unfortunate men formerly lived near Inglewood. He was unmarried and is survived by two brothers, James McDevitt, of Caledon, and Patrick McDevitt, of Port Arthur, and two sisters, Mrs. J. D. Morgan, of Dundalk, and Mrs. James O'Connor, of Mount Forest. The funeral was held from the home of his brother, James, to the Roman Catholic Cemetery at Silvercreek yesterday morning.

We understand that Hunter, the other man killed, was formerly C. P. R. section foreman at Cataract.

JAMES ARMSTRONG DEAD.

James Armstrong, a former resident of Mono township, died at the Home for Incurables in Toronto on Sunday at the age of 66 years. Deceased lived for many years on the 7th line, east, Mono. He was afflicted with some spinal trouble, which compelled him to use crutches when walking. As he advanced in years he became very stout and his weight and infirmity made him almost helpless. He made his home in Mono until about ten years ago. Since then he has been in Toronto. He was unmarried, and is survived by one sister, Mrs. John Ward, Margaret St. The late John Armstrong, of East Garafraxa, was a brother. The remains were brought to his old home for burial, the funeral taking place from the C. P. R. station here to St. John's Church burying ground in Mono on Tuesday morning. Rev. J. E. Gray, of Mono Mills, conducted the services.

LOVE IN THE HOUSEHOLD.

Love is the wind, the tide, the wave, the sunshine. Its power is incalculable; it is many horse-power. It never ceases, it never slacks; it can move with the globe without a resting place; it can warm without fire; it can feed without meat; it can clothe without garments; it can shelter without roof; it can make a paradise within, which will dispense with a paradise without. But, though the wisest men in all ages have labored to publish this force, and every human heart, is, sooner or later, more or less made to feel it, yet how little is actually applied to social ends. True, it is the power of all successful social machinery; but as in physics we have made the elements do only a little drudgery for us, steam to take the place of a few horses, wind of a few oars, water of a few cranks and hand mills; as the mechanical forces have not yet been generally applied to make the physical world answer to the ideal, so the power of love has been but meanly and sparingly applied, as yet.—Henry D. Thoreau.

A CHILD'S MOTIVES.

The more a parent or teacher believes in a child's purity of motive, the purer that child's motive will be. Nothing is more disheartening to a child than to be charged with an unworthy motive that never occurred to him. If a boy is scolded for quarreling, when he has simply interfered to stop a quarrel, he is less likely to be a peacemaker at the next opportunity. If he is taken to task for being late at school before the teacher finds out why he is late, his sense of justice may be outraged if his lateness is of a kind that the teacher would approve, with knowledge of the cause. The light-hearted, generous, forgiving spirit of the child makes many a teacher or parent careless about giving offense. But if we would set up pure motives in abiding power in the life of the child, we must check our blundering suspicions, and keep that belief plainly to the fore in every issue.—S. S. Times.

Miss Luella Mildred McCutcheon, daughter of David McCutcheon, Whitfield, was married on July 12th, 1910, to Ernest B. Smythe, of Whitfield. The ceremony took place at the Presbyterian manse, Shelburne, and was performed by the Rev. J. A. McKenzie, Ph. D., pastor of Knox Church.

Mr. Bob. Dermott thinks he will soon cage the bird. We wish him every success in his laudable effort.

MONO CENTRE.

The farmers hereabouts are pretty well through with their haying. The crop is an average one, with some excellent fields.

Harvesting has not yet commenced. The recent heavy rains have done the oats and other spring crop a great deal of good and prospects for a satisfactory yield are much brighter now than they were a few weeks ago.

The fall wheat harvest is just ripened and cutting operations will be in full blast shortly. Generally speaking the crop is excellent and it is rarely indeed that the traveller through this section runs across a poor field.

Mrs. G. B. Moore and family, of Maple Valley, are visiting the former's mother, Mrs. Wilson.

Mr. James Maguire, of London, made his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Maguire, a flying visit recently.

A great deal of interest is manifested in the approaching baseball tournament in McCarston's grove on August 3rd. Arrangements have been made for no less than three games. Hockley will play Violet Hill at 1.30; Orangeville will try conclusions with Whitfield at 3 o'clock, and the winners of these games will play off at 6.30.

Our trustees are advertising for a new teacher after the midsummer vacation.

MELVILLE CROSS.

The garden party held on the Public School grounds on Monday night under the auspices of Melville Methodist Church attracted a splendid crowd. The programme was a thoroughly enjoyable one and, with the excellent supper provided by the ladies, was a credit to the congregation. The School Grounds proved to be well adapted for a social gathering of this character, and every person in the big crowd seemed to enter into the festive spirit of the occasion. Rev. Dr. Harper, of Orangeville, occupied the chair in his usual inimitable manner, and delivered a singularly happy and appropriate opening address. Eloquent speeches were delivered by Richard Blain M.P. and S. Charters M.P.P Rev. G. W. Rose and Councillor Geo. Cameron also spoke briefly, the latter indulging in some interesting observations regarding his recent trip to the West. Waldo Dorrington, Bert. Clarke, Ted. Dorrington, Mr. W. A. Dorrington, Mr. Norman Nelson and Wm. Brinker contributed solos, that were greeted with the generous applause they deserved. Jimmie Peacock's songs caught the fancy of the crowd and the gifted entertainer was given a most hearty reception. Mr. James Algie gave a fine cornet solo and Miss Maggie Nesbitt and Mrs. Dorrington contributed much appreciated readings. The gate receipts were about $60 and it is expected that the proceeds from the tent, which was liberally patronized, will be sufficient to defray all the expenses.

Good headway is being made with the grading on the Centre Road. Ex-Warden E. J. Ellis, who is supervising the work, is making a fine job and the people of Caledon will have a first-class road when the work is completed. Mr. Ellis reports considerable trouble getting teams to operate the grader and plows at this busy time of the year.

Farmers hereabouts are commencing the barley and fall wheat harvest. There is no complaint coming regarding the crops in this section. Generally speaking they are rather better than the average this year.

Some young people from Alton had an exciting and unpleasant experience at the garden party on Monday night. Their horse became restless when they were about to leave for home, and in its struggles fell and broke its harness and one of the buggy shafts. Mr. Harry Scott acted the part of the good Samaritan by letting the parties have his horse and buggy to drive home.

MONO CENTRE.

Miss Bagnell, of Hockley, is visiting her sisters, Mrs. J. Bloomer and Mrs. W. Montgomery.

Mrs. Wm. Barber, who has been suffering with erysipelas in her face, had it charmed last week by Mr. Sam McDonald, of Primrose.

Mrs. W. J. Halbert spent a few days this week with friends at Flesherton.

Mr. James Holmes spent Sunday with friends at Hockley.

The measles are still making the rounds, visiting nearly every one as they go along.

Mr. Herb. Patterson will recommend "Allan's Gum Balsam" to any one suffering with heart failure.

We wonder where Herb. Ewing intends boarding after the holidays.

Early in the morning and late in the evening Harry Baker is heard singing "The Lilly of the Valley."

Cheer up, John A. the nurse will soon be returning from the city.

Bob. Holmes doesn't care for the measles on a Sunday evening.

I don't be out late Sunday evenings.—George Aikens.

We wonder what time Herman Forsythe entered Bachelors' Hall Sunday night.

ALTON.

Misses Edna Kirk and Edna Speers, of Charleston, were the guests of Mr. and Mrs. J. Brinkman over Sunday.

Miss Jessie Gibbs has returned from Georgetown, but we are sorry to report that she is not as well as we had hoped to find her.

Mr. Oliver Martin made some interesting observations on Sabbath School work in North Erin Presbyterian Church last Sunday.

Mrs. (Rev.) D. A. Hamilton and little son, of Toronto, are visiting at Mr. Robert Clark's.

One of our citizens is justly indignant over the action of certain parties who have been making a practice of visiting his pea field and helping themselves on a liberal scale. He does not object so much to this as to the thoughtless and careless manner in which they trample through the field destroying his crop. If the practice is persisted in, the offenders will in all probability find themselves in a magistrate's court one of these fine days.

MONO MILLS.

Rev. C. W. Holdsworth, of Havelock, occupied the pulpit in the Anglican Church here on Sunday last.

Rev. F. Davey, who has accepted a call to Saugeen Presbytery, will preach his farewell sermon on Sunday next, commencing at 7 p.m.

Mr. Ernest Jackson, who has recently been promoted to be cashier in the Sterling Bank at Lefroy, Ont., spent Sunday at his home here.

Miss Edith Lee, of Orangeville, is visiting her brother, Mr. Geo. Lee, of Adjala.

Committees, composed of representatives from all the appointments on the Methodist circuit here, are busily engaged making arrangements for their Lawn Party, to be held at Mr. Peter Rawn's on Aug. 9th. The ladies of the congregations will serve supper, consisting of meats, chicken salad, fruits, etc. Ice cream and other refreshments for sale on the grounds. The services of Connor Band have been secured for the evening. See posters for programme.

MONO COUNCIL.

Camilla, July 18th, 1910.

A special meeting of the Council was held here to-day, convened by order of the Reeve. Members were all present, the Reeve in the chair.

Anderson-Parks—That in the matter of the Nottawa River drain improvement the Council of the Township of Mono about the report, plan, estimate, etc., of R. F. West, Township Engineer, and that the Clerk prepare a By-Law in accordance with the Municipal Drainage Act, and that said By-Law be read a first and second time.—Carried.

By-Law read a first and second time.

Council adjourned.

G. H. HARSHAW, Clerk. W. J. DYNES, Reeve.

GROWING TOBACCO IN WELLINGTON.

The Hillsburg Beaver reports an interesting experiment on the farm of Mr. Wm. Barnet at Living Springs. Mr. William Barnet, B. S. A., is director of the Government Experimental Farm in Essex County, where, under his careful supervision, several crops of tobacco have been successfully grown. Being desirous of further extending the experiment, he has forwarded a complete planting outfit to his father's farm, where the seed was sown in hot beds and transplanted, so that shortly Mr. Barnet will have 2½ acres of tobacco under cultivation.

TEACHERS ENGAGED.

The Public School Board has succeeded in engaging teachers to fill the three vacancies on the teaching staff. Miss Ethel McCoy, of Kingston, succeeds Miss Todd, and Miss Sada McIntyre, of Orangeville, will take the place of Miss Elsie Campbell. Miss Annie Baker, of Warkworth, will fill the vacancy made by the resignation of Miss Hill. Miss Baker will take Miss Brown's room, the latter having been assigned Miss Hill's department.

Mr. J. M. Brethour, B.A., formerly of Mt. Forest, has had his services as headmaster of the Markham High School recognized after six months by an increase of $100.00 in salary, which is now $1400.

AN IMPORTANT IMPROVEMENT.

Satisfactory Progress Being Made With Grading of Centre Road.

Satisfactory headway is being made with the grading of the north end of the Centre Road, Caledon, which is being improved by Peel County Council under the County Good Roads System. The grading, which is a heavy contract, has been in progress for the last four weeks under the supervision of Mr. E. J. Ellis, ex-Warden of Peel, the County's inspector. The work has been practically completed from the townline as far south as Mr. Alex. Huston's and the road for this distance is now ready for the crushed stone. Mr. Ellis and his men have made a splendid job of the sharp declivity about thirty rods south of the townline. The hill has been cut down for several feet and the clay used to fill up the hollow to the north. The result is an easy grade in place of the former difficult hill. The grader and plows are now at work on the long flat opposite the Torrance and Watson farms. This is one of the worst sections on the road and an enormous amount of work will be required to put it in shape for the metal. The old roadway was very narrow and over 1000 loads of stone and hundreds of loads of clay have been used as filling to make the roadbed the required width. Considerable underbrushing and stumping also had to be done and quite a deep ditch is being dug along a portion of the road. The nature of the work is such as to call for considerable knowledge of the principles of roadmaking and the practical experience, extending over many years, which Mr. Ellis has had is serving him in good stead. He certainly appears to be the right man for the work. County Engineer Wheelock inspected the work on Tuesday morning and spoke very highly of the manner in which Mr. Ellis and his men are carrying out their arduous and difficult task. When completed the road will be a source of pride and satisfaction to the people of Caledon. Short stretches, one extending from the south end of the present improvement to lot 20, and the other from Charleston to the mountain are all that will then remain in order to complete the improvement of the Centre Road from one end of the town to the other. Mr. W. A. Boos of this town has the contract for the crushed stone, delivery included, to be used on the section now under improvement. Mr. Boos has purchased a complete stone crushing outfit, with which he expects to begin operations within the next ten days. The crusher has already reached Orangeville, but the elevator, screens and some other parts of the machine have not arrived. Mr. Boos has had several men at work for the last three or four weeks hauling and breaking stone to have them in readiness for crushing. His outfit can crush 80 or 90 tons of stone a day when run at full capacity.

Bolton Urban Continuation School will open to receive pupils on Sept. 6th, 1910. This is now a Grade B school with two fully qualified teachers engaged exclusively on High School work. The full course leading to Junior Matriculation and Entrance to Normal Schools will be taken up. The fees will be one dollar per month.

PLEASED WITH TREATMENT.

The Secretary of the Orangeville Lawn Bowling Club has received the following letter from Mr. W. H. Wright, barrister, of Owen Sound, who was skip of the trophy rink at the Tournament here a couple of weeks ago:—

Dear Sir,—Permit me on behalf of the Owen Sound bowlers, who took part in your tournament, to express our hearty thanks for the splendid treatment extended to visiting bowlers. Everything in connection with the tournament was conducted in a faultless manner, and your tournament was certainly a success. You may be assured that next year your tournament will be more largely attended, as every visiting bowler will use his influence to that end.

Wishing your club every success, I remain.

Sincerely yours,
W. H. WRIGHT.

BITTEN BY A DOG.

The first dog episode that has happened in this section since the present scare commenced took place last Friday and Saturday. On Friday, Mr. Arch. McKinnon, 10th line, Erin, was taking a bunch of shingles to fix a barn on an adjoining farm which he owns, but which is occupied by mr. Wes. Leader. As Mr. McKinnon was getting over the fence with the bunch of shingles on his shoulder, Leader's dog attacked him, tearing his trousers and cutting the flesh of his leg with its teeth. Mr. McKinnon consulted Dr. Gear, of Erin, who advised that the dog be killed and the head sent to Toronto for inspection for rabies. The animal was brought to Hillsburg on Saturday and destroyed in the presence of Mr. Thos. Young, of the Township Board of Health, and the head sent to the city.—Hillsburg Beaver.

TAXING AUTOMOBILES.

On August first there will come into force in New York State an automobile law that will very much increase the revenue set aside for the improvement of roads. Automobiles are to be taxed $5 to $25 per annum, according to the horse-power capacity of each machine. All commercial motor vehicles will be taxed a flat rate of 35 per annum. Chauffeurs have to have a license for which a fee of $5 per annum must be paid. The estimated annual revenue from this source is $1,500,000, all of which will be expended in repairing and maintaining state-owned roads. In Ontario a million dollar appropriation was set aside several years ago for road improvement under the Road Improvement Act. Only about one-half of this appropriation has been used so far, and yet the government is inclined to point with pride to what is being done for country roads. The fact of the matter is, we have only touched the fringe of the road improvement question. This country will never get into the game of road improvement on a scale commensurate with the needs of the country, until a system of state-owned or controlled roads is adopted. The States of the Union are leading in this matter, and it is time Ontario, at least, were making a move in this direction.

To Miss Frances Robinson, a 12-year-old Barrie girl, belongs the honor of taking first place among the 314 candidates who wrote on the Entrance Examination in the North Simcoe Inspectorate.

Are Your Children Properly Fed?

LET us talk about the right feeding of children. Of course, you want your children to grow up strong and healthy; you want to equip them for the battle of life with rugged constitutions and good red blood. Now, the first step is to see that they are properly fed. And these words "properly fed" mean much in the diet of children. For it isn't quantity that counts, but quality.

There is no better food under Heaven for growing children than plenty of first class bread and butter. They thrive on it, grow strong and fat and rugged. Their systems crave it because it is a complete, well-balanced food.

But the bread must be good—the very best, and the best is made from ROYAL HOUSEHOLD FLOUR which contains the full nutriment of Manitoba Red Fife wheat—for only wheat of this character contains enough of the right quality gluten to balance the starch. Gluten makes bone and muscle, starch makes fat. It takes the right combination of both to make properly balanced bread.

Bread made from OGILVIE'S ROYAL HOUSEHOLD FLOUR is richest in blood building, muscle building, health building gluten. Children like it better and thrive better on it.

With "Royal Household" you need never have anything but the very best results for it is always the same, absolutely uniform, year in and year out and is just as good for Pastry as it is for Bread.

If parents knew this important difference between ROYAL HOUSEHOLD FLOUR and other flours they would never use any but "ROYAL HOUSEHOLD".

Send us your name and address also the name of your dealer to The Ogilvie Flour Mills Co. Limited, and get that splendid book of tried Recipes called "Ogilvie's Book for a Cook". 24

CENSUS OF AGRICULTURE.

The next Census of Agriculture will be taken under date of 1st of June, 1911.

The area, product and value of field crops harvested in 1910 will be enumerated for fall wheat, spring wheat, barley, oats, rye, corn for husking, buckwheat, beans, peas, flax, mixed grains, hay and clover, alfalfa or lucerne, corn for forage, other forage crops, turnips, mangolds, sugar beets, other field roots, tobacco and hops; and grass seed, red clover seed and alsike clover seed will be enumerated for product and value.

Grain and other field crops for the harvest of 1911 will be taken by areas only, as none of these crops will be ripe at the taking of the census. The products of these crops will be gathered later in the year from the reports of correspondents.

Animals and animal products, also under the head of agriculture, will include the number of horses three years old and over, horses under three years, milch cows, other horned or neat cattle, sheep, swine, geese, ducks, hens and chickens and hives of bees held or owned by each person at the date of the census on 1st June of 1911.

The number of horses, milch cows, other horned or neat cattle, sheep, swine and poultry sold in 1910, will be recorded, as well as the wool, milk, home-made butter, home-made cheese, eggs and honey products of the year, and the quantities of milk and cream sent to factory or sold.

Pure-bred animals registered, or eligible for registration, which are owned at the time of taking the census will be enumerated for horses, cattle, sheep and swine, but their number will also be counted with all other animals.

ARM BROKEN.

While Mr. John Legate, who lives north of Jessopville, was driving home from Riverview Saturday night his horse started to kick, smashing the dashboard and kicking Mr. Legate's right arm. Mrs. Legate jumped with the baby in her arms and escaped injury. Drs. J. A. Smith, who was called in, found the bones of Mr. Legate's arm broken in three places between the wrist and elbow. —Shelburne Economist.

SATISFIED WITH CONDITIONS.

Edmonton Board of Trade Says This Yerr's Crop Will Eclipse Former Records.

Special Representatives Make Automobile Tour of Farming Districts.

In order to secure accurate data on crop conditions in the territory of which that city is the hub, the Edmonton Board of Trade recently decided to conduct a number of automobile tours throughout the district, covering in all some thousand miles of territory. There will be six tours in all and of these the first two, designated as A and B, started yesterday morning.

The representatives of the board on tour B, were A. B. Campbell, of Campbell & Ottewell, millers of this city, and John Blue, of the Provincial Agricultural department, who has wide experience in crop judging, and who is considered an authority on the subject.

This party left the city yesterday at nine o'clock in Scott Bros. motor car and returned to the city last evening after having covered some ninety miles during which they interviewed twenty-one farmers and secured reports from fifteen more. The members of the party examined samples from approximately 600 acres of fall wheat and from 900 acres of spring wheat. During their entire trip they did not find a single farmer who was inclined to be other than optimistic. From their observations and from information received from farmers interviewed the estimated yield of fall wheat is placed at twenty-seven bushels per acre and spring wheat at twenty-three. This, if realized, and from the present stage of maturity there is no reason to think otherwise, will be slightly in excess of the record over the entire province for the past few years.

Reports from the representatives of the board on the other tours will be published in the Journal as soon as the parties return.

Mr. Blue in his description of the tour given below points out that the farmers visited were very optimistic and regard conditions as ideal, if anything, a little better than in previous years. They feel confident that they will harvest a bumper crop, the best in years.

Fall wheat has been a very successful crop and a greater acreage than in previous years will be reaped. A large amount of breaking has been done and is still in progress which goes to show the faith the farmer has in the district and also guarantees that even a larger acreage will be under crop next year.

Fall wheat is in the words of the farmer: "A magnificent crop this year."

The above statement is a conservative analysis of the estimate of the crop situation in the Spruce Grove Stony Plain, Rosenthal and Inga districts of the province of Alberta gathered by your correspondent from the farmers on the spot—that is in their own wheat fields.

The motor car left the Board of Trade offices yesterday morning for these districts, which occupy the country lying west of Edmonton and between the railway lines and the North Saskatchewan river. Over 90 miles were traversed during the day, and personal interviews obtained from a score of farmers. Several local centres in the district were visited. These included Spruce Grove, Stony Plain, Glory Hills, Inga, Rosenthal, Stony Plain Centre. Particular attention was given to the wheat crops.

FALL WHEAT.

Fall wheat is gaining in favor with the farmers in these places and preparations are being made this season for increased sowings. Fall wheat should run about 40 per cent. of the entire wheat crop, while 50 per cent. should be a fair estimate of the proportion next year. The prairie is in splendid condition for breaking and considerable is being done. There is plenty of moisture in the soil to give a good start to carry the young plants over the winter season and preserve the crop until the rainy season of 1911 sets in.

This year's crop is rated from fair to good, that is from 20 to 30 bushels per acre. There is not a failure to be reported, though many of the fields are thin, owing to the delay of the spring rains, which did not give the plants a stand of straw on the ground. The straw is in fine condition, clean and thrifty. The heads are well out of the shot and blade and with the bountiful showers and long bright days are maturing satisfactorily. At present indications, cutting should commence between the 10th and 15th of August. The yield promises to be satisfactory. No field was seen that should go below 18 bushels. These were very few. A few like those of Conrad Wiedenheimer and John MacPherson of Spruce Grove, may go up to 35, if conditions continue as favorable as they are now. Similar crops were seen on the farms of Peter McCallum, Inga, and William Lange, 10 miles southwest of Edmonton. But when grain has passed through the thresher's measure between 25 and 27 bushels per acre will be close to the actual yield.

SPRING WHEAT.

Spring wheat will be a good crop, averaging in the neighborhood of 20 bushels—a good average. When compared with other provinces and states. At the present time many of the fields are shaggy, as heading out is not completed, but the plants are strong and virtually glow with that deep green that indicates abundant plant food and moisture. The prevailing variety is Red Fife. Growth is proceeding satisfactorily and harvesting will be quite as early as former years. On the whole route no failures were noted, nor were any reported. The farmers are providing more binder twine per acre for harvesting their wheat crops than they have done in former years. The dealers at Stony Plain state that most of their patrons were providing at the rate of 3 lbs. per acre, which they say is one-half a pound above the average. John A. Willy, of Inga, calculates it will take four and a half pounds of twine per acre to tie his fall wheat.

If wheat is regarded as the major index of the farmer's success in any one season, then the season of 1910, as far as present indications go, is one of the best seasons the farmers of the district, referred to in this letter, have had in the history of the district. Mr. A. B. Campbell, who was in charge of the party yesterday, and who has a long, successful experience in the wheat and milling business in Edmonton, expressed himself as satisfied with the prospects for a good wheat crop in the country west of Edmonton. He has visited this district regularly for years and has ample data for comparison and conclusion.

Other Crops.

In a mixed farming district, such as the country traversed yesterday much depends upon crops other than wheat. Oats and barley are extensively grown here. Oats are heading out and little shorter than usual, but they are generally thick on the ground, in a thrifty, growing condition and doing well. The oat field will look better in two weeks' time, when they will be in full head and medium length. Though less straw is anticipated, the yield will be up to that of former years running from 45 to 60 bushels. A few fields are late and if not cut for green fodder will not be ripe before the long days are past.

Barley promises a normal crop in straw and grain.

Though the hay crop is light generally in Alberta, Spruce Grove, Stony Plain and Inga have several good timothy fields. Though many meadows will not go over one-half a ton to the acre, generally speaking, the hay crop may be considered fair. Between Spruce Grove and Stony Plain there are some crops that will go from a ton to a ton and a half per acre. Good hay was seen on several farms on the road east from Stony Plain Centre.

Stock are in good condition. There is plenty of grass and flies are less of a pest than usual. The district, according to the verdict of the oldest farmers, never looked better. Prairie and woodland are in full foliage, the farms exhibit the first yellow glow of harvest. By day the growing crop reflect a heavy green, which becomes subdued to a soft emerald in the evening sunlight.

A Few of the Witnesses.

Below is given a few of those seen to-day with their own words and estimates of the crop prospects for 1910:

G. J. Wellburn (10 miles west) — has 60 acres spring wheat. "Weather is fine for filling the grain." Estimates 25 bushels.

E. Pinchbeck, (10 miles west). "Fall wheat cutting will commence around here the first week in August. I have no complaints, and I'm supposed to be a 'groucher.'"

Robert McLellan, (11 miles west), estimates his 90 acres of spring wheat at 25 and oats 60.

John McPherson, M.P.P., Spruce Grove, has 60 acres Alberta Red — Estimates 30 bushels. "Crop as far advanced as last year. Spring wheat is satisfactory around here. Hay medium."

Philip Schwintz, Spruce Grove. wheat may go 40 bushels.

Napoleon Gagne, Stony Plain, has 20 acres spring wheat, which is thick enough if it ripens, to yield 40 bushels per acre. "The best wheat I ever saw."

Rossell and Hardwicke, Stony Plain. "The finest prospects this year our farmers ever had. We know it by the amount of binder twine we are selling."

Geo. Imerson, Stony Plain— "The fall wheat is magnificent."

Chris. Niman, Rosenthal—Has 60 acres spring wheat. Estimates 30 bushels. "My crop is satisfactory."

Mrs. Godfried, Duckdale (Stony Plain Centre), stated she had lived eighteen years in the country, and this year was as good a year as she had seen. Fifty acres on this farm is estimated at 25.

William Lange, (10 miles west) has 45 acres Alberta Red. "It is a fine crop and maturing well."

HE JUMPED THE JOB.

The Welland Telegram is responsible for the following:—Recently the Town of Thorold engaged a new official called for convenience, "Chief of Police." He remained under the strain for two days and finding his reason, he fled in the darkness of the night. The sole memento of his visit is a little scrap of paper now in possession of the mayor, "If I had been born triplets," the missive says, "or even twins, I would have stuck her out to the end of the month, but being only one, I guess I'll have to give it up. I have been here only two days and consequently I have not yet discovered all the duties assigned to my unhappy lot, but, so far I have been able to memorize these:—Chief of police, night watch, caretaker of the town hall, bell ringer, sanitary officer, snow shoveller, aldermanic page, dog catcher, street foreman, inspector for the board of health, poundkeeper, burglar alarm, collector of back taxes, aide for the clerk, inspecter of noxious weeds and orphan children, etc., etc. Keep your gold; I'm going to work at something where I'll know what I am doing."—Erin Advocate.

BIG FORTUNE FOR CHATSWORTH WOMAN.

Mrs. J. J. Merriam is Descendant of Col. Baker, Whose Estate Is Worth $400,000,000.

If Mrs. J. J. Merriam, of Chatsworth, can prove her claim to be one of the heirs of Col. Baker, she will come in for a nice little windfall of about $5,000,000. The story is an interesting one. In the closing years of the 18th century, and the first of the 19th, Col. Baker was a prominent figure in the United States. He took a leading part in encouraging immigration; and was very successful in persuading settlers to come from other lands and become citizens of the Republic. For his service the government rewarded him with a grant of land in the State of Pennsylvania, where the City of Philadelphia now stands. Col. Baker, wiser than most, did not dispose of the land, but leased it to different parties for a 99-year term.

The leases expired recently. But in the meantime Philadelphia had grown,—as we all know; and Col. Baker's grant, which was right where the heart of the city now is, increased enormously in value. In the meantime, too, Col. Baker had gone the way of all flesh, and his estate went into the hands of the court for administration. At the expiration of the leases the lands were sold, and the proceeds deposited to the credit of the estate, and there is now on deposit, awaiting distribution, the magnificent sum of $400,000,000.

Through the lapse of years, the heirs of Col. Baker became scattered and the trace of them lost. Now the Pennsylvania authorities are making every effort to find them; and Mrs. Merriam, it seems, is one.

The old lady—she is eighty-five years of age—is at present living in Chatsworth. She claims to be a direct descendant of Col. Baker, and is confident that she can establish her right to a share in the money. She and her son, and another son now living in Pomona, Cal., have kept closely in touch with the affairs of the Baker estate for some years; and feel quite sure of their ground. There are, it appears, some eighty claimants; so that if Mrs. Merriam can establish her right to a share in the fortune—her share will be at least $5,000,000.—Sun.

Kidney Suffering

Backaches and tired feelings tell of weak kidney action—Prompt relief by using DR. A. W. CHASE'S KIDNEY AND LIVER PILLS

There is no treatment for kidney disease which will afford you relief so quickly as Dr. A. W. Chase's Kidney and Liver Pills, and none which will so certainly cure the most complicated forms of this disease.

There is a reason for this. Dr. A. W. Chase's Kidney and Liver Pills awaken the action of the liver and bowels as well as the kidneys and thereby effect a thorough cleansing and regulating of the excretory system.

Mr. S. J. Argue, Kars, Carleton, Co., Ont., writes:—"I have suffered a great deal wth kidney troubles and pains in the small of the back and have tried a good many remedies without obtaining very much benefit. I wish to say, however, that I can heartily recommend Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills as a splendid medicine as they have proven of very great value to me."

SAVED FROM THE KNIFE

Appendicitis Cured By "Fruit-a-tives"

NEWBURGH, ONT., Feb. 12th, 1910.

'Just about a year ago, our daughter Ella, (fourteen years), was taken with terrible pains in the right side. The pain was so severe that we had to carry her to bed. We at once put her under the care of a first-class doctor, who pronounced it a case of Appendicitis and advised an operation.

We took her to a hospital in Kingston where she was again examined by an eminent specialist. He said she had Appendicitis and must be operated on at once if we wanted to save her life. As we had taken her to Kingston to have this done we were ready but our daughter was afraid and cried and begged so pitifully, that we postponed it for that day. Luckily for us and for her an uncle came in with some 'Fruit-a-tives' and insisted on Ella taking them. Good results were apparent, almost from the first dose, and the continuous treatment cured her.

'Fruit-a-tives' saved our daughter from the surgeon's knife and to-day she is enjoying the best of health."

A HANDSOME TIP.

Visit of an American Girl to an English Ancestral Home.

By DOROTHEA HALE.

[Copyright, 1910, by American Press Association.]

Miss Mildred Van Tromp, an American multimillionaire's daughter in London, cared nothing for marrying a title, but she did care for the castles of old England. Miss Van Tromp's cousin, Miss Adele Sherman, was with her.

One morning the two tourists took a train at a London railway station, intending to visit Hallowen castle, the residence of the Duke of Elliston. On the journey they chatted about the castle they were going to see, referring occasionally to their guidebook. A gentleman in the same compartment sitting opposite them, who had been buried in his paper, spoke up:

"If you ladies are going to visit Hallowen castle I fear you will be disappointed. It will not be open today to visitors."

The girls looked much crestfallen. The gentleman continued:

"The castle is only shown during the duke's absence. He returns today."

Miss Sherman, who usually acted as spokesman, thanked the gentleman for his information and asked if there was any one in service at the castle who for a handsome tip would make an exception in their case. To this he replied:

"I am going to the castle myself and shall see the duke. I think it probable that I can secure his permission to show you through his ancestral abode. If you will be there"—he took out his watch—"at, say, 2 o'clock I will let you know what I can do for you. Ask for Mr. Comyns."

The ladies thanked the man for his courtesy and when the train reached the station went to an inn, where they partook of a luncheon, then strolled up to the castle. They were stopped at the postern by a lackey, but on mentioning the name of Comyns they were conducted to a reception room in the living apartments of the castle. After a wait of ten minutes Mr. Comyns entered and said that he had obtained the necessary permission.

Mr. Comyns was between thirty and thirty-five years old. It was seldom that he smiled, but when he did his face changed from the serious to the genial. He was apparently a gentleman, but there are many grades of gentlemen in England, and the girls could not make out to which grade he belonged. They fancied that he might attend to some business for the duke or was his solicitor or was there to sell him something. One point troubled them from the first—they feared he might not be so respectable, though he had avoided the subject of tips, as to decline a crown or two if offered to him. They had often received favors or what they supposed were favors from men just as genteel looking whose palms they had crossed. Miss Van Tromp determined to watch his English. If he were not a gentleman he would surely make a blunder, perhaps in an unguarded moment drop an "h."

All this they talked and thought over while waiting. Mr. Comyns led them out into the courtyard and thence to one of the towers. He began in that clear, well modulated voice with which the two girls had heard the gentlemanly guides in Westminster abbey show that old pile for the modest sum of sixpence. This confirmed their opinion that he would expect a tip. He spoke fluently and as if he had often before reeled off the identical words.

"This tower," he said, was built in the reign of William II. and is, of course, Norman. The upper part was put on later and is Gothic. A breach was made here where you see a difference in the stonework by the Roundheads during the close of the war by which Charles I. lost his rascally head."

Surprised at this, Miss Van Tromp asked:

"Does the duke consider King Charles I. rascally?"

"It doesn't matter to me what the duke thinks. Everybody knows that Charles I. was treacherous, mean, untrue to his friends and altogether unworthy of sovereignty."

"Does your British nobility usually take that ground?" asked Miss Sherman.

"I don't know. The opinions of most of them are worth nothing anyway."

The girls were puzzled. How dare this man within the ancestral home of one of the British aristocrats speak so disrespectfully of them? Presently their guide led them into the gallery of family portraits.

"That old fellow up there was the Earl of Habersham and became the first Duke of Elliston. He got rich by robbery and was made a duke for stabbing in the back a man the king wished put out of the way."

The girls looked at each other, astonished at this frankness with regard to the present duke's ancestors.

"That red faced man," continued Mr Comyns, "was the first duke's brother. He was a pirate."

"A pirate!" exclaimed both the girls at once.

"Certainly. That was once considered a very respectable calling. That one with scars on his face was a robber. He kept up this place by descending into the valley, looting travelers and returning with his booty."

"Were all the duke's ancestors bad?" asked Miss Van Tromp.

"Most of them. I know all about the family. Scarcely a good one in it."

"But the present duke is a fine man. I am told."

"I should like to know in what way. He sits in the house of lords—a useless institution—with his hat down over his eyes, most of the time asleep. When he is here he is bored to death. When I told him that two American girls wished to see his castle he proposed to show you about himself, just to have something to do. I told him it was my job and he shouldn't take it away from me."

There was more wonder in the faces of the young women, and the last words decided them that they must offer a tip.

"The castle is a dilapidated old place," continued the guide, "not worth preserving. I think the duke would like to sell it to some of your American millionaires."

"How could he bear to part with that which has descended to him through centuries?"

"He likes London pretty well. With the money he could get for this rattletrap place he could enjoy himself very well in London."

"How much would he take for it?"

"Oh, a matter of £100,000."

"Please tell him that I'll give him that for it."

It was now Mr. Comyns' turn to look surprised. He made no reply at first, then said:

"From whom shall I tell him the offer comes?"

Miss Van Tromp took out a card, wrote her London address on it and handed it to Mr. Comyns. They had by this time gone the rounds and were at the postern. And now the terrible question of the tip came up. Miss Van Tromp decided that she would give one so large that even should their guide be a gentleman he might not feel insulted. She put five sovereigns into his hand. He took them unwillingly and thrust them into his pocket.

Two days later an invitation came from the dowager Duchess of Hallowen to Miss Van Tromp and Miss Sherman to dine with her at her London residence. The invitation closed with these words, "You can then talk over the sale of Hallowen castle with my son, the duke."

Miss Van Tromp, whose income for one year was more than the price she had offered for the property, was not at all frightened. At first she thought she would adhere to her resolution not to mingle with the English nobility and decline the invitation, but Miss Sherman persuaded her to accept. They were to sail for America the next week, and Miss Van Tromp was not averse to dining with a duchess so long as it could be done without the preliminary presentation at court.

On the evening appointed they drove to the duke's home. They were received by the dowager duchess, a pleasant old lady, and after a time who should enter the room but Mr. Comyns in evening dress. He advanced, smiling, to welcome the guests.

"My son," said the duchess.

"A younger son?" asked Miss Van Tromp.

"No; I'm Ralph Comyns and Duke of Elliston," said the gentleman. "As I told you, I'm a bored man when at Hallowen, and I passed a delightful hour in showing you my pile. But I shall not hold you to the offer, and here," taking five sovereigns from his vest pocket. "is the fee you gave me. I really don't think I should have accepted it."

There was a twinkle in his eye as he spoke.

"I am ready to give you a check for the castle," said Miss Van Tromp, a trifle ruffled at having been deceived.

"That's just like you Americans," replied the duke, smiling. "There's nothing so old, so new, so valuable or so worthless but that you are ready to buy it."

"I might hold you by law to the bargain. I can prove by my cousin, Miss Sherman, who was present, that you offered the property for a specified sum and I accepted the offer."

"I should rather be bound by it than go to law with such a charming opponent," replied the duke gallantly.

There was nothing more said about the sale, and after Miss Van Tromp had recovered from her chagrin at having tipped a duke the dinner proved a very enjoyable one. Miss Van Tromp and her cousin did not sail on the steamer on which they had engaged passage. Indeed, they remained in London for some time. Miss Van Tromp fell into the same matrimonial conditions as most American heiresses abroad. She married the Duke of Hallowen.

A Division of Labor.

Bobby had been unusually quiet for several hours, so quiet indeed that his mother began to worry over the great quantities of stillness that came from the room in which he was sitting. Finally, unable to stand the strain any longer, she rose up from her work and went into the nursery.

"What are you doing, Bobby?" she said as she discovered the little chap curled up in a chair with a very solemn expression on his face.

"Thinkin' and wishin'," replied Bobby.

"What about, dear?" asked his mother.

"I was thinkin' how nice it would be if I was twins," he answered. "Then the other one could do the studyin' at school and I could stay home and play, and then when I did something naughty, why, you could spank him. When I was sick he could take the castor oil, and"—

"And when you had some candy—what then?" asked his mother.

"Oh, I'd eat it," said Bobby. "It wouldn't do for me to let him get sick."—Judge's Library.

A Prodigy.

"So you think your boy is a prodigy? But every man thinks his own son is the most wonderful being that ever breathed."

"I tell you this youngster is remarkable, no matter how you may sneer. I've seen him do a thing that I don't suppose any other boy of his age could possibly do."

"What's his specialty—mathematics?"

"Mathematics! I should say not! He hasn't any more head for figures than I have, and learning the multiplication table was the hardest work I ever did in my life."

"In what branch of science does he seem to be particularly interested?"

"He isn't interested in science at all. But the other day a friend of mine who has a big automobile left the machine standing in front of my house for more than half an hour, and, although the boy was playing around outside all the time, he did not once climb into the automobile or even toot the horn."—Chicago Record-Herald.

A Sixth Sense.

Scientists in Denmark are greatly puzzled by a man named Emil Knudsen, aged thirty-six, a Norwegian from Christiania. He has been an object of interest to the medical faculty for some time, and lately Professor Friedenreich, one of the leading nerve specialists of Europe, suggested an experiment. Knudsen was blindfolded, placed at the wheel on a steamer and told to pilot it through the intricate channels of Copenhagen harbor. This he did without any mishap whatever. He displayed no nervousness or hesitation. He took a dozen sharp corners and followed a zigzag course throughout without any uncertainty. He explains his gift as a sixth sense, and the scientific men who have him under observation are inclined to believe that this explanation is the true one. At present, anyway, they are unable to account for the performance on any other hypothesis.

Canada's Buffalo Herd.

The largest herd of buffaloes in the world is now owned by Canada, says a writer in Canada. They form a most picturesque group as they roam over the new national reserve set apart for them near Wainwright, one of the growing towns on the Grand Trunk Pacific, 125 miles east of Edmonton. It is only within the last year that Canada has wrested from the United States the honor of having the most representative herd of this distinctively North American animal, which is rapidly disappearing. The Dominion government recognized the need of action if the bison were to be preserved and before Washington had realized it had purchased practically the entire herd of 600 or 700 from Michael Pablo of Montana, who had carefully gathered them together and protected them on his great ranch near Ravalli.

By-Law No. 395

A By-Law to provide for drainage work in the Township of Amaranth, in the County of Dufferin, and for borrowing on the credit of the municipality the sum of three thousand, one hundred and eighty-four dollars, and seventy cents, for completing the same. Provisionally adopted the 9th day of July 1910.

WHEREAS for the better maintenance of certain drains heretofore constructed under the provisions of the municipal drainage act, and to prevent damage to certain lands and roads, caused thereby, it is deemed expedient to change the course, enlarge, and extend the outlet, and otherwise improve certain of the creeks of rivers as is necessary for the free flow of the water.

AND WHEREAS the said Council has procured an examination to be made by the said A. R. Leicester, being a person competent for such purpose, of the drains requiring the hereinafter mentioned improvement, and has also procured plans, specifications and estimates of the proposed alterations or improvements to be made by the said A. R. Leicester, Engineer, and an assessment to be made by him of the lands and roads to be benefited by drainage work, and of all lands and roads liable for contribution thereto, stating as nearly as he can the proportion of benefit, outlet liability and injuring liability, which in his opinion, will be derived or incurred in consequence of such drainage work by every road, and lot or portion of lot, the said assessment so made, being the assessment hereinafter by this by-law enacted, to be assessed and levied upon the roads and lots or parts of lots, hereinafter in that behalf specified, set forth, and described, and the report of the said A. R. Leicester, in respect thereof, and of the said drainage work, being as follows :—

59 Yonge St., Toronto, Ont.,
July 2nd, 1910.

To the Municipal Council of the Township of Amaranth, County of Dufferin.

Dear Sirs,—In accordance with the petition signed by R. J. Wallace and others, under section 75 of the drainage act, and with the instructions of your Council, I have made the necessary surveys, levels, and elevations to locate drain No. 47, to drain the lots through which it passes and answer all other purposes for which it is intended. I consider the outlet into the Grand River, with the removal of logs, etc., around this point, sufficient for the present, but if any additional drainage is put into the river above this point, the question of deepening the channel of the river will have to be considered.

I herewith beg to hand you the necessary plans, profiles, assessments, and roll appertaining to the said drain No. 47.

Yours very truly,
J. MILLS, A. R. LEICESTER,

AND WHEREAS the said Council of the Township of Amaranth, pursuant to the provisions of the Municipal Drainage Act, enacts as follows :—

1. The report, plan, specifications, assessment and estimate, are hereby adopted, and the drainage, as therein indicated and set forth, shall be made and constructed in accordance therewith.

2. The Reeve of the said Township of Amaranth may borrow on the credit of the Corporation of the said Township of Amaranth, the sum of three thousand, two hundred and forty dollars and seventy cents ($3240.70) being the funds necessary for the work not otherwise provided for and may issue debentures of the Corporation to that amount in sums of not less than $50.00 each and payable within fifteen years from the date thereof with interest at the rate of four per cent. per annum, that is to say in equal annual instalments, such debentures to be payable at the Bank of Hamilton, in the City of Toronto, and to have attached to them coupons for the payment of interest.

3. For paying the sum of ten hundred and twenty-four dollars ($1024), the amount charged against the said lands and roads for benefit, and the sum of eleven hundred and two dollars and seventy cents ($1102.70), the amount charged against said lands and roads for outlet liability, and the sum of six hundred and fifty-four dollars ($654), the amount charged against said lands and roads for injuring liability, apart from lands and roads belonging to or controlled by the municipality, and for covering interest thereon for fifteen years at the rate of four per cent. per annum, the following total special rate, over and above all other rates, shall be assessed, levied and collected in the same manner and at the same time as other taxes are levied and collected upon and from the undermentioned lots and parts of lots and roads :—

4. For paying the sum of four hundred and sixty dollars ($460), the amount assessed against the said roads and lands of the municipality, and for covering interest thereon for fifteen years at the rate of four per cent. per annum, a special rate on the dollar, sufficient to produce the required yearly amount therefor, shall, over and above all other rates, be levied and collected in the same manner and at the same time as other taxes are levied and collected upon and from the whole rateable property in the said Township of Amaranth, in each year for fifteen years after the final passing of this by-law during which the said debentures have to run; said debentures shall be payable on the 28th day of December of each year for the following years, namely :—1910, 1911, 1912, 1913, 1914, 1915, 1916, 1917, 1918, 1919, 1920, 1921, 1922, 1923 and 1924.

5. That the Council are hereby appointed Commissioners to let the contract for completing the said drainage work therewith by public sale, (not exceeding the estimate), but every such contractor, with one good and satisfactory surety, shall be required forthwith to enter into bonds for the due performance and completion of contract according to said plan and specifications, and within the time mentioned in said bond, unless otherwise ordered by the Council, and it shall be the duty of said Commissioners to cause said drains and works connected therewith to be made and constructed in accordance with such plans and specifications and to grant orders on the Treasurer to each contractor, less twenty-five per cent. of the amount due, until the contract is fully completed and duly accepted, and for the due performance of these and all other duties of commissioners. The said commissioners shall be entitled to receive a fee of two dollars per day for each day of actual service.

6. This By-law shall be published, or served, once in every week for four consecutive weeks in the Banner Newspaper, published in the Town of Orangeville, and shall come into force upon and after the final passing thereof, and may be cited Outlet to Drains By-Law by Cleaning out of Grand River.

MEN ARE WILLING.

G. T. R. Trainmen Consent to Submit their Differences to Board of Arbitration.

President Hays Says Time for This Has Now Passed and Demands Protection in Operation of Company's Trains.

On Saturday afternoon the striking Grand Trunk trainmen and conductors wired Hon. W. L. Mackenzie King, Minister of Labor, accepting the Government's proposal for arbitration of the strike differences by a board of arbitration, "mutually acceptable to both parties to the dispute." Their action means a long step toward the acceptance of the principle of arbitration without any restriction other than that the Board to be selected shall be acceptable both to the men and to the Company. President Hays of the G. T. R. has not yet consented to agree to an arbitration of the existing differences by a Board to be mutually selected. Further progress in this direction depends upon the attitude of the Company, which for the present is sufficiently indicated by the following message sent to Hon. Mr. King by President Hays :

Hon. W. L. Mackenzie King, Minister of Labor, Ottawa :

"Your telegram of the 23rd received. While, as you know from the many conferences urging your action before the strike took place and from our offer repeated and urged upon the committee, we were desirous of arbitration and so avoiding the existing trouble, the time for such action has now passed, and it is only necessary that we should have the protection to which we are entitled to enable us to resume the full operation of the road.

"(Signed) Chas. M. Hays"

This looks as if the Company felt it had the situation fairly well in hand and is confident of a favorable outcome of the strike. The telegram, containing the trainmen's consent to the proposal to arbitrate, was worded as follows :—

Montreal, July 23, 1910.

Hon. W. L. Mackenzie King, Minister of Labor, Ottawa.

"In reply to your telegram of even date we desire to advise that it was the intention in previous communications to convey to you the information that the General Committeemen had definitely passed upon the proposed question of arbitration, and that their estimate of the question was prejudiced favorably toward a certain plan of arbitration that had been considered acceptable to the General Committee on a number of other roads where the same controversies existed. In the telegram of yesterday, referring to that plan of arbitration, we said 'we would not be prepared to go farther,' and we had in mind the definite action and instructions of the committee as to arbitration, also the almost unanimously expressed vote over personal signature of the men of the line. We believed it would be assuming entirely too much to undertake to set aside the expressions of the committee and the men on the line.

"If, however, there appears to be reasonable doubt in the minds of any parties interested in this controversy suggestive of the fact that the same plan of arbitration that successfully settled the same questions on a number of other lines would be unfair and inconsiderate of the rights of either party to the dispute in this case, that is a matter that should be given consideration, and arrangements should be made to conserve the interests of the party whose rights were likely to suffer by an acceptance of the plan of arbitration used repeatedly heretofore.

"We recognize the special obligation to the public and regret exceedingly the inconvenience and loss to which public and private interests are being subjected, and with that recognition desire to advise you that we will be willing to refer the existing differences to arbitration, provided a Board of Arbitrators mutually acceptable can be secured.

"We would respectfully suggest that if you on behalf of the Government should be desirous of taking further action in this matter, parties to the differences should be more closely in touch with you for personal conference, and we wait your suggestions in this connection.

"James Murdock."

In reply to Hon. Mr. King's second request for a more positive statement of the Company's attitude toward the proposal for arbitration, President Hays sent the following curt answer :—

"Montreal, Que., July 23, 1910.

"Hon. W. L. Mackenzie King, Ottawa :

"Replying to yours of 22nd I have nothing to add to my letter of July 21st. Chas. M. Hays."

To this the Minister replied as follows :—

"Ottawa, July 23, 1910.

"Chas. M. Hays, President Grand Trunk Railway System, Montreal, Que. :

"I received this morning your wire in which you say, replying to mine of the 22nd, you have nothing to add to your letter of July 21st. I have just received a wire from Mr. James Murdock, representing one of the parties to the present dispute, in which Mr. Murdock says: 'We recognize the special obligation to the public and regret exceedingly the inconvenience and loss to which public and private interests are being subjected, and with that recognition desire to advise you that we will be willing to refer the existing differences to arbitration, provided a board of arbitrators mutually acceptable can be secured.'

"Will you kindly advise me at your earliest convenience if, as representing the other party to the dispute, you also are willing to refer the existing differences to arbitration, provided a board of arbitrators mutually acceptable can be secured?

"W. L. Mackenzie King," Minister of Labor."

President Hays' response to this message, which has been already quoted, shows that for the present at any rate, there is little hope of inducing the Company to consent to arbitration.

BENNETT—MANN.

Captain Robert J. Bennett, of Toronto, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Bennett, of Orangeville, and Miss Christina Louise Mann were quietly married at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Mann, Zina St., at 8 o'clock on Saturday morning. The ceremony was performed by Rev. W. M. Morris, pastor of St. Andrew's Church, in the presence of members of the families of the bride and groom. The bride, who was given away by her father, entered the drawing room to the music of the Lohengrin wedding march, played by Miss Winnifred Bennett. The bride wore a becoming travelling costume of rajah silk. The happy couple drove to the C. P. R. depot, leaving on the nine o'clock train on their honeymoon trip. After their return they will reside on Palmerston Ave., Toronto. The Banner joins the numerous friends of the newly wedded couple in offering its hearty congratulations.

GREAT OPPORTUNITIES.

The expansion of Business in all lines of trade and manufacture throughout the Dominion is providing splendid opportunities for bright, well educated Young Men and Women. The ever-increasing demand for them is very well reflected in the record of the Employment Department of the Central Business College, of Toronto, which cannot begin to supply the many calls it receives for well-trained help for business offices. The salaries now paid even to beginners is very much better than in former years and no field of employment offers better inducements or brighter prospects for a successful future than the commercial interests of our country. A bookkeeper, stenographer or telegraph operator can make a choice of the many appointments offered and can earn a good salary from the day he enters upon this line of work. Proper preparation paves the way and the influence of a reputable training school opens the door.

HOW TO KEEP YOUNG.

Keep in the sunshine. Avoid excesses of all kinds. Eat moderately at regular intervals. Cultivate a spirit of contentment, and keep the bowels regular and liver active by using Dr. Chase's Kidney and Liver Pills. No treatment is so definite and so satisfactory for this purpose. None so trustworthy and economical.

License Inspector Beckett, of Owen Sound, Gets After Herb. Wilkins.

The devotees of the thirst quenching department of Herb. Wilkins' well known emporium, the Central Hotel, were painfully surprised on drifting into Herb's place of refuge during Tuesday evening to find that License Inspector M. C. Beckett, accompanied by P. S. Foster, had paid the rendezvous a visit during the afternoon and appropriated all the wet goods on the premises. Result, numerous drouths of noble proportions remained unassauged. The story of the seizure is unique in the history of booze secretion and vending by stealth in the town of Owen Sound. Mr. Beckett had grounds for belief that the premises occupied by Herb. Wilkins at the Grand Central had somewhere a hiding place of cache, in which a considerable quantity of liquors was being secreted. This belief was further strengthened by what he was told by a man who repeatedly got himself soused in the Central barroom. Accordingly, the Inspector, accompanied by P. C. Foster, who also had reason to believe that there was a "plant" on the premises, paid the Central a visit about two o'clock on Tuesday afternoon. The habitues of the pale were not surprised to see Mr. Beckett, but consternation was written all over the bland countenance of the worthy boniface himself, when it was noticed that the policeman was there to; for why would a policeman be there if there was not something particular in the wind? Obviously this was to be no mere desultory search of the bar, therefore little wonder that the proprietor should quail in fear and trembling for the fate of his liquid wealth, so vitally essential to his welfare in this town of dryness. He wasn't kept in suspense for long. Mr. Beckett and the guardian of the peace went almost direct to where the spoil was stored. The stairway takes a double bend in a hall near the barroom and beneath the bend was a large dry-goods box containing a miscellaneous assortment of rags, pans and old clothes. The box was fastened to the wall by a padlock. The key was called for. No one knew where it was. "Well it won't keep me long," said Mr. Beckett, preparing to wrench it away. The key came shortly after. The box being unlocked from the wall, a trapdoor in the floor was disclosed—a neat little trap door about two feet long and fifteen inches wide. It was lifted, and lo! a dimly illuminated vault filled with cool, damp beer cases, lay open to view. The vault was about nine feet long by five feet wide and of about seven or eight feet depth. The astonished searchers got busy immediately and the officer's blue coat came off and he handled the cases as Matthew handed them up out of the cool dungeon. After fifteen minutes hot work twenty cases had been brought out and lay piled around. It seems hardly necessary to add that they were removed to the town building where they lie sealed. Further search disclosed an eight gallon keg and two more cases in a cul-de-sac formed by several walls in the rear. Really a most gratifying haul. It will be some days before the aftermath of the case is heard in police court. This appears to be a striking case of poetic justice which will undoubtedly happen often again. A man is given "stuff" in a den, becomes hopelessly inebriated; recovers in a day or two, probably in the cells, after, he remembers not, what experiences, a loathing for the whole business overtakes him and he tells what he knows. There's a lesson in this surely for booze-vendors. Still all have heard of the ears which would not hear and kindred cases. — Owen Sound Times.

A HUNDRED YEARS OF PEACE.

Celebrations will be held at Toronto, Hamilton, and Buffalo, on both sides of the river between July 1st and October 1, 1915, to celebrate the century of peace between Canada and the United States. This was decided at a meeting of the Hundred Year Peace Society at Clifton Tuesday afternoon. It is likely an International Peace Association, embracing all parts of both countries, will be organized within a few months, to take full charge of the matter. A constitution was adopted making provision for the election of the Governor-General and the President of the United States as Honorary Presidents of the society. Provision is also made for the erection of a memorial to be selected by the society.

Principal Lindsay, of the Grand Valley School, has been given an increase of $50 in his salary.

AUGUST WEATHER.

Dangerous Storms May Be Expected in Some Localities.

General Rainfall, However, is Likely to be Insufficient.

ing storm and weather forecasts for the month of August:—

Rev. Irl R. Hicks gives the following

A Reactionary Storm Period extends from the 2nd to the 5th, with Moon at extreme north declination on the 2nd, and New Moon on the 5th. The Mercury period also covers this period, as seen in the storm diagram. Light fluctuations of barometer and temperature, attended by possible showers and blustering clouds and thunder are indicated for this period, prolonged or retarded by New Moon on the 5th. The 3rd to the 9th is the first seismic period for August.

A Regular Storm Period is central with the Mercury period on the 8th, covering the 6th to the 11th. This period promises to come in with cloudiness and threatening conditions lasting from the reactionary period preceding, owing to Mercury's influence and New Moon on the 5th. But low barometer and storms of rain, wind and thunder will reach a crisis on and touching the 8th, 9th and 10th. This is about the most promising rain period for this mid-summer month. Great blustering and electrical storms will center on the 9th. A decided change and more pleasant weather will follow storms of this period for several days.

A Reactionary Storm Period is central on the 13th, 14th and 15th. The Mercury influence together with the Moon's first quarter and apogee on the 12th, will bring a marked increase of storm conditions in this period. We do not think a general sufficiency of rainfall is to be expected this month, or during this summer, but good local rains will be natural in many scattering sections in central to northern states, during the three storm periods within the Mercury brace up to August 15th. Violent to dangerous storms will hit some localities, but always after ample warnings have appeared to all who are looking for them.

A Regular Storm Period at the entrance of Earth autumnal equinox, falls on the 17th to 22nd, central on the 19th and Full Moon on the 20th. This is another period in which may be expected some violent midsummer bluster, black clouds, local rains and thunder. The inestimable value and solid comfort derived from a good barometer through all these storm periods, can never be told to one who has never proven the truth by personal experience. Such a thing as being surprised by destructive storms, with a reliable barometer at hand and properly consulted is absolutely impossible. The 18th to 24th is a seismic period in which earthquakes are sure to be reported from various extremes of the Earth. Watch papers and clip telegraphic reports. During the last half of August one or more equinoctial, or West India storms will come up and menace the Gulf coast regions. Don't be off your guard in that section at any one of the three last storm periods in August.

A Reactionary Storm Period, with Moon on the equator on the 23rd, and in perigee on the 24th, covers the 22nd to the 25th. The astronomic conditions at this time are very favorable for dangerous storms and tidal waves in all the gulf regions. Great storms in the south at this time would almost certainly induce boreal winds from the north, with high winds and general change to unseasonably cool weather over most parts of the inland states. The barometer and all other indications should be watched especially at this reactionary period.

A Regular Storm Period is central on the 31st, covering the last three days of August and culminating in the opening days of September. It is proper that we should again call attention to the fact that the Earth's autumnal equinox, or time of perturbation growing out of the Sun's approach to the equator, is always, and sometimes severely, felt during the last half of August. This is indicated by the brace marked "Earth's autumnal equinox" in the August storm diagram, which extends back to the 18th of the month. The shifting of our summer southward, and the encroachment of the autumn northward, bring on an electrical and magnetic strain all over the globe, and great equinoctial storms often result weeks before the Sun passes over the equator in September. Some of the most destructive equatorial hurricanes that strike our southern seas and coasts appear in the month of August. There are no marked indications of such storms this month, but if we lived at sea level anywhere along the gulf and south Atlantic coasts, we should keep in mind the possibilities of danger and watch indications. Several times in the memory of those now living there has been great loss of human life, by overwhelming storms and tidal waves in August along the south coasts.

A RUNAWAY.

Mr. Fred. Faulkner, the well-known vocalist and bandsman, had an exciting experience, while driving in to town with S. A. McCartney's horse and delivery rig about five o'clock Tuesday evening. Mr. Faulkner was on his way home from Sam Gray's in Mono, where he had been doing some work, when one of the shafts broke. The horse made a jump and when Mr. Faulkner braced himself to pull it up the lines broke, causing him to tumble backwards over the seat and out between the wheels of the vehicle. He received a severe shaking up and had to be driven to his home afterwards. Fortunately there are no broken bones, but he is suffering from a badly sprained ankle. The frightened horse ran a considerable distance and made a wreck of the rig. The animal escaped without injury.

CONFESSION.

A Complete Story by Jack London in the Trail Magazine.

There is a woman in the State of Nevada to whom I once lied continuously, consistently, and shamelessly, for the matter of a couple of hours. I don't want to apologize to her. Far be it from me. But I do want to explain. Unfortunately, I do not know her name, much less her present address. If her eyes should chance on these lines I hope she will write to me.

It was in Reno, Nevada, in the summer of 1892. A lso, it was fair-time, and the town was filed with petty crooks to say nothing of a vast and hungry horde of hoboes. It was the hungry tramps that made the town a "hungry" town. They battered" the back doors of the homes of the citizens until the back doors became unresponsive.

A hard town for "scoffings" was what the hoboes called it at that time. I know that I missed many a meal, in spite of the fact that I could "throw my feet" with the next one when it came to "slamming a gate" for a "poke-out" or a "set-down," or hitting for a "light piece" on the street. Why, I was so hard put in that town one day that I gave the porter the slip and invaded the private car of some itinerant millionaire. The train started as I made the platform, and I headed for the aforesaid millionaire with the porter one jump behind, and reaching for me. It was a dead heat, for I reached the millionaire at the same instant that the porter reached me. I had no time for formalities. "Gimme a quarter to eat on," I blurted out. And as I live, that millionaire dipped into his pocket and gave me—just—precisely—a quarter. It is my conviction that he was so flabbergasted that he obeyed automatically, and it has been a matter of keen regret ever since, on my part, that I didn't ask him for a dollar. I know that I'd have got it. I swung off the platform of that private car with the porter manoeuvring to kick me in the face. He missed me. One is at a terrible disadvantage when trying to swing off the lowest step of a car and not break his neck on the right-of-way, with, at the same time, an irate Ethiopian on the platform above trying to land him in the face with a number eleven. But I got the quarter! I got it!

But to return to the woman to whom I lied so shamelessly. It was in the evening of my last day in Reno. I had been out to the race-track watching the ponies run, and had missed my dinner (i.e. the mid-day meal). I was hungry, and, furthermore, a committee of public safety had just been organized to rid the town of just such hungry mor-eat. Even youth will hesitate at an the tramps had been gathered in by John Law, and I could hear the sun-valleys of California calling to me over the cold crests of the Sierras. Two acts remained for me to perform before I shook the dust of Reno from my feet. One was to catch the blind baggage on the west-bound overland that night. The other was first to get something to eat. Even youth will hesitate at an all-night ride, on an empty stomach, outside a train that is tearing the atmosphere through the snow-sheds, tunnels, and eternal snows of heaven-aspiring mountains.

But that something to eat was a hard proposition. I was "turned down" at a dozen houses. Sometimes I received insulting remarks, and was informed of the barred domicile that should be mine if I had my just deserts. The worst of it was that such assertions were only too true. That was why I was pulling west that night. John Law was abroad in the town, seeking eagerly for the hungry and homeless, for by such was his barred domicile tenanted.

At other houses the doors were slammed in my face, cutting short my politely and humbly couched request for something to eat. At one house they did not open the door. I stood on the porch and knocked, and they looked out at me through the window. They even held out a sturdy little boy aloft so that he could see over the shoulders of his elders the tramp who wasn't going to get anything to eat at their house

It began to look as if I should be compelled to go to the very poor for my food. The very poor constitute the last sure resource of the hungry tramp. The very poor can always be depended upon. They never turn away the hungry. Time and again, all over the United States, have I been refused food by the big house on the hill, and always have I received food from the little shack down by the creek or marsh, with its broken windows stuffed with rags and its tired-faced mother broken with labour. Oh, you charity-mongers! Go to the poor and learn, for the poor alone are the charitable. They neither give nor withhold from their excess. They have no excess. They give, and they never withhold from what they need for themselves, and very often from what they cruelly need for themselves. A bone to the dog is not charity. Charity is the bone shared with the dog when you are just as hungry as the dog.

There was one house in particular where I was turned down that evening. The porch windows opened on the dining-room, and through them I saw a man eating pie—a big meat pie. I stood in the open door, and while he talked with me he went on eating. He was prosperous, and out of his prosperity had been bred resentment against his less fortunate brothers.

He cut short my request for something to eat, snapping out: "I don't believe you want to work."

Now this was irrelevant. I hadn't said anything about work. The topic of conversation I had introduced was "food." In fact, I didn't want to work. I wanted to take the west-bound overland that night.

"You wouldn't work if you had a chance," he bullied.

I glanced at his meek-faced wife, and knew that but for the presence of this Cerberus I'd have a whack at that meat pie myself. But Cerberus sopped himself in the pie, and I saw that I must placate him if I were to get a share of it. So I sighed to myself and accepted his work-morality.

"Of course I want work," I bluffed.

"Don't believe it," he snorted.

"Try me," I answered, warming to the bluff.

"All right," he said. "Come to the corner of blank and blank streets—I have forgotten the address—"tomorrow morning—you know where that burned building is—and I'll put you to work tossing bricks."

"All right sir, I'll be there."

He grunted and went on eating. I waited. After a couple of minutes he looked up with an I-thought-you-were-gone expression, and demanded:

"Well?"

"I—I am waiting for something to eat," I said gently.

"I knew you wouldn't work!" he roared.

He was right, of course; but his conclusion must have been reached by mindreading, for his logic wouldn't bear it out. But the beggar at the door must be humble, so I accepted hishis morality.

"You see, I am hungry now," I said, still gently. "To-morrow morning I shall be hungrier. Think how hungry I shall be when I have tossed bricks all day without anything to eat. Now if you will give me something to eat, I'll be in great shape for those bricks."

He considered my plea gravely, at the same time going on eating, while his wife nearly trembled into propitiatory speech, but refrained.

"I'll tell you what I'll do," he said, between mouthfuls. "You come to work to-morrow, and in the middle of the day I'll advance you enough for your dinner. That will show whether you are in earnest or not."

"In the meantime——," I began; but he interrupted.

"If I gave you something to eat now I'd never see you again. Oh, I know your kind. Look at me. I owe no man. I have never descended so low as to ask anyone for food. I have always earned my food. The trouble with you is that you are idle and dissolute. I can see it in your face. I have worked and been honest. I have made myself what I am. And you can do the same, if you work and are honest."

"Like you?" I queried.

Alas! no ray of humor had ever penetrated the sombre, work-sodden soul of that man.

"Yes, like me," he answered.

"All of us?" I queried.

"Yes, all of you," he answered, conviction vibrating in his voice.

"But if we all became like you," I said, "allow me to point out that there'd be nobody to toss bricks for you."

I swear there was a flicker of a smile in his wife's eyes. As for him, he was aghast—but whether at the awful possibility of a reformed humanity that would not enable him to get anybody to toss bricks for him, or at my impudence, I shall never know.

"I'll not waste words on you," he roared. "Get out of here, you ungrateful whelp!"

I scraped my feet to advertise my intention of going, and queried:

"And I don't get anything to eat?"

He arose suddenly to his feet. He was a large man. I was a stranger in a strange land, and John Law was looking for me. I went away hurriedly. "But why ungrateful?" I asked myself as I slammed his gate. "What the dickens did he give me to be ungrateful about?" I looked back. I could still see him through the window. He had returned to his pie.

By this time I had lost heart. I passed by many houses without venturing up to them. All houses looked alike, and none of them looked "good." After walking half a dozen blocks I shook off my despondency and gathered up my "nerve." This begging for food was all a game, and if I didn't like the cards I could always call for a new deal. I made up my mind to tackle the next house. I approached it in the deepening twilight, going around to the kitchen door.

I knocked softly, and when I saw the kind face of the middle-aged woman who answered, as by inspiration came to me the "story" I was to tell. For know that on his ability to tell a good story depends the success of the beggar. First of all, and on the instant, the beggar must "size up" his victim. After that, he must tell a story that will appeal to the peculiar personality and temperament of that particular victim. And right here arises the great difficulty; in the instant that he is sizing up the victim he must begin his story. Not a minute is allowed for preparation. As in a lightning flash he must divine the nature of the victim and conceive a tale that will hit home. The successful beggar must be an artist. He must create spontaneously and instantaneously and not on a theme selected from the plentitude of his own imagination, but on the theme he reads in the face of the person who opens the door, be it man, woman, or child, sweet or crabbed, generous or miserly, good-natured or cantankerous, Jew or Gentile, black or white, race-prejudiced or brotherly, provincial or universal, or whatever else it may be. I have often thought that to this training of my tramp days is due much of my success as a story-writer. In order to get the food whereby I lived, I was compelled to tell tales that rang true. At the back door, out of inexorable necessity, is developed the convincingness and sincerity laid down by all authorities on the art of the short story. Also I quite believe it was my tramp apprenticeship that made a realist out of me. Realism constitutes the only goods one can exchange at the kitchen door for grub.

After all, art is only consummate artfulness, and artfulness saves many a "story." I remember lying in a police station at Winnipeg, Manitoba. I was bound west over the Canadian Pacific. Of course, the police wanted my story, and I gave it to them—on the spur of the moment. They were land-lubbers, in the heart of the continent, and what better story for them than a sea story? They could never trip me up on that. So I told a fearful tale of my life on the ship Glenmore. (I had once seen the Glennmore lying at anchor in San Francisco Bay.)

I was an English apprentice. I said. And they said that I didn't talk like an English boy. It was necessary for me to create on the instant. I had been born and reared in the United States. On the death of my parents I had been sent to England to my grandparents. It was they who had apprenticed me on the Glenmore. I hope the captain of the Glenmore will forgive me, for I gave him a character that night in the Winnipeg police-station. Such cruelty! Such brutality! Such diabolical ingenuity of torture! It explained why I had deserted the Glenmore at Montreal.

But why was I in the middle of Canada going west, when my grandparents lived in England? Promptly I created a married sister who lived in California. She would take care of me. I developed at length her loving nature. But they were not done with me, those hard-hearted policemen. I had joined the Glenmore in England. In the two years that had elapsed before my desertion at Montreal, what had the Glenmore done and where had she been? And thereat I took those landlubbers around the world with me. Buffeted by pounding seas and stung with flying spray, they fought a typhoon with me off the coast of Japan. They loaded and unloaded cargo with me in all the ports of the Seven Seas. I took them to India, and Rangoon, and China, and had them hammer ice with me around the Horn, and at last came to moorings at Montreal.

Then they said, "Wait a moment," and one policeman went forth into the night while I warmed myself at the stove, all the while racking my brains for the trap they were going to spring on me.

I groaned to myself when I saw him come in the door at the heels of the policeman. No gipsy prank had thrust those tiny hoops of gold through the ears; no prairie winds had beaten that skin into wrinkled leathes; nor had snow-drift and mountain-slope put in his walk that reminiscent roll. And in those eyes, when he looked at me, I saw the unmistakeable sunwash of the sea. Here was a theme, alas! with half a dozen policemen to watch me read—I who had never sailed the China seas, nor been around the Horn, nor looked with my eyes on India and Rangoon.

I was desperate. Disaster stalked before me incarnate in the form of that gold ear-ringed, weather-beaten, son of the sea. Who was he? What was he? I must solve him ere he solved me. I must make a new orientation, or else those wicked policemen would orientate me to a cell, a police-court, and more cells. If he questioned me first, before I knew how much he knew, I was lost.

But did I betray My desperate plight to those lynx-eyed guardians of the public welfare of Winnipeg? Not I. I met that aged sailorman, glad-eyed and beaming, with all the simulated relief at deliverance that a drowning man would display on finding a life-preserver in his last despairing clutch. Here was a man who understood and who would verify my true story to the faces of those sleuth-hounds who did not understand—or, at least, such was what I endeavored to play-act. I seized upon him. I volleyed him with questions about myself. Before my judges I would prove the character of my saviour before he saved me.

He was a kindly sailorman, an "easy mark." The policemen grew impatient while I questioned him. At last one of them told me to shut up. I shut up, but while I remained shut up I was busy creating, busy sketching the scenario of the next act. I had learned enough to go on with. He was a Frenchman. He had sailed always on French merchant vessels, with the one exception of a voyage on a "lime-juicer." And, last of all—blessed fact!—he had not been on the sea for twenty years.

The policemen urged him on to examine me.

"You called in at Rangoon?" he queried.

I nodded. "We put our third mate ashore there. Fever."

If he had asked me what kind of fever, I should have answered, "Enteric," though for the life of me I didn't know what enteric was. But he didn't ask me. Instead, his next question was:

"And how is Rangoon?"

"All right. It rained a whole lot when we were there."

"Did you get shore leave?"

"Sure," I answered; "three of us apprentices went ashore together."

"Do you remember the temple?"

"Which temple?" I parried.

"The big one, at the top of the stairway."

If I remembered that temple I knew I'd have to describe it. The gulf yawned for me.

I shook my head.

"You can see it from all over the harbor," he informed me. "You don't need shore leave to see that temple."

(To be continued.)

Mr. C. A. Irvine, who went west lately, has joined the staff of the Phoenix a daily paper published at Saskatoon. At a meeting held on July 14th at Vonda. Mr. Irvine appeared on the platform as a speaker along with the member for Vonda and Hon. Walter Scott, in whose honor the demonstration was held. In the language of the classic east this is "going some" for a tenderfoot even if he were ex-warden of Peel. Kit's old friends are laying wagers at the Senate that he will be a member of the Sask. legislature next year.—Peel Banner.

Badly Hurt In Thresher

Blood poison set in—Great suffering—Cure effected by DR. A. W. CHASE'S OINTMENT

Mrs. O. Hopkins, St. George, Ont., writes:—"I feel like shouting the praises of Dr. Chase's Ointment. While threshing grain, my son got badly hurt. One of the men who was pitching sheaves, missed the sheaf and ran the prongs of the fork into my son's leg. He did not take much notice of it and in a day or two it got sore and very itchy and blood poison set in. We did everything for it but it would heal one place and break out at another and kept on this way for three months.

"Finally I thought of Dr. Chase's Ointment and in a week's time we noticed a wonderful change. By the use of three boxes he was completely cured and the wounds healed up. There has not been a sign of a spot on him since."

Wherever there is itching or irritation of the skin or a sore that refuses to heal you can apply Dr. Chase's Ointment with every assurance that the results will be prompt and satisfactory. 60 cents a box, at all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Toronto. Write for free copy Dr. Chase's Recipes.

ONE REASON WHY.

The Canadian National Can Put on the Best Performance on the Continent.

Why can the Canadian National put on a finer grand stand performance than any other exhibition on earth? One reason is that it can accommodate a bigger grand stand crowd than any other. One night last year there were 28,000 people in the grand stand and on the lawn in front of it. Just imagine — as many people as there are men, women and children in Galt and Guelph combined.

MUST USE NEW BOOKS.

Regulations for the use in public schools of formerly authorized text books that have been superseded by new editions of improved books are given in an official announcement issued by the department of education. Any of these editions which are used in any school during the year ending July 1, 1910, and the continued use of which is recommended by resolution of the board of school trustees on or before the re-opening of the schools in August or September, 1910, as the case may be, shall be deemed authorized for such school at the maximum prices indicated, until their authorization is cancelled by the minister of education.

People who at this time of year would like to have a few weeks' holidays, but are unable to afford the time or the price, have this consolation—that they will be less in need of a rest later on than many of those whom they now regard with envy.

Earl, the youngest child of Peter Cantlon, of Bowling Green, swallowed some water off a fly poison pad on Thursday and was immediately taken violently ill. He was rushed to Grand Valley, where the Dr. worked over him for three hours before pronouncing him out of danger.

A town in Virginia called Staunton has for the past two years been managing its affairs on a new and original plan. It became disgusted with the old ward system and the grafting and muddling associated with it, and abolished the system of appointing committees from the town council to manage the various civic departments. Instead of that, it appointed a general manager, who was given entire charge of all the executive work of the town, and clothed with authority to make contracts and perform administrative work instead of committees. The result has worked out most satisfactorily. The general manager is paid a salary, is held responsible for inefficient management, and is expected to devote his entire time to his duties as a salaried manager. It is simply another form of government by commission. All over the English speaking world people are growing tired of the old, cumbersome and inefficient system now in vogue of civic administration by inefficient volunteer councillors. It is only common sense to conclude that we get what we pay for, and no more, and so long as we depend upon volunteer councillors, so long must we expect unsatisfactory results.—Municipal World.

The attachment and faithfulness of an intelligent dog is wonderful. On Monday last an old man, Henry Bowen, died in Port Huron. He was found dead sitting in his chair, and at his feet sat his faithful dog, resting his head upon his master's knees. The animal, knowing something was wrong, had called the attention of the neighbors by his howling, and continued to gaze into the face of his dead master and howl, until he was pulled away.

Each grate bar has three sides—long wear

When only one side of a grate bar is continually next to the fire all the wear is concentrated on that one side. The life of the grate bar is thus naturally just one-third as long as when the wear is distributed on three sides.

That explains why Sunshine grates have three lives. Each of the four grate bars has three sides. Each time the ashes are "rocked down" (no shaking with Sunshine) the side next to the fire can be changed. Thus the life of the grates is greatly prolonged.

When desired, the heavy bull dog teeth on the grates will seize hold of clinkers, grind them up, and drop the particles into the ash-pan.

How to Tell if Your Hair is Diseased

Even if you have a luxuriant head of hair, you may want to know whether it is in a healthy condition or not. 98 per cent. of the people need a hair tonic.

Pull a hair out of your head, if the bulb at the end of the root is white and shrunken, it proves that the hair is diseased, and requires prompt treatment if its loss would be avoided. If the bulb is pink and full, the hair is healthy.

We want everyone whose hair requires treatment to try Rexall "93" Hair Tonic. We promise that it shall not cost anything if it does not give satisfactory results. It is designed to overcome dandruff, relieve scalp irritation, to stimulate the roots, tighten the hair already in the head, grow hair and cure baldness.

It is because of what Rexall "93" Hair Tonic has done and our sincere faith in its goodness that we want you to try it at our risk. Two sizes, 50c. and $1.00. Sold only at our store—The Rexall Store. T. F. & T. J. Brown.

RICHARD PARSONS.

On Tuesday morning about two o'clock the death of Mr. Richard Parsons occurred at his home, Frederick Street. Mr. Parsons had been in failing health for many months but was able to be down at his place of business a few days before his death. On Monday he suffered a paralytic stroke, from the effects of which he did not rally. He was a native of England and came to Canada with his father and the other members of the family more than thirty years ago. After his father's death he took over the management of the butcher business so long connected with his name. He was 49 years of age and is survived by a widow, who was before her marriage Miss Sarah J. Glenn, of this town. Mr. Parsons was a man who during his long residence in the town enjoyed the respect and esteem of everyone who knew him. He was honorable, kindly and charitable and was a good citizen in every way. His long illness was borne with Christian fortitude and his death is universally regretted. The funeral took place this afternoon to Brampton cemetery, a large number of friends and acquaintances following him to the grave.—Brampton Conservator.

Postoffice box holders should remember that if the postmaster makes a mistake putting mail into wrong boxes, the postal regulations require people to examine their mail before leaving the office and should they find a piece not addressed to them they must return it at once or be liable to a fine of $200. The postmaster is exonerated from the mistake.

A candidate for office in Minnesota, where there is a large Norwegian vote, says the Milwaukee Herald, went to a friend who is a Norwegian and said: "I've got to make a speech to your people to-night and I wish you would give me a live snappy line of Norwegian to end up my speech. Write me out something so I can memorize it and make a hit." "Alright," said the friend, "I'll send it to you." Next day he sent this: "Vil derealle sam men vaere so smille at gaand og have lidet forfis kning paa nin bekosking i salonen nedeunber." The candidate made his speech to a packed hall. At the close of the speech he delivered his line of Norwegian with great declamatory effect. The audience received the line with a yell of delight and began to rush for the door. "Well," said the candidate, "that was a hit. What did I say to them?" "You asked them all to go down to the saloon and have a drink at your expense," replied the friend.

DEAFNESS CANNOT BE CURED

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by Catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

TIRED, ACHING FEET.

How annoying to have the feet tired and aching, sore and chafed about the time you want to take a good long walk. You can get a world of comfort by using Dr. Chase's Ointment when the feet give you trouble. It heals and soothes the skin, makes it soft and natural and prevents corns and bunions.

The creamery, recently established in the old brewery building at Salem, is proving to be a successful business venture, and is receiving the patronage of the surrounding country. For the first three weeks of this month, the shipments of butter averaged 4000 lbs. per week.

Whit Bynum, the young gambler and spendthrift from the United States, who lay in wait in a bathroom at the King Edward Hotel, Toronto, one night last week, and murderously attacked a guest, W. L. Page, of Chicago, in an effort to get some money, has been sentenced to serve three years in Kingston penitentiary.

Mr. Panabaker has just finished a nice cabinet group of the Minto Township Council for 1910. The Township Fathers are a rather handsome lot of men. Township and Town Councils should have a group picture taken every year, and have a nicely framed copy hung up in the Council Chamber. Posterity would appreciate such thoughtfulness. An ancient photograph of this kind is a valuable article.

We do not wish people to infer that Shelburne is a hamlet in the centre of a forest, when we state that a large black bear was seen last week by Louis Jeffers, in the woods on lot 5, con. 1, Melancthon, about two miles or over from town. This is no doubt the same bear that was seen by Major Gabriel, John Large, John Sproule and John Harrison a couple of years ago. It caused no little excitement then as John Sproule and John Harrison can testify and before many days we may have something interesting in the bear line for our readers.—Free Press

THE BANNER

THURSDAY, AUGUST 4, 1910

The Tottenham Sentinel has changed hands. Mr. L. C. Hughes, who has run the paper for a number of years, has sold the plant and business to Mr. R. A. Semple, who took charge last week. Heretofore, the Sentinel, which is one of the oldest newspapers in Simcoe County, has been styled the Cardwell Sentinel. The new proprietor has changed the name to the Tottenham Sentinel. Mr. Semple is a young man of considerable push and ability and as he has a practical knowledge of the difficulties of the newspaper career, he should be able to steer clear of the shoals and make a success of his venture. He has the Banner's best wishes and this journal trusts that the Sentinel will receive the hearty support that the home newspaper is entitled to from its constituency.

Have you ever taken time to consider the important part that preparation plays in the struggles of life. Victories are frequently due not so much to the strength of the individual in the time of conflict, as to the hours, or days, or it may be years, spent in patient and persevering preparation. While there are many instances where the fortunes of the individual turn upon a lucky chance, success is nevertheless not usually attributable to accident. Men reap pretty nearly as they have sown. The man who has been diligent in equipping himself for the battles of life is usually in a position to make the best use of whatever opportunities may offer. The man who is not prepared either misses the opportunity altogether, or if he perceives it lacks the preparedness to enable him to seize upon the advantage that it offers. As a writer has aptly expressed it: "Nothing is lost upon the man who is bent upon growth; nothing wasted on one who is always preparing for his work and his life by keeping eyes, mind and heart open to nature, men, books, experience.

ENTRANCE EXAMINATIONS.

The feeling aroused over the unsatisfactory character of the recent Entrance examinations has had the effect of directing public attention to the defects in the existing methods of ascertaining the proficiency of candidates and has been the means of bringing forth numerous suggestions for the improvement of the present system. As a means of determining proficiency, set examinations are bound to be unsatisfactory at the best. To begin with it is impossible to set a paper on any subject, that will be an adequate test of the work done by the candidates during the year. Again the examiners have no means of taking account of the diligence with which the candidates applied themselves to their studies during the school term. It is surely not unreasonable to hold that diligence in study should receive some recognition. The diligent, painstaking student may not have the mentality that his more brilliant, but less studious, classmate possesses, but it is very often the plodder who does the more thorough and more lasting work. Slowness of perception or of constructive ability may prevent him from making a favorable showing upon the examination paper. Perhaps he knows the work just as well as any of the candidates, but in the limited time at his disposal he is unable to state his answers in a way that will meet with the approval of the examiners. Yet in spite of this apparent unfitness, he may be and often is better grounded in the work taken up during the term, than the brilliant student, who because of his cleverness has been able to make a more favorable showing, although he has perhaps not applied himself so closely to his work. Then there is the large class of candidates, who do not do themselves justice because of anxiety and nervousness. Others are delicately constituted and do not do their best under the ordeal of an examination. The candidate who fails through any of these reasons is deserving of a large measure of sympathy. It is no light matter to spend a year or longer in faithful and conscientious study and then be plucked because of a physical or mental condition over which the candidate has little or no control. It is of course a difficult matter to devise a remedy, but we are convinced that more equitable results would be obtained were more importance given to monthly examinations and the reports of the teachers upon the work, studiousness and general proficiency of the candidates. These reports and the results of term examinations should be of great assistance in arriving at a just estimate of the fitness of the thousands of candidates who write on the various examinations every midsummer.

There are at the present time no less than seven vacant charges within the bounds of the Presbytery of Orangeville. The following is the list, with the names and addresses of the interim moderators:—Tarbert, etc., Rev. J. R. Bell, Laurel; Corbetton, etc., Rev. J. Buchanan, Dundalk; Mono Mills, etc., Rev. H. Matheson, Caledon East; Camilla, etc., Rev. W. M. Morris, Orangeville; Waldemar, etc., Rev. R. S. Scott, Hillsburg; Grand Valley, etc., Rev. J. A. McKenzie, Shelburne; Maxwell, etc., Rev. W. C. HOW THE BLIND READ AND WRITE.

Accompanying his annual letter, in which he asks the readers of the Banner to send him the names and post-office addresses of any boys or girls, known to them, whose eyesight is so defective that they cannot attend the Public Schools with advantage, Principal Gardiner, of the Ontario Institution for the Education of the Blind, at Brantford, sends us a card on which he has printed, without ink, the letters used by the blind in their reading. These letters are composed of raised dots or points, arranged in two horizontal rows, and the combinations of points that have been contrived to represent the various literary, numeral and musical characters are most ingenious. Point letters are much easier to read with the fingers than line letters, and blind children soon learn to read and write words, figures and music signs, the writing being done with a steel stylus and a brass frame which they call a slate. The School for the Blind is maintained by the Ontario Government as a part of our free school system, under the supervision of the Minister of Education, and the Principal will promptly answer any letter of inquiry concerning the school and its work.

POLICE COURT.

Murdock McLeod, who is said to hail from the County of Bruce, was brought before Police Magistrate Pattullo last week charged with breaking into the waiting room and ticket offices of the C.P.R. station at Erin and stealing a razor belonging to the station agent, and two pocket books which were empty. The accused was also charged with breaking into the Erin section tool house and taking the section handcar which he used to transport himself from Erin to Cataract, afterwards breaking into the station house at the latter place. On the morning of July 23rd, a northbound freight arrived at Cataract about 6 o'clock and upon going to the station Conductor Carson found McLeod sitting in the ticket office apparently asleep. The conductor had considerable difficulty arousing the intruder who was apparently stupified from the effects of liquor. On making a search of his clothing, he was found to have several flasks of whiskey in his pockets. Carson brought McLeod to Orangeville and handed him over to Constable Ewing. When he appeared in Court the accused man elected to be tried by P. M. Pattullo. Constables Wright and Hearslip looked after the case for the railway company. McLeod, who is said to have a bad record, admitted that he had spent two years in the Central Prison. The prisoner was undefended. The Magistrate will probably pronounce sentence to-day.

John Funsten, a local laboring man, was up before P. M. Pattullo on Saturday last, charged by Sabatina Colechi, the foreman of the quarries south of the C.P.R station, with stealing a wrench, a pair of sweat pads, a crowbar and some shovels from the Quarry Company. After taking some evidence the case was adjourned until Saturday. C. R. McKeown is defending Funsten and W. J. L. McKay prosecuted on behalf of the Crown.

On Monday, Robert Dismond, an employee of the Superior Portland Cement Company, was charged by Mr. George McIntyre, with maliciously cutting the large belt that runs the rotaries in the cement plant. After taking some evidence, the hearing of the charge was adjourned until Saturday, the 6th inst. Mr. C. R. McKeown is defending Dismond.

LEGISLATIVE GRANTS TO SCHOOLS.

The rural schools of the County of Dufferin will receive legislative grants to the amount of $6575.20 this year. The general grant, based on salaries and certificates, amounts to $5466.20, apportioned as follows:

Amaranth—Salaries $851.20, certificates $175, total $1,026.20.

East Garafraxa—Salaries $539, certificates $85, total $624.

East Luther—Salaries $514.80, certificates $90, total $604.80.

Melancthon—Salaries $1088, certificates $115, total $1203.

Mono—Salaries $924.40, certificates $90, total $1014.40.

Mulmur—Salaries $917.80, certificates $75, total $992.80.

The grants, based on equipment and accommodation, amount to $1110 being an average of $12 or thereabouts a school.

SHOULD PROVIDE ENTRANCE

The people of Melville Cross and travellers who have occasion to take or leave the train at that point have good reason for serious complaint against the C.P.R. for its neglect to provide an entrance to the railway station. The Brampton Conservator describes the situation tersely in last week's issue. It says:

"Passengers are compelled to walk 200 yards along the track from the road carrying whatever trunks and baggage they require. The Company has property which could easily be opened out and the people have a right to demand better treatment."

The inconvenience to which people using the station are subjected will be easily understood from the above. In addition to the inconvenience, there is bound to be positive discomfort in wet or stormy weather. It is certainly the duty of the railway company to open the road.

—Your eyes will appreciate the ease and comfort derived from proper-fitting glasses, so if you have eye trouble don't fail to consult S. L. Taube at Brown's Drug Store on Thursday, August 18th.

WON SECOND PRIZE.

Copies of the Montreal Witness are to hand containing reports of that newspaper's boys' model aeroplane competition held in connection with the recent aviation meet in the Royal City. We notice that Master Dudley L. Smith, the 15 year old son of Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Smith, of Toronto, was one of the successful competitors. Master Dudley tied with Robert McGowan, of Sydney, N. S., for the second prize of $25. The judges found it impossible to come to a decision between the two competitors and therefore decided to award 2 second prizes of $25 each instead of the one prize of the same amount. Master Dudley is a grandson of Mr. Geo. Zilliax, Sr., of the Queen's Hotel, and is well-known in Orangeville having frequently visited his grandparents here. The judging was done by Count de Lesseps. Mr. J. A. McCurdy and other aviation experts who were greatly impressed with the skill and ingenuity shown by the youthful competitors. Great interest was taken in the competition and entries were received from all parts of Canada from British Columbia to Nova Scotia and even from Newfoundland. Some of the boys experienced the bad luck that occasionally befalls aviators and found at the last moment that they would be unable to send in their entries. One Belleville boy, for instance, who had arranged to bring two models, one of his own and one made by another boy, having planned to use the same motor for both, made a successful flight and then on second trial, smashed his machine so badly in the last day of entry that he was out of it, and this was only one of many like experiences. That the work was done seriously was shown by the fact that some models were not sent in, their makers being unable to get their designs patented in the short time allowed.

EVERYTHING SOLD.

There was a fairly large attendance at the auction sale on Tuesday afternoon of the fine herd of Herefords belonging to the estate of the late W. H. Hunter. Most of those present were stockmen, who had come to the sale for the express purpose of buying and the bidding was therefore comparatively spirited. The entire herd—60 head in all—was disposed of at an average prize of about $75, which means that the first day's sale realized in the neighborhood of $4500. One bull brought $225 and cows sold for over $100 each. The horses, grade cattle and other farm stock and implements were sold yesterday afternoon. Auctioneers Jas. A. Patterson, of Orangeville, and George McAllister, of Shelburne, conducted the sale.

LAWN SOCIAL AT CAMILLA.

The members of Camilla Women's Institute purpose holding a lawn social on Mr. Alex. Mann's grounds in the village on Friday evening, August 12th. The proceeds of the social will be donated to the Orangeville Hospital Fund. An entertaining programme is being prepared and will include music by Camilla Quartotte, the Misses Marshall, Miss Patterson, of Shelburne, Miss Henry and Miss B. Curry, banjo solos by Mr. Rich. Henry, recitations by Miss Maggie White, an address by Mrs. (Rev.) T. R. White, Laurel, and short addresses by Revs. J. R. Bell, T. R. White and W. M. Morris, Dr. R. N. Kyles, J. R. Gillespie and A. D. McKitrick. A feature of the evening will be the Fortune Telling Booth. Lunch will be served on the European plan.

How would you like your bread baked under a dripping cow just out of the rain, with mud on her teats and urine spattering on the floor now and then, causing some drops to fall into the dough, not to mention flies, hairs, and occasional bits of manure? How long would you board where the bread was kneaded that way? Yet this bread would be wholesome and good, compared to the average pail of milk a few hours after it is drawn. The bacteria in the bread would be destroyed by baking; in the milk they flourish, finding it an ideal culture medium. Were it not that milk is essentially such a good and wholesome food, and so difficult to replace in the dietary, the conditions under which it is drawn and handled would be enough to make one swear-off ever tasting another drop, unless he knew how the cows were milked. Realizing the danger and the revolting nature of average dairy practice, can we not exercise such pains in milking as will at least exclude the "rough of the dirt" —The Farmers' Advocate.

In view of the near approach of the fall fair season, the following extract from an article in last week's issue of the Farmers' Advocate is of more than passing interest:—"To be successful a fair must pay; not for this year alone, but for a series of many successive years. Probably every essential of a successful fair is implied in that one statement. To pay it must attract the people, must therefore serve its constituency, and so be a true factor in the upbuilding of its community. The fair must be centrally and conveniently located. The management must understand its people, not simply to cater to them, but rather to know wherein they need upbuilding. The directors must be capable of directing that educative policy of their fair. This does not mean to entirely abolish the amusing features; for to many pleasure and business are at this time combined, and many attractions and amusements are instructive. But it does mean the discriminating selection of such features and the abandonment of that policy which admits every applicant for privileges, providing he pays his license fee. Amusements and attractions may and should be clean, wholesome and educative. If they are not, they make for the ultimate failure of that show."

A GRAIN OF COMFORT.

Boards of Entrance Examiners May Use Their Discretion About Passing Candidates Who Failed in One Subject.

In view of the large proportion of candidates for the entrance examinations who failed to make the required number of marks to get them through this year, on account of the alleged "trickiness" of some of the questions, the Minister of Education of Ontario has authorized Boards of Examiners throughout the Province to grant at their discretion, for the present year, pass standing to candidates who have made less than forty per cent. in any one subject, but who have made sixty per cent. of the aggregate marks.

Thus a high standing made by a candidate in one or more subjects is to compensate for a standing of lower than forty per cent. in any other one subject, provided that the total number of marks obtained by him is sixty per cent. or over. It was the examination in arithmetic which this year was regarded as being composed largely of catch questions, which was responsible for the failure of a large number of candidates.

The following is the official announcement on the subject, given out by Dr. A. H. U. Colquhoun, Deputy Minister of Education:

"The Minister of Education authorizes Boards of Examiners to grant at their discretion, for the present year, pass standing to candidates who have made less than forty per cent. of the marks in any one subject, of the aggregate marks."

THE JURY'S VERDICT.

Inexperience and Incompetency of Train Crews Contributed to Deaths of McDevitt and Hunter.

The jury empanelled by Coroner Grant to enquire into the deaths of John McDevitt and John Hunter, the two railway men, who were killed in the C.N.R. yards at Beaverton a week ago Saturday evening, spent several hours Wednesday night deliberating over their verdict. Their finding charges the train crew with inexperience and incompetency, and states that this factor contributed to the sad fatality. The jury expressed the opinion that the company should be severely censured for sending out a train in charge of a crew of green men. The verdict was as follows:—

"That John McDevitt and John Hunter came to their deaths as the result of a collision on July 23rd between engine No. 241 and a passenger coach on the C.N.R. at the yards at Beaverton.

"We find that the deceased at the time of their deaths were riding on a tender of an engine contrary to the regulations of the railway and against the orders of the train crew and consequently at their own risk.

"We further find that the collision which resulted in the deaths of the said McDevitt and Hunter was caused by the inexperience and incompetency of the train crew sent out by the company with the defect in the air-brake on the engine.

"We are of the opinion that the C. N.R. are open to the most severe censure for the sending out of an entire train crew of inexperienced men."

ST. MARK'S GARDEN PARTY.

Notwithstanding the holiday and several counter attractions, there was a large turnout to St. Mark's Church garden party on the church grounds last Wednesday evening. The ladies of the church served the usual first-class supper during the early part of the evening. The after programme, which was of an enjoyable character, consisted of recitations by Mrs. Dorrington, of Alton, who gave more than ordinary pleasure to her hearers, duets, solos and Scotch songs by Masters Waldo and Teddy Dorrington and Jimmie Peacock, recitations by Miss Ina Taylor, of Mono Mills, solos by Mr. Percy Harding, selections by the Citizens' Band and a short address by Rev. B. L. Davies. The rector, Rev. G. A. Rix occupied the chair. The proceeds were about $70.

AN OLD RESIDENT GONE.

Mr. Matthew Varey, an old and respected resident of Mono and Adjala, passed away at his home, lot 9, con. 2, in the latter township, on Monday. He was 89 years of age, and is survived by a family of grown-up sons and daughters. The funeral was held to St. John's Cemetery, 7th line, Mono, yesterday afternoon.

NELLIE E. MATTHEWS.

After a brief illness Miss Nellie E. Matthews died in Spokane, Wash., on Sunday, July 10th, aged 42 years. Miss Matthews was the youngest daughter of Mrs. Sarah S. Matthews, formerly of Acton, and was living with her sister, Mrs. (Rev.) Chas. A. Cook, going with the family from Bloomfield, N.J., in April of last year. She had gone west for the benefit of her health and for a time was greatly helped. During the last month or two before her last sickness however, she had lost considerably in strength and succumbed to an attack of pleurisy. Miss Matthews was a sincere Christian, unobtrusive, but doing quietly many acts of genuine Christian service. Mrs. Matthews, her mother, is at present in Orangeville.—Acton Free Press.

The deceased lady was a sister of Mr. Jas. A. Matthews, of this town.

—Are you deaf? If so we can make you hear with the Acousticon. S. L. Taube will gladly demonstrate this wonderful instrument at Brown's Drug Store on Thursday, August 18th.

One of the most serious problems of the day that is being considered by the clearest thinkers is how to exterminate potato bugs, grasshoppers and pollywigglers. Some suggest trapping them or using some bait wherewith to waylay them on their midnight carousals, when all the earth is hushed in peace and tranquil slumber is the lot of the weary sons of men and daughters of Eve. It is appalling to think while mankind, all unsuspecting of all danger and menace to their property, should awake to the terrible reality of being robbed of property earned by the sweat of their brows, their hired men and their feet. Surely it would not be an impossibility to have the brutes trained to make an honest living instead of fooling away their time eating and destroying potato tops, which is indirectly identical to stealing the wholesome tubers out of the pot. Let something be done in the way of organizing an anti-bug society, for really if we live to see this pest thrive for a few years we shall be dead, but don't forget that at Mr. Mann's corner grocery the most poisonous of paris green can be bought very reasonably.

SUCCESSFUL STUDENTS.

Names of Candidates Who Passed Entrance to Normal Schools.

The results of the examination for entrance into the Normal Schools were announed on Tuesday. The certificates of successful candidates and the statements of marks of those who failed will be mailed to principals or inspectors in the course of a few days.

Successful candidates who desire to attend the coming session of the Normal schools are reminded that their applications for admission must be made to the Deputy Minister of Education not later than Tuesday, Sept. 6th. No student will be admitted who will not be at least eighteen years of age before Oct. 1st, for the Normal schools at Hamilton, London, Ottawa, Peterborough, Stratford and Toronto before the close of the session for the Normal school at North Bay.

For those applicants who are required to pass the September examinations in the prescribed lower school subjects, the session will begin on Tuesday, Sept. 20th, at 9 a.m. For applicants with the prescribed certificates from approved schools and for applicants belonging to grade A, it will begin on Monday, Sept. 26th, at 9 a.m. No applicant who is required to pass the September examination will be admitted without doing so. It would be well, therefore, for applicants to make certain of their status before the first mentioned date.

For full information regarding conditions of admission to a Normal school, applicants are referred to sections 4 and 5 of the syllabus, copies of which may be obtained by applying to the Deputy Minister of Education. No candidate will be admitted who does not comply fully with the conditions of these sections.

As in 1909, the appeal examiners have reread the papers of each candidate whose marks would in former years have justified an appeal. Where such a candidate has still failed his statement of marks will be stamped as reread and no further appeal will be allowed. In all other cases of failure appeals will not be refused, if made before Sept. 1st, and accompanied by the fee of $2.00. In view of all the precautions taken, however, it is most unlikely that such appeals would succeed.

The successful Dufferin County candidates are :—

C. M. Bremner, E. J. Davison, M. Gabriel, M. A. MacFarland, I. Pickering (honors), J. Richardson, J. B. Russell (honors), T. J. Simpson (honors), R. J. Spence, C. V. Statia, R. T. Teahean.

A STRANGE EXPERIENCE.

Peter Paxton, who lives near Tuam, Tecumseth township, has had a rather peculiar experience which he cannot account for. A neighbor, who had occasion to call at his home, found him lying on the bed with his eyes blackened and an ugly cut on the back of his head and another on his face, from which blood was issuing freely, he being in a semi-conscious condition. After arousing him, he found that the injured man could give no account of the affair other than he thought some person must have hit him, putting him out of business instantly, but did not remember seeing any person about the place previously. The neighbors are of the opinion that the wounds were caused by one of his horses, which had broken out of the stable and was loose in the yard, but Paxton does not credit this theory. His son and daughter who live with him were at Tottenham. Robbery was evidently not the motive, for some money and his watch in his pockets were undisturbed.

One Barrel of Flour Instead of Two

YES, in the old way there was one kind of flour for bread and another for pastry.

Now, OGILVIE'S ROYAL HOUSEHOLD FLOUR is an all around flour. It makes not only the very best bread but also the very best cakes, pies, biscuits, rolls, muffins, pop-overs, pancakes, dumplings, anything that you want to make or bake from flour.

"ROYAL HOUSEHOLD" saves money and trouble. Instead of having two barrels of flour in the house you can get along much better with one. And you can be certain that it is always uniform—will always come out right whether for Bread or Pastry.

ROYAL HOUSEHOLD is made from the finest grade of wheat in the world, Manitoba Red Fyfe wheat, and milled by the very finest machinery, in mills that are a model of cleanliness.

"ROYAL HOUSEHOLD" costs a trifle more by the barrel than ordinary flour but this trifle extra proves real economy when the loaves are counted. For "ROYAL HOUSEHOLD" goes farther than ordinary flour—farther in actual quantity of baked product.

Even if "ROYAL HOUSEHOLD" cost a great deal more than ordinary flour it would be well worth it for it is more nourishing.

You can't afford to buy impoverished flour at any price. You can't afford to skimp on health. And you do skimp on health when you buy flour just because it costs less than "ROYAL HOUSEHOLD". 25

THE NARROW WAY.

Vera Reading.

Far away in a northern land, where the sea runs deep among the purple mountains, and clear, cold burns hurry down through the heather, to the waters whence they came; there, on a day of romping wind and infinite sunlit blue. Nature taught two of her children, a boy and a girl, one of her ever illuminating lessons.

The boy and girl in their moorland wanderings had reached a deep ravine, the bed of a noisy stream and waterfall of some hundred feet. The fern-hung cliffs rose sheer on either side, and it seemed impossible to cross.

After some search, the boy discovered a narrow plank, used probably by the shepherds, and spanning the difficult cleft at its easiest spot. Without a thought, the light hearted lad bounded across the airy bridge, and shouted to his companion to follow.

The girl, just as fearlessly placed her foot on the plank and stepped out to the middle. Here she suddenly paused and looked down at the cold foaming chasm below. The foothold seemed very frail and insecure, and the roar of the falls confused her senses. Faint and giddy she swayed and clutched at the empty air, and a cry strangled in her throat.

The boy saw her and his heart tightened. "Don't look down," he shouted. "Step out, and look up!"

With an effort the girl drew herself together, fixed her eyes on the boy's face and outstretched hand, and stepped bravely into safety.

"You should never look down," cautioned the boy later, as they sat recovering from their little fright, "It's a bad thing to do in a place like that, you lose your head and get dizzy."

"It is hard not to," replied the girl, "though you managed well enough."

"Yes," said the boy, "but you see, I did not think about the hole below; the bridge was safe enough, it was just a case of keeping on it and reaching the other side."

The girl, some years later, in the journey of life, found herself on just such a narrow way. In the midst of her difficulty, the windy day on the sweet blue moorlands came back to her memory, and again she looked up and on, and was safe.

PERT PARAGRAPHS.

It is easier to work than to play when the work is yours and the play is the other fellow's game.

It is a good thing to feel well disposed toward your neighbor, but sometimes his inveterate habit of giving advice won't let you.

When you can't find any way to make headway just sit down and try to grow a fine crop of patience.

People who keep their friends in hot water are generally in a stew themselves most of the time, so perhaps they deserve some sympathy.

SPEAKING RIGHT OUT.

"The mother who allows a sixteen year old daughter to float around the townships in a top buggy until 2 a.m. with a counterfeit sport of weak jaw and weaker morals merely opens the front door to grief and disgrace. If you don't know what company your girl keeps or what time of night she turns in, your roar, when gossips get busy, will sound about as pathetic as the wheeze from a jewsharp. The girl who insists on spooning with everybody in the corporate limits ought to be backed into the woodshed and relieved of her overflow of affection with a No. 11 slipper laid carelessly across the hiplets. We had sooner see a girl kiss a blind shoat through a barb wire fence than change partners six nights a week in the front parlor with the lights turned low. It's harder to marry off a girl who has been pawed over by every yap in the community than it is to fatten sheep on pineapple ice. You can't gold brick a sharp-eyed suitor with second hand goods any more than you can fit a bathrobe on a goat. There are lots of weak minded parents who are going up against the judgment day with about as much show as a cross-eyed girl at a beauty show, and their children will rise up and bless them with the enthusiasm of a one-legged man at a club-dance."—Paisley Advocate.

"DRUGS IS DRUGS."

A man in an American city took a doctor's prescription to the drug store to have it filled. In some way this piece of paper became torn in half, so that when the patron handed the druggist the first piece, that public servant at once measured out ammonia salt it called for and placed the small vial before the customer.

"How much?" asked the patron.

"Ten cents."

"Oh, beg pardon," said the purchaser, at this juncture finding the remainder of the prescription in his pocket. "This piece says to add enough water to the other to make four ounces."

"Very well," rejoined the apothecary, dumping the contents of the small vial into a four-ounce bottle and adding the required water. "There you are, sir; 40 cents more please."

"What! Ten cents for ammonia and 40 cents for water?"

"Exactly. The doctor's name written after the water makes it a prescription, and we put up no prescriptions under 50 cents."

MAKING HARDSHIP EASY.

Difficulties find their being more in our way of looking at things than in actual facts. Several members of a certain family found it extremely difficult to get to breakfast early enough to have family prayers afterward, before separating for the day. One morning the head of the house quietly set the clocks twenty minutes fast, and called the others at what seemed to be the accustomed time. They were, as usual, fifteen minutes or so later in dressing and breakfasting than they needed to be, but were all quite surprised to find, after breakfast was over, that they still had time enough for prayers,—when the clocks were set right,—and nobody was a bit the worse for it. It had proved just as easy for them to be on time,—when they did not know it,—as to be late; the only difference was in their way of looking at the thing. We cannot fool ourselves into duty-hoing as they were fooled into it; but we can sensibly recognize that the chief difficulty in duty-doing is of our own imagining and then go ahead and do what we ought to do. We are likely to find our hardships as unexpectedly easy as did the late-risers.—S. S. Times.

WHEN IT RAINS IN THE COUNTRY.

When it rains in the country what do the folks do?
Well listen a moment and I will tell you:
'Tis pleasant to think of the pleasure we get
When all of the world is all drizzle and wet.
When work can't be done in the garden or field
And fishing and hunting no pleasure will yield,
When kitchens are cosy and parlors invite
When the wind and the rain is at its full height.

When it rains in the country what do the folks do?
Ah! could you but see us all snug from the dew!
No fretting, no worry, because of the rain
And Oh! it is restful, the beat on the pane,
No beaches, no shopping, no concerts, no shows,
No fussing, no worry about our fine clothes,
What do we do really? You ask me again,
When it rains in the country we just let it rain.

Human sympathy is of the faintest kind, compared with God's sympathy. Perhaps you have never thought that He is sorry for you in your weakness or sickness, or disappointment, or trouble. But He is sorry for all of us. And yet not sorry in the sense that will prevent Him from doing the best thing for us. God loves us enough to discipline us.—Selected.

Mount Forest Board of Education is having its troubles. First Principal Beatty of the Public School asked to be released from his engagement to take a more lucrative position in Ridgetown, but the Board wisely got over the difficulty by promising to raise Mr. Beatty's salary at the end of the year to $900—the same as Ridgetown offered. Now the new first-assistant master at the High School, Mr. Corkill, wants to be released to go to Kingston Collegiate Institute at a good increase over what he is getting.

AWAKENING OF SCIENCE

TO THE VALUE OF FRUIT

What is "FRUIT-A-TIVES"?

Medical men are just beginning to realize the possibilities of fruit in curing disease. Its action on the liver, kidneys and skin is wonderful. Yet fruit in its raw state is impracticable in treating disease because of the minute quantity of the active or curative principle contained in fruit juice.

A physician in Ottawa, after years of patient work, discovered a process, whereby the medicinal or bitter principle of fruit juice is increased in quantity and thus a more active and more valuable substance is obtained.

"Fruit-a-tives" is the only medicine in the world made of fruit.

Hundreds of prominent people in every section of the Dominion owe their good health to "Fruit-a-tives." Hundreds more are daily becoming stronger and better by taking them. "Fruit-a-tives" is daily proving its inestimable value as a natural cure in all cases of Constipation, Biliousness, Torpid Liver, Backache and Headache, Neuralgia, Rheumatism, Kidney and Skin Troubles.

50c. a box, 6 for $2.50, or trial box, 25c. Sold by all dealers, or sent, postpaid, on receipt of price by Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

Poultry and dairy farming go well together. In fact, milk fed to poultry in all forms produces good results.

Are the fowls getting plenty of grit now? You should see that they are supplied now as much as in the winter.

For the average person to make a success, one breed of fowls is enough. There are many points in favor of one breed.

It is one thing to produce good poultry and eggs, but it is quite another to dispose of same at a financial profit.

There is more chance to make money for the man who aims at utility with fancy than the man who raises "fancy" only.

Chickens hatched and grown to a weight of two pounds are in good demand throughout the spring and summer season at good prices.

Good, pure water, in clean dishes, and fresh added, is necessary for growing chicks, and in fact all poultry should be well supplied.

Learn how to feed, what to feed, and get acquainted with the needs of the hen, fortify against diseases and make every hen do her best.

There is no "best breed," the one you prefer, the one that suits your ideal fancy, will better suit your purpose and you will get better results.

Air-slaked lime scattered about the houses and yards is a splendid disinfectant, and will help to keep sweet and clean and the flock healthy.

Put plenty of nests in the laying house and in a semi-dark place. The hens prefer this kind of a nest and will leave others to use the darker nest.

It is an easy matter to overfeed fowls, and poultrymen should bear this in mind. They often have the appearance of starving when they do not need it at all.

The mule bird is half the flock; then how foolish to use one that is not up to the standard or ideal you are aiming for? This means much to you and it is possible to improve faster this way than any other.

Plan to raise more and better poultry this season. No breed will pay better than the one you have if it is suited to your purpose. It's the man behind the breed that makes them pay as much or more so than the breed.

Fresh turned earth has great powers of absorption of filth and the cultivating of the poultry runs is advisable. Even if your space is small for runs, by frequent turning of the soil you are assured of sanitary conditions if you do it.

You can spade or plow oats in the poultry runs with a profit. Considerable grain will be scratched out, and will be eaten just as it sprouts and other grain will shoot forth a stalk and it will all be devoured by the hens. The stirring of the ground will keep the place more healthful, and the hens busy.

One of the most important points in chicken growing is to keep them growing. Every condition must be at its best, and you must keep them so.

Do not neglect to clean the poultry house often. Filth is a breeder of disease. Filth is a profit-eating germ of the poultry business. If you want to make money from your poultry attend to this little duty of keeping everything clean and in a sanitary condition around the poultry houses and yards.

It does not matter what your aim is in the poultry business, even if it is only a few for the house, you cannot afford to raise mongrels. Get some eggs from a reliable breeder, start right, and raise good poultry, even if it is only a few. It looks better, sells better, tastes better, and will cost you no more to raise them.

FOR CANNING FRUIT.

S. B. Shaw, of the Agricultural College, North Carolina, gives the following directions for canning fruit:

RASPBERRIES.

Handle fruit lightly. Select firm, ripe, well-colored berries. Remove all stems, leaves, trash, imperfect and soft fruit. Pack firmly, being careful not to mash berries. Fill jars almost full, add four level tablespoons (about two ounces) of granulated sugar, and fill entirely full with fresh, cold water. Boil 5 minutes, seal tight and continue boiling 5 minutes. Remove jars and set aside for 24 hours. On second day, place jars in vessel as on first day, and boil 10 minutes. Remove jars and let stand 24 hours, and on third day cook as directed for second day.

RHUBARB.

Select stalks ready for use, wash clean and cut in pieces one to one and a half inches long. Pack firmly. While filling jars add six level tablespoons (about three ounces) of granulated sugar. Fill jars full and add fresh, cold water to fill jars entirely full. Boil 10 minutes, seal tight, continue boiling 20 minutes. Remove jars from vessel, set aside for 24 hours. On second day, place in vessel as directed on first day, and boil 20 minutes. Remove jars, set aside for 24 hours, and on third day cook as directed for second day.

PLUMS.

Select firm, ripe fruit. Wash in clean, cold water. Remove stems and any trash. Pack firmly. Fill jars almost full and add four level tablespoons (about two ounces) of granulated sugar, then fill entirely full with fresh, cold water. Boil 10 minutes, seal tight and continue boiling 10 minutes. Remove jars and let them stand 24 hours. On second day place jars in vessel as on first day, and boil 20 minutes. Remove, let stand 24 hours and on third day cook as directed for second day.

PEACHES.

Use firm solid fruit, not too ripe. Peel, cut in halves and remove pits, unless fruit is to be canned whole. Pack firmly as soon as possible. Fill jars almost full and add eight level tablespoons (about four ounces) of granulated sugar, for a heavy syrup, and fill entirely full with cold water. Boil 10 minutes, seal tight and continue boiling 10 minutes. Remove jars and let them stand 24 hours. On second day, place jars in vessel as on first day, and boil 20 minutes. Remove, let stand 24 hours and on third day cook as directed for second day. If medium syrup be preferred, use six level tablespoons (about three ounces) of granulated sugar, and cook as directed. Small peaches and pieces not put in the jars of fancy fruit may be canned in light syrup and used for making pies. The fruit is prepared and cooked as directed, using four level tablespoons (about two ounces) of granulated sugar.

PEARS.

Fruit should be ripe, but not soft. Peel, cut in halves or quarter, cut out all core, bruised and decayed specks. Pack firmly. Fill jars almost full, add six level tablespoons (about three ounces) of granulated sugar, and fill entirely full with fresh, cold water. Boil 10 minutes, seal tight and continue boiling 15 minutes. Remove jars and let stand 24 hours. On second day, place jars in vessel as on first day and boil 25 minutes. Remove, let stand 24 hours, and on third day cook as directed for second day.

At Sarnia 81 of 139 candidates passed the entrance examination; in Midland, 28 of 53 were successful.

The C.P.R. this summer will string 2,400 miles of copper telegraph wires in the West. It will string a copper wire from Montreal to Vancouver. It is also the intention to equip the entire Lake Superior section with telephones.

WHAT DO YOU KNOW ABOUT IT?

A druggist's best customer asked that question regarding a patent medicine. The druggist had sold the medicine for years, but was forced to admit that he knew nothing more about it than what appeared on the label, wrapper and advertising. The claims made for that particular patent medicine were so extravagant that the druggist decided to find a line of remedies he knew something about.

Boy Had Fits For 6 Years

Druggist advised DR. A. W. CHASE'S NERVE FOOD—Cure complete and lasting.

Mrs. J. D. Palmer, 38 Park St., Amsterdam, N. Y., writes: "When six years of age my boy began to have fits. They came on in the night. He would make strange noises, stiffen out, froth at mouth, face would twitch and some times turned purple. After the fit he could not talk.

"The family physician said all he could do was to keep them down some what. The second physician pronounced trouble Jeffersonian epilepsy, but could not cure him. He suffered for six years and before beginning the use of Dr. A. W. Chase's Nerve Food had three fits in about five days. Our druggist recommended Dr. A. W. Chase's Nerve Food. He has taken seven boxes and has not had the symptom of a fit since. His color has greatly improved; he is not nervous and irritable like he used to be, and we consider his cure complete."

Such results are only obtained by the use of the genuine Dr. A. W. Chase's Nerve Food—not from imitations or substitutes. 50 cents a box, all dealers or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Toronto.

Semi-Steel Fire-Pot--Not Gray Iron

A FIRE-POT of a furnace should be able to endure tremendous heat and to repel the attacks of sulphur fumes.

The material commonly used for a fire-pot is gray iron. The Sunshine fire-pot is Semi-Steel.

Now, avoiding technical terms, gray iron has what may be called "open" pores. Through these "open" pores the destructive sulphur fumes attack the iron and hasten disintegration.

On the other hand, Semi-Steel is a close-grained material, with a smooth-as-glass surface which practically seals or "closes" up the pores. Semi-Steel easily repels the attacks of gas fumes and thus greatly prolongs the life of the fire-pot.

A Semi-Steel fire-pot weighs 30 per cent. heavier than the same size and pattern in gray iron. It is therefore better able to endure tremendous heat.

Semi-Steel is made by an exclusive McClary process. You can only get a Semi-Steel fire-pot with a McClary furnace. That is one strong reason why you should have the Sunshine installed in your home. Our agent in your locality will tell you many other reasons. Ask him.

Remember, the Sunshine is guaranteed, by the largest makers of furnaces in British Empire, to heat your home to your entire satisfaction. 46

ELMWOOD FARM.

J. A. McKee, President of The Dodds Medicine Company, has Turned to Farming.

The Toronto Sunday World of July 17th, 1910, contains a number of half tone illustrations of horses and cattle on the farm of J. A. McKee, a native of Mulmur township, and well known in this county, who now resides in Toronto. Here is what the World has to say:—

"Back to the land" is a motto President of the Dodds Medicine Co., president of the Dodds Medicine Co., Limited, and owner of the Western Steamship Co. operating a line of steel freighters on the great lakes. Mr. McKee was raised on the farm and after having spent many busy years of city life he has come to the conclusion that there is no recreation or employment so satisfying and healthful as life on the farm.

Some four or five years ago Mr. McKee purchased one of the most select farms in the County of York, so close to Toronto as to be practically within the bounds of all city conveniences. The farm is located on Yonge-street at Belford Park, only two miles from the north city limits, yet withal it provides all the beauties and attractions of a bucolic life.

The farm consist of about 175 acres and slopes from Yonge street back to the rugged beauties of the River Don. Sixty acres of the farm are situated in the town of North Toronto, the balance being in the Township of York. The property is accessible by means of the street car on Yonge street, but Mr. McKee believes in the more modern appliance, the automobile, and scarcely a day passes that the proprietor does not make a trip to the farm to look over the horses and other stock which he has there and to see the fine crops which are being raised. It is, in fact, the morning exercise of Mr. McKee, who, after visiting the farm and spending an hour or two thereon, returns to the city refreshed and ready for the intricacies of his large business. Nothing pleases him so much as to take some of his many city friends up to the farm which is now almost his entire hobby. He takes solid enjoyment in displaying the qualities of the fine hackneys which he has raised and considerable pleasure in motoring through and around the broad acres.

"Elmwood," the name of the farm, so-called because of the many fine elms on the property, is beautifully situated, sloping gently to the south. It is supplied with modern conveniences, in the shape of city water, electric lights and a concrete sidewalk extending from the city limits past the farm.

About one hundred acres in front are under cultivation, mostly mixed farming, but the most beautiful part in Mr. McKee's mind, is his private park of about seventy-five acres in the rear. It is well wooded, with hills and plateaus and the River Don winds its way almost through the centre of the park. There is also a fine stream of fresh water, once a trout stream, rising in the park and emptying into the Don.

Mr. McKee does not object to picnic parties and others making use of the park so long as they do not interfere with shrubs or trees or build fires. On any afternoon, particularly Saturdays and Sundays, hundreds of people may be seen enjoying themselves, wandering over the wooded hills and along the banks of the Don.

Mr. McKee is quite a breeder of horses, confining himself to hackneys and clydesdales only, all of which are of high class and the best obtainable. The farm and stock are under the superintendence of Fred. Dawson, an educated English farmer. His abilities are clearly shown by the results, both as to the cultivation of the land and the raising and care of the stock.

The portion of North Toronto, in which the farm is located, has improved wonderfully during the past year or two and the farm is now almost surrounded by dwellings. Many tempting offers have been made for the property, but the owner has persistently refused to name a price. When asked the reason, he stated, in the first place, "It is one of my toys and I am loathe to part with it." In the second, "I have every faith in the growth of Toronto to the north."

The flies that are now in your kitchen and dining room were probably feasting on some indescribable nastiness less than an hour ago, and as a single fly often carries many thousands of disease germs attached to its hairy body, it is the duty of every housekeeper to assist in exterminating this worst enemy of the human race.

Face was restored to shape, power of speech returned, and he gained in weight. Says he would not return to former condition for all the gold in the country.

FOR GOOD ROADS.

Important Conference at Cooksville Last Thursday.

Last Thursday a dozen motor-cars, with five dozen passengers, went over some very good sections of highway outside of Toronto and some sections that were quite defective. The tourists were members of the Toronto Board of Trade, of the City Council and the Board of Control, representatives of the County Council of York and one or two representatives of the County Council of Peel. The purpose of the trip was to give the people interested in good roads an object lesson of a double sort.

Leaving the City Hall, the party went by way of Dundas street to Lambton, and beyond that village they traversed the part of Dundas street that has been put in good condition by means of the money bequeathed for that purpose by the late Timothy Eaton. This lies in the township of Etobicoke between the Humber River and the T. Eaton farm, a few miles to the west. The reconstruction of the highway was carried out under the direction of Superintendent McLean of the Good Roads Department of the Ontario Government.

The trip extended to Cooksville where the tourists had lunch at the hotel, and afterwards held an informal meeting on the lawn. After stimulating addresses had been given by Mr. Lionel Clark of the Board of Trade, W. F. Maclean, M.P., Reeve Henry, of York, Reeve Kennedy, of Toronto township, and Mr. John C. Eaton, a conference took place under the Chairmanship of Controller Ward. The two points most prominent in the discussion were the roads to be improved and the division of the financial burden between the Province, the city, and the county, or rather East and West York consolidated for the purpose with the status of a county. It was authoritatively announced that one-third of the cost of the improvement would be paid by the Province, and there seemed to be a consensus of opinion that the city and county should assume one-third each. The roads named provisionally are the Lake Shore Road, Dundas street, the Western road, Yonge street, Don Mills road, and a composite road made up of the Kennedy line and the Danforth road. The County Committee will be called to make a proposition in detail, and the whole matter will then be discussed with the Board of Control.

Lightning caused two fires near Streetsville during the storm a week ago Saturday. The barns and outbuildings of W. H. Rutledge, 4th con. Toronto Township, formerly of Acton, were burnt with their contents, this season's crop of hay and most of the owner's farm machinery. His loss will be over $2,500, with about $1,200 insurance.

The Seventh Gate

A Story of the Chinese Forbidden City.

By CLARISSA MACKIE

Copyright, 1910, by American Press Association.

Owen Ryder left the train at the terminus several miles outside the walls of Peking and covered the remaining distance toward the city gate on the back of a donkey.

As he approached the seventh gate he paused for an instant. He had come on a journey of thousands of miles to accomplish a mission, and now that the object of his search was almost within his grasp he hesitated.

Fear had no part in his hesitation. He was comparatively safe in the disguise afforded by his Chinese dress—as safe as any native Chinese who wished to gain admission to the Forbidden City.

Then, with quick indrawn breath, he moved into the deeper shadow of the gate. As his hands touched the bronze doors they swung softly inward and engulfed him.

A dark shadow loomed at his side and, without a sound, guided him close against the inner wall in a curving line. They came to an abrupt stop in a grove of trees whose tops rustled high over their heads. Before them were the dim outline and bulky mass of some huge building.

At last a door closed softly behind them, the hands were removed from Ryder's lips and arm, and presently a light twinkled out of the gloom.

The American turned to look at his companion, who had withdrawn the cover from a small bronze lantern and stood revealed in its dim light.

Ryder stared and stared again at the tall, spare figure that confronted him. This was no Chinese—this man with deep sunken blue eyes and wisps of fair hair sticking out from under the cue bound about his forehead. Owen Ryder's wondering gaze traveled over the yellowed skin drawn tightly over the protruding cheek bones, down to the handsome nose and bitter, curling lips, down to the common blue cotton Chinese dress and then up again with puzzled eyes to study the face with something lacking—something—what?

The man laughed silently as he lifted his bony hands to each side of his head. "You miss these appendages, my friend. I have been cropped, you see." His voice was low and vibrant with some suppressed emotion.

Ryder gasped. "Your ears—my God!" He felt within his blouse for the comfortable reassurance of his revolver, and his fingers curled about the butt lovingly.

"Your ears next, my friend, and the ears of all who pass through the seventh gate inward," said the stranger, with assumed lightness. He turned and pointed to the wall behind him, and Ryder gasped again to see a line of dark figures stretched along the floor.

"Earless freaks," said the tall stranger, with sudden dreariness in his mocking tone. "Sit down on the floor, man, and tell your story—nay, let me preface it for you and for me and the rest of us—white men!"

"Go ahead," said Ryder.

"You are an artist of some sort. You have learned that these people have recovered their lost art of producing Kiastin porcelain, that rare painting of invisible flowers, fishes or other symbols on the outside of porcelain vessels, paintings that are only revealed when the vessel is filled with liquor of some sort. The discoverer of this lost and precious art is confined to his workshop in the palace here. The retention of the secret means the addition of large sums of money to this country; hence they guard it carefully. You were put on to the secret, you have come to spy it out, you have reached as far as"— "I had a model"—began Ryder eagerly, when the other man's low laugh cut him short.

"What is your name?"

"I am Edward Stone, an Englishman. I had a model, too, and so did each of these five other poor earless devils. It was the same model. One by one she sent us here as she sent you. It could have been no one else but Lena Shultz."

"It was Lena Shultz," returned Ryder dully.

"I knew it. The man who discovered the lost art is not a native. To what country he belongs I do not know. I do know that he made the discovery and was captured with his belongings and is confined within three feet of where we now are. All day he works in the underground cell perfecting his discovery, for in spite of the most violent threats he will not impart the secret to another soul or work in another man's presence."

"But why did that woman send us here—on a wild goose chase?" muttered Ryder after a silence.

"Yonder poor devil is her husband. She hopes with the aid of other white men to help him escape from here. I was the first to come. I arrived at 9 in the evening. Now it is my duty to open the gate at 9 every evening in the hope of catching other would be thieves. 'Set a thief to catch a thief,' you know!" He uttered a hard little laugh.

"I suppose that's what we are," agreed Ryder.

"That's so."

"How long have you been here?"

"Four years."

"My God! How do you live?"

"Don't live—exist."

"Any hope of escape?"

"None whatever."

"The imperial government"—began Ryder suddenly, when the Englishman interrupted.

"The imperial government knows nothing about the matter. The whole rascally affair is in the hands of a clique of highborn scoundrels. Resolve to make yourself as comfortable as possible under the circumstances—resign yourself to losing your ears (if you ever should escape one can buy lovely pink rubber ones, I fancy) and hope for a change of rulers. Nothing else will cause excitement enough to have our existence forgotten. Good night!"

Stone calmly stretched himself on the floor and went to sleep. Ryder sat and brooded at the bronze lantern flickering in the distance. His hand still caressed the butt of his revolver, but with less confidence.

New York seemed many thousands of miles away tonight—New York and alluring Lena Shultz. He cursed her under his breath and wondered how many more men she would throw as bait into that hidden city in the hope that one or all of them might aid in the escape of her husband.

There was an audible murmur of sound without the thick walls, pierced by sharp staccato cries. The thud of many pounding feet sounded in the courtyards above their heads, and in an instant the six sleeping prisoners were awake and on the alert. The Latins babbled French to one another, while Stone and Ryder drew near to an iron grating in the stone roof.

The American could make nothing of the strange sounds, but the Englishman's face lighted with sudden excitement.

"By Jove," he whispered exultantly, "you've brought good luck after all, Ryder! Something extraordinary has happened, from what I can hear—a change of government indeed! Two deaths and chaos everywhere. Time for us to make a move, and disguises are in order."

He swooped to a dark corner and pried up a portion of the stone flagging. He brought into view a mass of silk and satin. He threw rich garments to each of his fellow prisoners, and without a word they slipped into the voluminous folds.

"Doubly a thief," muttered Stone as he surveyed his companions. Then he caught up one remaining robe and thrust it under his arm. "See if we can release Lena's husband, poor devil! We owe her a grudge, sure enough, but white men must stand by one another!"

With the air of one who had studied his ground and was well versed in his undertaking, he unfastened the oaken door and by the guiding sound of his slipping, padding feet the six followed him into the outer darkness of corridors. They twisted and turned and doubled, and at last Stone paused before another door.

"I don't know just how to get inside," he admitted in a low tone. But the pressure of his hand on the planks pushed the door inward and revealed to their shocked senses a scene of carnage indeed. With the details omitted, they realized that Lena's husband was dead, with his precious secret still a mystery behind his horribly grinning lips.

"The syndicate has done well indeed," said Stone, turning away. Silently they filed through the passages until they reached the foot of the grass grown steps where Ryder had left the outside world behind. "It is here where the guard is set. Look for danger, friends," whispered the Englishman.

The shadows were uninhabited. They slipped up into the grove of whispering trees and followed the curve of the shining wall around to the seventh gate.

"Once outside!" muttered Stone feverishly.

"Once outside!" each man repeated in his own tongue.

In the distance were muffled cries and excited murmurings. Around the seventh gate all was still—ominously still.

The seven were pressed against the bronze gate, and Stone was fumbling with the complicated lock. There was a rushing sound behind them, and they turned their heads.

A file of soldiers was running toward them, and their short swords were raised in deadly menace. Stone pulled the door open and dashed forth with his companions into pitchy blackness. They crashed into a sedan chair just entering the gateway. A woman's scream pierced the darkness, and from the tower overhead the watchman thrust his lantern.

A white face appeared for a brief instant between the parted curtains of the chair.

"Lena Shultz!" bellowed Ryder excitedly.

With one accord the seven victims of Lena Shultz ignored the oncoming soldiers, and, shouldering the bearers aside, they grasped the poles of the chair and carried the shrieking woman away from the seventh gate—away from the Forbidden City beyond the outer darkness to the lighted consulate buildings—to safety for all.

The next day Ryder and Stone left for the nearest treaty port. "A fifth story studio and paint pots for the rest of my life. I'll take my foreign travel book fashion hereafter," said Ryder sheepishly to his companion as they whirled along the railway. "What's your first wish, Stone?"

The Englishman touched a matted wig which hung well down over the lapel of his coat.

"Pink rubber ears," he said solemnly.

And neither laughed.

The camps to provide a home for the men and a stable for the horses have already been completed, and work on the dam will be started this week.—Free Press.

During the severe electric storm on Thursday evening, July 21st., a most sad fatality occurred at the home of Mr. Garrett Switzer, 7th con. Kinloss, near Holyrood, which the lightning struck, entered an open door and killed one of his little sons instantly. The boy was standing about two feet from the entrance when the lightning struck him. His mother and other members of the family were in the same room with him when it happened but they all escaped with a severe shock.

By-Law No. 395

A By-Law to provide for drainage work in the Township of Amaranth, in the County of Dufferin, and for borrowing on the credit of the municipality the sum of three thousand, one hundred and eighty-four dollars, and seventy cents, for completing the same. Provisionally adopted the 9th day of July 1910.

WHEREAS for the better maintenance of certain drains heretofore constructed under the provisions of the municipal drainage act, and to prevent damage to certain lands and roads, caused thereby, it is deemed expedient to change the course, enlarge, and extend the outlet, and otherwise improve certain of the creeks of rivers as is necessary for the free flow of the water.

AND WHEREAS the said Council has procured an examination to be made by the said A. R. Leicester, being a person competent for such purpose, of the drains requiring the hereinafter mentioned improvement, and has also procured plans, specifications and estimates of the proposed alterations or improvements to be made by the said A. R. Leicester, Engineer, and an assessment to be made by him of the lands and roads to be benefited by drainage work, and of all lands and roads liable for contribution thereto, stating as nearly as he can the proportion of benefit, outlet liability and injuring liability, which in his opinion, will be derived or incurred in consequence of such drainage work by every road, and lot or portion of lot, the said assessment so made, being the assessment hereinafter by this by-law enacted, to be assessed and levied upon the roads and lots or parts of lots, hereinafter in that behalf specified, set forth, and described, and the report of the said A. R. Leicester, in respect thereof, and of the said drainage work, being as follows :—

59 Yonge St., Toronto, Ont.,
July 2nd, 1910.

To the Municipal Council of the Township of Amaranth, County of Dufferin.

Dear Sirs,—In accordance with the petition signed by R. J. Wallace and others, under section 75 of the drainage act, and with the instructions of your Council, I have made the necessary surveys, levels, and elevations to locate drain No. 47, to drain the lots through which it passes and answer all other purposes for which it is intended. I consider the outlet into the Grand River, with the removal of logs, etc., around this point, sufficient for the present, but if any additional drainage is put into the river above this point, the question of deepening the channel of the river will have to be considered.

I herewith beg to hand you the necessary plans, profiles, assessments, and roll appertaining to the said drain No. 47.

Yours very truly,
J. MILLS, A. R. LEICESTER,

AND WHEREAS the said Council of the Township of Amaranth, pursuant to the provisions of the Municipal Drainage Act, enacts as follows :—

1. The report, plan, specifications, assessment and estimate, are hereby adopted, and the drainage, as therein indicated and set forth, shall be made and constructed in accordance therewith.

2. The Reeve of the said Township of Amaranth may borrow on the credit of the Corporation of the said Township of Amaranth, the sum of three thousand, two hundred and forty dollars and seventy cents ($3240.70) being the funds necessary for the work not otherwise provided for and may issue debentures of the Corporation to that amount in sums of not less than $50.00 each and payable within fifteen years from the date thereof with interest at the rate of four per cent. per annum, that is to say in equal annual instalments, such debentures to be payable at the Bank of Hamilton, in the City of Toronto, and to have attached to them coupons for the payment of interest.

3. For paying the sum of ten hundred and twenty-four dollars ($1024), the amount charged against the said lands and roads for benefit, and the sum of eleven hundred and two dollars and seventy cents ($1102.70), the amount charged against said lands and roads for outlet liability, and the sum of six hundred and fifty-four dollars ($654), the amount charged against said lands and roads for injuring liability, apart from lands and roads belonging to or controlled by the municipality, and for covering interest thereon for fifteen years at the rate of four per cent. per annum, the following total special rate, over and above all other rates, shall be assessed, levied and collected in the same manner and at the same time as other taxes are levied and collected upon and from the undermentioned lots and parts of lots and roads :—

4. For paying the sum of four hundred and sixty dollars ($460), the amount assessed against the said roads and lands of the municipality, and for covering interest thereon for fifteen years at the rate of four per cent. per annum, a special rate on the dollar, sufficient to produce the required yearly amount therefor, shall, over and above all other rates, be levied and collected in the same manner and at the same time as other taxes are levied and collected upon and from the whole rateable property in the said Township of Amaranth, in each year for fifteen years after the final passing of this by-law during which the said debentures have to run; said debentures shall be payable on the 28th day of December of each year for the following years, namely :—1910, 1911, 1912, 1913, 1914, 1915, 1916, 1917, 1918, 1919, 1920, 1921, 1922, 1923 and 1924.

5. That the Council are hereby appointed Commissioners to let the contract for completing the said drainage work therewith by public sale, (not exceeding the estimate), but every such contractor, with one good and satisfactory surety, shall be required forthwith to enter into bonds for the due performance and completion of contract according to said plan and specifications, and within the time mentioned in said bond, unless otherwise ordered by the Council, and it shall be the duty of said Commissioners to cause said drains and works connected therewith to be made and constructed in accordance with such plans and specifications and to grant orders on the Treasurer to each contractor, less twenty-five per cent. of the amount due, until the contract is fully completed and duly accepted, and for the due performance of these and all other duties of commissioners. The said commissioners shall be entitled to receive a fee of two dollars per day for each day of actual service.

6. This By-law shall be published, or served, once in every week for four consecutive weeks in the Banner Newspaper, published in the Town of Orangeville, and shall come into force upon and after the final passing thereof, and may be cited Outlet to Drains By-Law by Cleaning out of Grand River.

DR. CRIPPEN ARRESTED.

Man Wanted For The Murder of his Actress Wife is Now in the Toils.

Exciting Climax To A Sensational Man Hunt.

Dr. Crippen and Miss LeNeve were arrested at 9 o'clock Sunday morning on the S. S. Montrose, two miles off Father Point. The arrest was dramatic in a sense. Scotland Yard Inspector Dew boarded the Montrose disguised as a pilot, and as Crippen was pacing the deck with Surgeon Stewart, of the Montrose, he saw the pilot boat approaching, pulled by four seamen. He remarked that there seemed to be a good many pilots in the boat, but aside from this made no comment. He continued his promenade, but five minutes after he felt a tap on his shoulder and turned to face Inspector Dew. "This is your man," said Dew to McCarthy, and the latter arrested Crippen, at the same time giving him the usual statutory caution.

In a few minutes the handcuffs were on the man for whom the police of the world have been searching for the past three weeks.

Dr. Stewart, in describing the arrest, said that while Crippen had been very nervous since the Gulf was reached, he did not seem to be apprehensive of the short stop at Father Point until he saw the boatload of men pulling for the ship. Then he turned pale. Inspector Dew walked up the deck and when he got near to where Crippen and Dr. Stewart were standing he stopped and beckoned to Crippen. He did not falter for a moment, but walked straight over to where the sleuth from Scotland Yard was standing. Dew took him by the arm and led him to the captain's room under the bridge, where the arrest was made by Detectives McCarthy and Denis.

As the steel bracelets clamped his wrists he looked at Dew for a moment and said he was glad the suspense was over. Then he was quickly led down to a vacant cabin, where he was searched. The first search of his outer clothing revealed only a ten-dollar bill, a watch and a pencil. No revolver, not even a knife, was found. Pinned to his undershirt, however, were five ladies' diamond rings and a diamond pin. Miss LeNeve, when searched, also had in her possession a splendid diamond brooch.

Sitting in the cabin handcuffed and coatless, Crippen presented a curious spectacle. There is no doubt that the man has been eating his heart out with apprehension for the past few days, although it is equally sure he felt that the blow, if it fell, would fall at Quebec and not Father Point. He sat on a small lounge with his head buried in his manacled hands, huddled back in a corner. Occasionally he would raise his head and glare at inquisitive onlookers out of his big staring black eyes. His hair, what there is of it, is of a brownish sandy color. He was shaved of that heavy moustache, which made his early pictures noticeable. He is undersized, about 5 feet 3 inches; in fact, a small puny creature. Without anything about him to suggest the criminal save the eyes, which occasionally blazed forth dangerously and then took on a vacant look. In his room he kept twitching his hands nervously, and during the time the detectives were searching him, he looked sheepish, like nothing so much as a small boy caught stealing jam. There is nothing of a prepossessing character about the man at all. It seemed almost a traversity to handcuff him. When Dew produced the diamond rings from the undershirt, Crippen gave a half smirk.

In cabin 5, Miss LeNeve, alias Joim George Robinson, was searched after she revived from the collapse which followed her arrest. She was given brandy, and then Inspector Dew and a stewardess went through her clothing. Nothing was found of any consequence, save the diamond brooch, and Dew asked her several questions, trying to draw from her what knowledge she had of the crime. She volunteered little information, however. She was dressed in a brown suit, trousers and coat and vest with a low collar and tie. Her hair was cut short. She is slightly taller than Crippen, with grey eyes, unusually large, and, although she was crying in a frightened sort of way when being questioned, it was evident, in spite of her tear-stained face, that she was a decidedly pretty girl. Twice during the morning Miss LeNeve had to be given brandy to revive her from fainting spells. The boy's clothing was taken away and she was given young woman's apparel.

Crippen's last day of liberty on board the Montrose was not any different from those he spent since the vessel left Antwerp. He read a great deal during the voyage and had borrowed from Dr. Steward, "The Letters of a Self-made Merchant to His Son," which he seemed to peruse with interest. Miss LeNeve was his constant companion. They occupied the two end seats at the captain's table in the saloon, the girl being next to the wall and Crippen next.

He asked to be seated this way as he said he was deaf in his left ear. By this means, however, he effectually guarded his so-called son from engaging in conversation with anyone at the table. The pair did not converse much with the other passengers on the ship and kept to themselves. They were the only two English-speaking passengers in the second cabin.

It was about the middle of July that the big city dailies first published the sensational story of the finding of the mutilated body of Belle Elmore (Mrs. Dr. Crippen) in London and the fact that the police of Scotland Yard were searching for her husband on the charge of murder. Since that date sensational developments have followed in quick succession, until the whole world is now interested in the remarkable case.

It was only by the merest chance that the facts of the murder were discovered, for several months elapsed after the disappearance of Belle Elmore before an old friend of hers, Mr. John E. Nash, became suspicious and started the investigation, which caused the flight of the doctor. Dr. Crippen and his wife lived at 39 Hilldrop Crescent, and Mrs. Crippen, who had been known on the variety stage as Belle Elmore, was the honorary treasurer of the Music Hall Ladies' Guild. She resigned from the position om Feb. 2nd last, and when Mr. and Mrs. Nash called a few days later to ask her to reconsider her decision, they were told that she had gone to California. During the same month Mr. Nash was at dinner, where he saw Crippen and his typist, Miss LeNeve, who wore one of Belle Elmore's brooches. He thought it rather odd at the time, but did not worry very seriously about it until several months later.

In May Nash was in New York with a theatrical company, when he received word that Belle Elmore had died in California, and as his wife was very much upset by the news he wrote to Los Angeles for further particulars, but received a reply that no such person had died there. As soon as he got back to London in June, he called upon Dr. Crippen, who seemed very nervous and fidgetty, but gave an account of how his wife had died in a small village near San Francisco, the name of which he could not remember. He added by way of an after-thought that the ashes of her cremated remains were in his safe. The attitude of the husband convinced Nash that something was wrong, so he went immediately to Scotland Yard and told his suspicions.

As the case had so many unusual sides to it, Chief Inspector Dew started the investigation himself, assisted by Sergt. Mitchell. After a few preliminaries, Dew went to the house on Hilldrop Crescent on July 8th to interview Crippen. It was early in the morning and the detective was admitted by a French maid, who went for Miss LeNeve. This young woman described herself as the housekeeper and said that the doctor had already gone to his offices on New Oxford Street, where he worked as a dentist. She offered to take the new men there, which gave them a good chance to see her and they noticed that she still wore the brooch described by Nash as belonging to Belle Elmore.

The detectives informed Dr. Crippen that they were investigating some information which they had received regarding the death of his wife, and asked for his story. "I suppose I had better tell the truth," said Crippen, and went on to make a lengthy statement regarding Belle Elmore's disappearance. He described the story which he had circulated about her death as "all lies," and told how she ran away and left him. He described a little party which he gave on Feb. 1st, during which an incident occurred that led to a quarrel with his wife. She threatened to leave him and said he would never see her any more, but as she frequently made this remark when annoyed, he paid no attention to it until she disappeared. He concluded that she had gone to join a man named Bruce Miller, of Chicago, but he received no further word from her. He was very careful about explaining details and said his wife left all the clothing or jewelry which he had bought for her and took a few things away in her flight.

Inspector Dew offered to assist Crippen in the search for his wife, and went to his home to help him examine some papers. He looked round the garden and the different rooms, but noticed nothing wrong. He had a short talk with Miss LeNeve, and received the information that the couple were packing with the intention of moving during the next few months. On the following Monday — three days later—the detectives went to the dental offices and learned that Crippen and the young woman had gone away on the previous Saturday, leaving instructions with a man called Long to close up the business, as the doctor found it necessary to go away.

The French maid still remained in possession at Hilldrop Crescent, so Dew and Mitchell immediately started an exhaustive search of the premises. They found a revolver and cartridges in the room which had been occupied by Crippen and Miss LeNeve, but it was not until Wednesday that they found the gruesome remains in the cellar. Some loose bricks caused him to decide to have the floor up, and he had only removed a few shovelfuls of earth when Dew came upon human flesh in an advanced stage of decomposition. With great care the police removed the whole floor, but though they found a quantity of flesh and some human hair wrapped up in a portion of a man's handkerchief, they got no bones, and no head, hands or feet. It appeared that the flesh had been carved off by the person who put it there and buried in quicklime. They also secured some woman's underclothes and a piece of tough string, which might have been used for the purposes of strangulation. They found the upper portion of a man's pyjamas which matched a pair of trousers found in a box upstairs. On these remains is based the proof that Belle Elmore had been foully murdered.

It was the man Long who gave the information to the police which indicated that Miss LeNeve was wearing boy's clothes when the couple left London. After the visit of the detectives, Crippen sent him out to buy the garments, but did not tell him what they were for. These clothes were not on the premises when the detectives searched the place, and they have formed one of the most important clues in the pursuit.

IRREPRESSIBLE SAMMY.

Error in Procedure Will Likely Let Grand Valley's Diminutive Citizen Out of His Latest Difficulty.

If it were not for his irrepressible urbanity and combatative nature, Sammy Duckworth might feel himself despised among men, for he has received not a little attention from the authorities in his day, and more particularly this year. But through it all his statute does not seem to have decreased one cubit, nor is his confidence in his ability to wiggle out of a legal quagmire, or to teach the minions of the law a little lesson in procedure, the least shaken. In most of the cases in which he has figured Sammy presented evidence that generally brought him victory, as well as the surprise of the public. But in his last venture the gods seemed to conspire to his success. It happened somewhat thus: A week or so ago Sammy and his landlord, Charles Morrison, had a wordy exchange of pleasantries in front of Harry Rounding's shop, in which each one is said to have expressed their desire and ability to put the other out of business in different ways. But while Brutus was able Cassius was not willing, and the scrap ended in nothing more than a rather sucharged atmosphere. Mr. Morrison then laid an information against Sammy for using profane language. When the case came before Police Magistrate Hamilton on Monday he asked the defendant if he elected to be tried before him or before a jury at the Sessions. Sammy was not long in choosing the jury part, and forthwith the Police Magistrate made out the necessary papers, and let Sammy out on bail furnished by himself, Laughlin Sinclair and Wm. Bremner. It is claimed that this procedure is entirely unnecessary and irregular, and will be in the nature of a big stick (a la Theodore Roosevelt) with Sammy. He should have been tried at once; fined or discharged. Sammy is naturally somewhat elated at the unexpected turn of events, and wonders what the result will be when he appears before the jury.—Star & Vidette.

EXTENSION BLOCKED.

Grand Valley Not Likely to Build Addition to Public School This Year.

An attempt to hold a meeting of the school trustees on Saturday night failed for want of a quorum, there being only Messrs Varcoe, Buchanan and Perkin present. Since then the two former have left town for a trip to the west and there is consequently no hope from the remainder to carry out the proposed addition to the school. Messrs. Sargeant and Hunt are opposed to the scheme on personal financial grounds, and frankly state their position. Dr. Campbell is in favor of the extension, but opposed to giving the contract to contractors who jumped their tender, and there being no new offers thinks it better to let the matter lie over till next spring. Then the work can be begun early, with only a few additional months' inconvenience, as it would likely be close to the end of the approaching term before the rooms would be ready if begun now.

This is the present status, but it does seem strange that the almost unanimous opinion expressed at the nomination meeting last December, and emphasized by the non-appearance of any opposition at the public meeting of the 15th to discuss the matter, is not sufficient for the opponents to drop their antagonistic spirit and allow the wish of the people to rule.—Star & Vidette.

CONFESSION.

A Complete Story by Jack London in the Trail Magazine.

I never loathed a temple so in my life. But I fixed that particular temple at Rangoon.

"You can't see it from the harbour," I contradicted. "You can't see it from the town. You can't see it from the top of the stairway. Because—" I paused for the effect, "because—there isn't any temple there."

"But I saw it with my own eyes!" he cried.

"That was in——?" I queried.

"Seventy-one."

"It was destroyed by the great earthquake of 1867," I explained. "It was very old."

There was a pause. He was busy reconstructing in his old eyes the youthful vision of that fair temple by the sea.

"The stairway is still there," I aided him. "You can see it from all over the harbour. And you remember that little island on the right hand side coming into the harbour?" I guessed that one must have been there (I was prepared to shift it over to the left-hand side), for he nodded. "Gone!" I said. "Seven fathoms of water there now."

I had gained a moment for breath. While he pondered on time's changes, I prepared the finishing touches of my story.

"You remember the Custom House at Bombay?"

He remembered it.

"Burned to the ground," I announced.

"Do you remember Jim Wan?" he came back at me.

"Dead," I said; but whoever Jim Wan was I hadn't the slightest idea.

I was on thin ice again.

"Do you remember Billy Harper, at Shanghai?" I queried back at him quickly.

That aged sailorman worked hard to recollect, but the Billy Harper of my imagination was beyond his faded memory.

"Of course, you remember Billy Harper," I insisted. "Everybody knows him. He's been there forty years. Well, he's still there, that's all."

And then the miracle happened The sailorman remembered Billy Harper! Perhaps there was a Billy Harper, and perhaps he had been in Shanghai for forty years, and was still there but it was news to me.

For hilly half an hour longer the sailorman and I talked on in similar fashion. In the end he told the policemen that I was what I represented myself to be, and after a night's lodging and a breakfast I was released to wander on westward to my married sister in San Francisco.

But to return to the woman in Reno who opened her door to me in the deepening twilight.

At the first glimpse of her kindly face I took my cue. I became a sweet, innocent, unfortunate lad. I couldn't speak. I opened my mouth and closed it again. Never in my life before had I asked anyone for food. My embarrassment was painful, extreme. I was ashamed. I, who looked upon begging as a delightful whimsicality, thumbed myself over into a true son of Mrs. Grundy, burdened with all her bourgeous morality. Only the harsh pangs of the stomach could compel me to do so degraded and ignoble a thing as beg for food. And into my face I strove to throw all the wan wistfulness of famished and ingenious youth unused to mendicancy.

"You are hungry, my poor boy," she said.

I had made her speak first.

I nodded my head and gulped.

"It is the first time I have ever—asked," I faltered.

"Come right in." The door swung open. "We have already finished eating, but the fire is burning, and I can get something up for you."

She looked at me closely when she got me into the light.

"I wish my boy were as healthy and strong as you," she said. "But he is not strong. He sometimes falls down. He just fell down this afternoon and hurt himself badly, the poor dear."

She mothered him with her voice, with an ineffable tenderness in it that I yearned to appropriate. I glanced at him. He sat across the table, slender and pale, his head swathed in bandages. He did not move, but his eyes, bright in the lamplight, were fixed on my in a steady and wondering stare.

"Just like my poor father," I said.

"He had the falling sickness. Some kind of vertigo. It puzzled the doctors. They never could make out what was the matter with him."

"He is dead?" she queried gently, setting before my half a dozen soft boiled eggs.

"Dead!" I gulped. "Two weeks ago. I was with him when it happened. We were crossing the street together. He fell right down. He was never conscious again. They carried him into a drugstore. He died there."

And thereat I developed the pitiful tale of my father—how, after my mother's death, he and I had gone to San Francisco from the ranch; how his pension (he was an old soldier) and the little other money he had was not enough; and how he had tried book-canvassing. Also, I narrated my own woes during the few days after his death that I had spent alone and forlorn on the streets of San Francisco. While that good woman warmed up biscuits, fried bacon, and cooked more eggs; and while I kept pace with her in taking care of all that she placed before me, I enlarged the picture of that poor orphan boy, and filled in the details. I became that poor boy. I believed in him as I believed in the beautiful eggs I was devouring. I could have wept for myself. I know the tears did get into my voice at times. It was very effective.

In fact, with every touch I added to the picture that kind soul gave me something else. She made up a lunch for me to carry away. She put in many boiled eggs, pepper and salt, and other things, and a big apple. She provided me with three pairs of thick red woollen socks. She gave me clean handkerchiefs and other things which I have since forgotten. And all the time she cooked more and more, and I ate more and more. I gorged like a savage; but then it was a far cry across the Sierras on a blind baggage, and I knew neither when nor where I should find my next meal. And all the while, like a death's head at the feast, silent and motionless, her own unfortunate boy sat and stared at me across the table. I suppose I represented to him mystery, and romance, and adventure—all that was denied the feeble flicker of life that was in him. Yet I could not forbear, once or twice, from wondering if he saw through me down to the bottom of my mendacious heart.

"But where are you going to?" she asked me.

"Salt Lake City," said I. "I have a sister there—a married sister." (I debated if I should make a Mormon out of her, and decided against it). "Her husband is a plumber—a contracting plumber."

Now I knew that contracting plumbers were usually credited with making lots of money. But I had spoken. It was up to me to qualify.

"They would have sent me the money for my fare if I had asked for it," I explained; "but they have had sickness and business troubles. His partner cheated him. And so I wouldn't write for the money. I knew I could make my way there somehow. I let them think I had enough to get me to Salt Lake City. She is lovely, and so kind. She was always kind to me. I guess I'll go into the shop and learn the trade. She has two daughters. They are younger than I. One is only a baby."

Of all my married sisters that I have distributed among the cities of the United States that Salt Lake sister is my favorite. She is quite real, too. When I tell about her I can see her, and her two little girls, and her plumber husband. She is a large, motherly woman, just verging on beneficial stoutness—the kind, you know, that always cook nice things and that never get angry. She is a brunette. Her husband is a quiet, easy-going fellow. Sometimes I almost know him quite well. And who knows but some day I may meet him? If that aged sailorman could remember Billy Harper, I see no reason why I should not some day meet the husband of my sister who lives in Salt Lake City.

On the other hand, I have a feeling of certitude within me that I shall never meet in the flesh my many parents and grandparents—you see, I invariably kill them off. Heart-disease was my favorite way of getting rid of my mother, though on occasion I did away with her by means of consumption, pneumonia, andtyphoid fever. It is true, as the Winnipeg policemen will attest, that I have grandparents living in England; but that was years ago and it is a fair assumption that they are dead by now. At any rate, they have never written to me.

I hope that woman in Reno will read these lines and forgive me my gracelessness and unveracity. I do not apologize, for I am unashamed. It was youth, delight in life, out for experience, that brought me to her door. It did me good. It taught me the intrinsic kindliness of human nature. I hope it did her good. Anyway, she may get a good laugh out of it now that she learns the real inwardness of the situation.

To her my story was "true." She believed in my tale and all my family, and she was filled with solicitude for the dangerous journey I must make ere I won to Salt Lake City. This solicitude nearly brought me to grief. Just as I was leaving—my arms full of lunch and my pockets bulging with fat, woollen socks—she bethought herself of her nephew, or uncle, or relative of some sort, who was in the railway mail service, and who, moreover, would come through that night on the very train on which I was going to steal my ride. The very thing! She would take me down to the depot, tell him my story, and get him to hide me in the mail car. Thus, without danger or hardship, I would be carried straight through to Ogden. Salt Lake City was only a few miles further on. My heart sank. She grew excited as she developed the plan, and with my sinking heart I had to feign unbounded gladness and enthusiasm at this solution of my difficulties.

Solution! Why, I was bound west that night, and here I was being trapped into going east. It was a trap and I hadn't the heart to tell her that it was all a miserable lie. While I made believe that I was delighted, I was busy cudgelling my brains for some way to escape. But there was no way. She would see me into the mail car—she said so herself—and then that mail-clerk relative of hers would carry me to Ogden. And then I would have to beat my way back over all those hundreds of miles of desert.

But luck was with me that night. Just about the time she was getting ready to put on her bonnet and accompany me she discovered that she had made a mistake. Her mail-clerk relative was not scheduled to come through that night. His run had been changed. He would not come through until two nights afterwards. I was saved, for of course my boundless youth would never permit me to wait those two days. I optimistically assured her that I'd get to Salt Lake City quicker if I started immediately, and I departed with her blessings and best wishes ringing in my ears.

But those woollen socks were great. I know. I wore a pair of them that night on the blind baggage of the overland, and that overland went west.

The End.

Children Had Eczema

Treatment prescribed had no effect—DR. CHASE'S OINTMENT made thorough cure.

Mrs. Oscar Vancott, St. Antoine, Sask., writes:—"I have found Dr. Chase's Ointment to be a permanent cure for Eczema and other skin diseases. One son, while nursing, broke out with running watery sores all over his head and around the ears. Many salves were prescribed to no effect. The child's head became a mass of scabs and he suffered agony untold. He became weak and frail and would not eat and we thought we would lose him.

"Providentially we heard of Dr. Chase's Ointment and it soon thoroughly cured him. He is seven years old now and strong and well. An older boy was also cured of eczema by this Ointment and we hope more people will learn about it so that their little ones may be saved from suffering."

As a cure for eczema and itching skin disease there is no treatment to be compared to Dr. A. W. Chase's Ointment, 60 cents a box, at all dealers or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Toronto. Dr. Chase's Recipes sent free.

STRONGEST AT THIRTY-ONE.

Inasmuch as a man's muscles develop with use it would appear logical that the older he gets the stronger he should become, but such is not the case. Experiments made with thousands of men show that the muscles of the average man show that the muscles have their period of increase and decline whether he uses them much or little. The average youth of 17 has a lifting power of 280 pounds. By his 20th year his power has increased to such a degree that he should be able to exert a lifting power of 320 pounds, while his maximum power is reached in his 30th or 32nd year, 365 pounds then being recorded. At the expiration of the 31st year his power begins to decline, very gradually at first, falling but eight pounds by the time he is forty. From 40 to 50 the decrease of power is somewhat more rapid, having dropped to 330 pounds at the latter age, the average lifting power of a man of 50, therefore, being slightly greater than of a man of 20. After 50 the decrease in strength is usually rapid, but the rate of decrease varies so surprisingly in individuals that it has been impossible to obtain accurate data as to average strength after that age.

BROKEN HEALTH BRINGS WRINKLES.

How all Women Can Preserve Good Health and Good Looks.

Too many women and girls look old long before they should. In nine cases out of ten it is a matter of health. Work, worry, confinement indoors and lack of exercise cause the health to run down. Then faces become thin and pale; lines and wrinkles appear, there are headaches, backaches and a constant feeling of tiredness.

Women and girls who feel well look well. Therefore improve your health and you will look better. It is a fact that thousands of Canadian women and girls owe the robust health they enjoy to Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. They feel well and enjoy life as only a healthy person can.

The simple reason for this is that Dr. Williams' Pink Pills make new, rich, red blood, which strengthens all the vital organs, brings brightness to the eye, a glow of health to the cheek, and bracing strength to every part of the body. Mrs. Warren Wright, Una, Sask., says: "I feel that I owe a debt of gratitude to Dr. Williams' Pink Pills that nothing I can say in their favor will fully repay. I was so reduced in health and strength that I was hardly able to walk at all, and could do no work whatever. My blood was so thin and watery that my lips and finger tips resembled those of a corpse. I had almost constant headaches, and the smallest exertion would set my heart palpitating violently, and often I would drop in a faint. Nothing I did seemed to help me in the least, and I felt so far gone that I never expected to recover my health. I read in a newspaper of a cure in a case like mine through the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and I decided to try them. I got a half dozen boxes and before I used them all there was a great change in my condition. My appetite returned, the color began to come back to my lips and face, and my strength was increasing. I continued the use of the Pills for some time longer and they restored me to the pink of perfect health. While using the Pills I gained twenty pounds in weight. My cure was made in the summer of 1909, and I am now enjoying better health than ever before."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills will do for other weak and worn women just what they did for Mrs. Wright, if they are given a fair trial. Sold by all medicine dealers or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

COME, LET US REASON TOGETHER.

Come, let us reason together over an important truth—the greatest value in the advertising line is to be had only through the medium of an established newspaper with a bona fide list of subscribers. There are many fake advertising schemes as there are fakes in every other line of business—paste imitations of diamonds; counterfeit coins and bank notes of the genuine currency; poor substitutes for good proprietary medicines, &c., &c. The hand bill, the fence sign, advertisements on concert and other programmes, in public registers, &c., are comparatively worthless substitutes for the genuine thing—well-used space in an established newspaper. But even worse than the substitutes named is the fake newspaper—the kind that is originated by misrepresentation and falsehood and starts up where well-conducted and old established papers occupy the field, promising to scatter broadcast to readers they have not got, three or four thousand papers a week or three or four months. The promoters of such fake newspapers are generally persons who know little or nothing of the newspaper and publishing business, and find out that the post office department will only carry newspapers to bona fide subscribers such as established newspapers possess, except on payment of postage at regular printed matter rates which is equivalent to a cent a paper. This on three or four thousand papers would mean $30 or $40 a week and the result is one of two things, either that that number of papers is not sent out; or the length of time they are sent out is reduced. Then the advertiser who patronized the scheme wants to look out. Even supposing the post offices flooded with a new, unestablished paper, more like an advertising sheet than a legitimate newspaper, do you suppose the parties they were addressed to would accept them and read them like they do the old established papers they have been reading most of their lives? Not much! and the advertiser in such sheets might as well burn his money for all the return he will get for it. An expert and reliable jeweler can and will tell you a diamond of the first water and spot the paste imitation—it would be wise to heed his advice wouldn't it when you go to buy a diamond. An expert and reliable newspaper man can and will just as surely tell you the difference between the genuine and fake advertising mediums—and the business man would be wise to heed such advice wouldn't he when he wants to advertise.

Business men who will not come and let us reason together over this matter are pretty sure to be unreasonable altogether.

One hundred and forty trains of forty cars, each car loaded with one thousand bushels of oats, would carry 560,000 bushels. This was the cargo of the steamer, Midland Prince, recently from Fort Arthur to Midland. This is the largest cargo of oats on record. Last year, 530,000 bushels was the highest, and was carried by the steamer Osler.

YOU'RE A BRICK.

No doubt you have often heard one man say to another, when he is very much pleased: "You are a brick, old fellow!"

Perhaps you will think it is a very queer thing to say, but I will tell you how such a saying is said to have come in use.

Many, many years ago a famous king sent an ambassador to another famous king. The ambassador was much surprised to find that the king whom he was visiting had no walls around his city.

In those days, of course, in order to keep out enemies, nearly every city was surrounded by strong and high walls. So the surprised ambassador said to the king, "Why, you have no walls for the city?"

"We have," said the king.

"Where, where?" asked the ambassador, more surprised than ever.

The king then pointed to his large army, which was not far away, and said, with a smile, "There are the walls of my city. Every man you see is a brick!"

The king meant that an enemy would have to defeat these soldiers before they—that is, the enemy—could enter the city.—North American.

FOR SKIN DISEASES.

A Treatment that Costs Nothing Unless It Provides Satisfactory Relief.

We have a grayish-white ointment with a pleasant odor that is clean to use, which we believe is the best known remedy for the relief of skin diseases. It is especially efficacious for overcoming eczema in all its various forms, ring worm, acne, pimples, blotches, insect bites, tetter, certain forms of ulcers, sores and wounds. It is strongly antiseptic, cleansing, soothing and healing. It stops all itching and burning caused by skin eruptions.

We are so positive this ointment is unequalled that we offer it with the distinct understanding that if after having given it a reasonable trial, you are not satisfied with the results, you have only got to tell us and we will, without quibbling, return every cent paid us for it. We exact no promises or obligations whatever.

We want you to try Rexall Eczema Ointment. The first application gives a refreshing sense of relief, and because of its germ destroying power, it eradicates the germ or parasite which causes eczema and many other eruptions. It quickly allays the inflammation, gives protection to the inflamed surfaces, and helps restore healthy tissue. It is particularly active in relieving skin ailments peculiar to children. You certainly cannot lose anything by trying it. We would not dare make this offer except we are positive Rexall Eczema Ointment will satisfactorily benefit you. Two sizes, 50c. and $1.00. THE TYRANNY OF THE TWO BIG ROADS.

From The Canadian Miller, Toronto.—There is no problem of more importance to the material interests of the milling and grain trade than that of railway transportation. It will be a permanent problem for these interests because of the enormous distances of the wheat fields from the centres of consumption and manufacture, because of the great stretches in the mid-continent devoid of cheap fuel, and because of the added cost of shipment in winter.

One of the giant evils of the Canadian commonwealth to which the strike on the Grand Trunk Railway system will direct attention is the undue influence of the great railway and other corporations in the councils of government.

If ever there was a commercial undertaking which is the creature and offspring of a government, it is the Canadian Pacific Railway. If, ever there was a corporation which should be in perpetual subservience to the people and government who created it, that corporation is the C. P. R. Bonused to the extent of millions from the public treasury and further subsidized by grants of land now worth billions of dollars, and favored with the important asset of the good-will of the people, the only limit to its opportunities for expansion was that profits beyond ten per cent. should be returned to the people. This was the provision in its charter, but for years past it has been creating one subsidiary company after another as a means of burying out of reach the profits which it could not otherwise dispose of, and dividing among its shareholders the watered interests thus created. Our government is blind, and deaf, and dumb to these transactions, and, what is still more lamentable, so far the leading members of parliament in opposition are silent on the subject. In the press it is left to a few papers, led by The Toronto World, to denounce this giant wrong.

Then follows the Grand Trunk, which, after receiving millions from the provinces before the date of confederation, persuades the government to build the unprofitable ends of a transcontinental system of railway while itself retaining unfettered control of the fat centre, and it is estimated that these unprofitable ends will cost the country $200,000,000 instead of 30 or 50 millions originally counted on. Most people approved of the new transcontinental railway, but there was no reason why the people should not own or control the whole. Instead of this we have a second monster corporation on the back of government controlling and dictating its transportation policy and withholding from the people the cheap and safe facilities to which they are entitled as creators of these undertakings.

And now, when the strike is on and the general public so much inconvenienced, the plea of the Grand Trunk for refusing to give the standard wages to its striking employees is that it is not yet able to charge the "high rates" obtained by the C.P.R. in the west, and so cannot afford the increase to the men.

In other words, the exploitation already suffered by the people at the hands of the C.P.R. must be permitted at the hands of the G.T.R. before it can afford to yield to what would otherwise be a just claim of its men.

VERY SUDDEN DEATH.

William Wray, of Belgrave, Called Away Without Warning.

It is with feelings of deepest regret that the Advance records the sudden death of Mr. Wm. Wray, of Belgrave, which occurred on Saturday morning last. On that morning he appeared to be in his usual health, and after seeing a friend away on the train drove to his son-in-law's, Mr. J. A. Brandon of East Wawanosh, where men were working at the telephone line, and placing a post, at which he voluntarily rendered assistance. Suddenly, he complained of shortness of breath and asked for a drink of water. Before his daughter could bring it, life's brittle thread had broken, his spirit had taken its flight. Mr. Wray was born in Chinguacousy, in the county of Peel, December 13th, 1842, hence he was in his 68th year. He was of English descent, and inherited the loyal spirit of the United Empire Loyalist. In his young manhood he chose Miss Crowe as his life partner, who proved a faithful helpmate to him, and soon after their marriage came with his parents in 1864 to the township of Morris, settling on the 3rd line. His long residence in the township, and upright character, won for him many friends, and general esteem. He was for a time Reeve of the township and a member of the County Council. In religious matters he adhered to the Methodist Church, and for many years was an office bearer. Politically, he gave his support to the Conservative party, but was tolerant in his views, and willing to accord others the right to their own opinions. His bereaved partner in life has now to bear a double load of grief, for word has reached her that her brother, Mr. John Crowe, died on Sunday last in Winnipeg hospital. Mr. Wray leaves one son, G. B. Wray, of South Dakota, and one daughter, Mrs. Jos. A. Brandon, of East Wawanosh. There are also three sisters, Mrs. Geo. Daley, of Belgrave, Mrs. A. McCague, of Beeton, and Mrs. Horner, of Michigan. The funeral took place on Tuesday to the Brandon cemetery, a very large number of friends evidencing their respect for the deceased and sympathy for the bereaved. The funeral service was conducted by his pastor, Rev. J. Durant. Mr. Wray was a staunch friend of the Advance, and for several years its faithful correspondent at Belgrave. In his notes, he was always kind and sympathetic, avoiding offence, and never wrote a line in malice or ill-will. To the editor, he was a true, personal friend, and we shall miss his kind words and faithful, efficient co-operation. Belgrave has lost a good man, and a true-hearted citizen, and the Advance a highly esteemed friend and helper.—Wingham Advance.

BANK OF HAMILTON

THRIFT is rightly described as "Economical Management."

A shrewd business man is spoken of as thrifty because he saves.

Perhaps only a dollar at a time—perhaps more—but the real secret of his success lies in the principle of saving.

One dollar will start an account with the Bank of Hamilton.

A new sixty foot span steel bridge is under construction over the Credit River at Cataract. The piers are completed and the approach grading and superstructure will be placed in readiness as rapidly as possible.

Alliston has struck a flowing well at a depth of two hundred and fifty-six feet, which yields 75,000 gallons of water per day. The "gusher" was struck in the limestone rock and it is said there are strong indications of gas.

The Queen's Hotel in this place was opened up for business and the fence surrounding the sheds removed last week. There are two hotels and two restaurants now catering to the accommodation of the public in Dundalk.—Herald.

A Nevada divorce lawyer a short time ago spread through a section of Brooklyn his literature showing with what ease mis-mated couples can be separated in that state. This fell into the hands of the wives, and now husbands are busy trying to explain who started asking questions.

The Glorious Twelfth has added to its reputation. The Ayton Advance says that there were born in Minto, on July 12, 1910, to Mr. and Mrs. T. W. Ellis, twins, a boy and a girl. A coincidence occurred in connection with this birth in that the newly-born babies, the attending physician and the nurse were born on the same date.

Palgrave is going to have a weekly market, the opening took place on Wednesday afternoon, the 17th inst. Arrangements have been made to have buyers on hand who will purchase all the farm produce that is offered at good prices. The farmers of the district will consult their best interests by bringing their produce to this market.

There will be no issue of a new coinage bearing the effigy of King George until January. The mint will continue to stamp the coinage with the present dies until the end of the year. The new dies are being designed in England, and Canada and Britain are expected to have the first coins of the new reign simultaneously.

Wm. Wallace Simmons, a farmer, from Rosebank, Man., was stopped on the street in Toronto and received a $100 bill from a stranger in exchange for four fives. He said nothing thinking the joke was on the stranger, who quickly disappeared. When he afterwards tried to pass the bill he was arrested, it being a Confederate bill not worth five cents a bushel.

The town of Cochrane, New Ontario, was visited by a disastrous fire which started about 2 o'clock Sunday morning and destroyed nineteen business places, causing a loss of $150,000. The amount of insurance is small. The buildings were all frame and with no fire protection other than a bucket brigade, they were rapidly consumed. All the towns in that part of Ontario have, at some time or other, been devastated by fire.

There is nothing that adds more to the appearance of a town than well kept premises, neat yards, clean gardens, beautiful lawns, etc., and we say all honor to those who take a pride in these things. But it is a lamentable fact that there are some who take no pride in fixing up anything about them and are envious of others that do, and do not a little to annoy them by little unkind acts that tend in some way to mar the tidiness of another's premises.

A case of unusual interest to farmers was tried in the Division Court at Bradford recently. Mr. John Pugsley sued Mr. John Allan, of Churchill, for damages for refusal to deliver cattle sold. Mr. Allan claimed that the plaintiff Pugsley did not come for the cattle at the time agreed. Judge Wismer delivered judgment for $10 and costs in favor of Mr. Pugsley. The plaintiff claimed that the cattle were to be taken away during the first week of May and the defendant claimed the agreement was to take them away on the first day of day.

DEAFNESS CANNOT BE CURED by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by Catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

About a year ago the little son of Benjamin Robertson, lot 5, con. 6, Erin, was kicked by a horse and severely injured. While the lad grew better he never entirely recovered from the injury and a return of the malady last week caused his death on Sunday at the age of three years and seven months. The funeral was held on Monday, interment taking place at Fairview Cemetery, Acton.

The Cookstown Advocate says:—"The only person suffering from the Local Option law in Cookstown is the hotelkeeper. He is not turning over as much money. It is safe to say that no person in town is suffering for the want of booze, as a trip to the G.T.R. station will bear out this statement. All the drinking in town is done on the quiet. An odd drunk, however, finds his way to main street. One thing sure, no liquor can be had at either of the hotels.

We received a call on Saturday last from Mr. J. A. McClellan, of Winnipeg, formerly of Alton. Mr. McClellan is the inventor of a pneumatic automobile tire, made of steel, leather and rubber, by means of which the life of the tire will be prolonged from two to three hundred per cent. and will do away with the present rubber outer cover. Mr. McClellan has his own car equipped with one of his new tires.—Erin Advocate.

The Best Food For Children

It is a mistake, especially in the summer, to give children too much meat. Give them plenty of Clark's Pork and Beans. Wm. Clark, Mfr., Montreal.

You cannot prevent people sending their money out of their own locality to help support departmental stores, but the custom brings out some rare examples of cheek. For instance, persons who have got goods by mail that did not suit have asked town merchants to keep them in exchange for something else, and recently a man asked the clerk in charge of a gents' furnishing department to take his measure as he wanted to send away for a suit of clothes. From a business man's view-point words are almost inadequate to express his opinion of this kind of cheek.

A despatch from St. Catharines says:—"This city and other towns in the Niagara district are being flooded with bogus 25 and 50 cent. pieces. The counterfeits are excellent imitations of the genuine coins and it is said about the only way to detect them, as they ring true, is through a slight oversight on the part of the maker. In the genuine coins the crowned head is upside down when the reverse side is read, in the spurious ones both sides are topped the same. It is believed the bogus coins were manufactured in Buffalo and this district is being planted with them first.

TIRED, ACHING FEET.

How annoying to have the feet tired and aching, sore and chafed about the time you want to take a good long walk. You can get a world of comfort by using Dr. Chase's Ointment when the feet give you trouble. It heals and soothes the skin, makes it soft and natural and prevents corns and bunions.

"That no girls under 16, or boys under 14, be allowed on the streets after nine o'clock p.m., except in the company of their parents or some responsible person." This is a resolution passed by an association for the prevention of crime in Ontario. The association met at Guelph recently and this is one of the resolutions passed. It bears out the idea that a large part of the wrong-doing committed in after life is learned by the boys and girls who are allowed to roam the streets till all hours of the night. They recognize that it is a drawback to the morality of the country. Many towns are taking up the matter, and are passing by-laws which cover this resolution and are going to see that they are strictly enforced.

A prominent New York banking house displays the following notice in their corridors: "Cigar smoking is permissible, pipe smoking is tolerated, but the use of cigarettes is forbidden." In response to an inquiry says Dr. Crothers, the manager said: "I have found by bitter experience that the cigarette smoker is the most degenerate of all the persons I deal with. He is careless, reckless, untruthful, and utterly wanting in manhood and frankness; his brain is bewildered, and there is nothing before him but rolling cigarettes, taking a few puffs, and considering himself equal to any occasion. I don't know the reason, but the cigarette smoker is the most nervous, childish, faithless man that we have anything to do with."

—Men's 50c. linen and straw hats half price, 25c., at McMillan & Torrie's.

An Irishman dying in a remote village in Ireland, his relatives were anxious to have his name and date of his birth and death engraved upon a coffin plate. "How old was he?" asked the tinker. "Twenty-eight," was the reply. "Well, said the tinker, "I'm afraid I can't do the job for I can't make an 8, there's too many circles in it, but I could make you four sevens if that will do ye. Four sevens are twenty-eight." The compromise was accepted and the coffin plate nailed to the coffin. At the funeral the officiating clergyman said: "Brethren and sisters, we are gathered together to pay the last tribute of respect to our deceased brother, who passed away at the early age of"—here he paused and readjusted his spectacles—"at the early age of 7777 years. Great Scott Brethren! he was born before the flood!" —Exchange.

THE BANNER

THURSDAY, AUGUST 25, 1910

SUCCESS DEARLY BOUGHT.

Death came last week to one of the most successful business men of Toronto. It came at a time that, for one with so magnificent a constitution, should have been in the prime of life. The untimely ending was undoubtedly hastened by too close application to business. The long hours spent in an office in the midst of the city's most crowded center did not mark the limit of the day's work; before coming down in the morning and after returning home at night an active mind was always dealing with the problems presented by a great industrial enterprise. Even at night a pad was at the bedside on which ideas that arose during temporary wakefulness were dotted down. The candle was not only burned at both ends but in the middle as well. No wonder it went out so soon.

This case is not a singular one by any means. Few men who attain prominence in industrial or public life reach old age. Most of them go off before the sun is fairly past the meridian. Young men on the farm, at the threshold of life, who hear only of the successes attained in cities do not know the price that in the majority of cases is paid for the same. There are no millionaires on the farm, but there is usually a competence, and a green old age in which to enjoy it, together with the comforts and pleasures of real home life from the beginning to the end. —The Weekly Sun.

CHILDREN ON THE STREETS.

In his annual report Mr. J. J. Kelso, Superintendent of the Department for the Protection of Neglected and Dependent Children, has something important to say concerning "children on the streets." "Parents," Mr. Kelso says, "cannot too often be reminded of the great evil resulting from allowing children the freedom of the streets after dark. The habit should never be allowed to grow on young people, for it is a habit that is acquired early and is hard to break up later. Highly respectable mothers are at fault in this particular and not until it is too late do they realize their mistake. How often we have had to listen to sad stories of youthful wrongdoing, and while listening have realized that parental carelessness was largely the cause of it all. Home should be made a pleasant place for the children and they should be taught by the stern rule of parental authority that street corner loitering after dark will not be tolerated."

Orangeville parents should pay heed to this message of warning. No good can come of allowing children to roam the streets at will after night.

OUR FALL FAIR.

Merchants Should Make Hall Displays

The Dufferin Agricultural Society will hold its annual fall fair on September 15th and 16th. The Directors are busy making preparations to ensure a first-class show and in this they should have the assistance of the public generally. Our business men can add to the attractiveness of the exhibit in the hall this year by good big displays. Do not leave the matter until too late, but see Secretary Kelly at once and secure a space for the showing of goods. Let all put a shoulder to the wheel and make this a good year.

HIGH SALARIES.

Salaries in all lines are advancing but in none so rapidly as Stenography. Young ladies graduating from the Orangeville Business College during the past year have started at from Ten ($10) to Fifteen Dollars ($15) per week and several lady graduates of a few years ago are receiving Twelve Hundred Dollars ($1200) per annum. Any young lady can master Stenography in six months and Mr. Spotton personally guarantees all graduates positions within ten days of graduation. For young men, Stenography is the key to success. A male graduate of two years ago is now receiving Two Thousand Five Hundred Dollars ($2500) per annum. Parents should teach their boys that which they will practice when they become men. The business world is asking for young people, who have a business education. Mr. Spotton's chain of Colleges last year trained over sixteen hundred students at the the advantage of a Commercial training should write him.

INSTITUTE SOCIAL.

Camilla branch of the Women's Institute held a very successful lawn social on Mr. Alex. Mann's spacious grounds on the evening of Aug. 12th. The weather was ideal and, considering the busy season of the year, the people of the surrounding country turned out well. The programme, which was excellent, was thoroughly enjoyed by all. Mr. John Best, M. P. made a very efficient chairman. Mrs. (Rev.) White, of Laurel, gave an instructive address on the work of the Women's Institute, which was very much appreciated. Special mention might be made of Miss Patterson, of Shelburne, who delighted the audience with two well-rendered solos. The members of the Institute appreciated very much the valuable assistance, which was so cheerfully given by our home talent, viz.,— Miss Marshall, Miss White and Camilla Glee Club. We cannot speak too highly of the kindness of Mr. and Mrs. Mann to whom much of the enjoyment of the evening was due. The receipts amounted to $52.

A DESTRUCTIVE STORM.

Farmers in Mono and Amaranth Have Their Crops Destroyed by Hail.

A terrific rain and hail storm crossed Dufferin County on Monday afternoon of last week. The vivid lightning and terrific thunder gave evidence of the intensity of the atmospheric disturbance. The rain fell in torrents, and was accompanied in some places by a heavy downfall of hail. The storm was at its worst across the centre of Amaranth and Mono townships. A section of the two townships extending north and south from lots 13 to 19 and east and west from the 3rd line, Amaranth, to the Centre Road, Mono, was devastated by hail. Hailstones are said to have fallen as large as hens' eggs. Standing grain was cut and beaten down flat on the ground and some of the farmers in the storm zone will have nothing to cut or thresh this year. Windows suffered on the north and west sides of the houses and scarcely a farm house in the section escaped without more or less broken glass. The village of Camilla was right in the path of the storm. In the King Edward hotel alone no less than 27 panes of glass were demolished. After the storm the fields were covered with hailstones of all sizes, in some places to a depth of several inches. On G. D. Ledlow's farm in Mono there was a pile of hailstones 35 feet long, 10 feet in width and a foot deep. Among those who suffered worst were Messrs. W. T. Leader, W. R. Rintoul, J. J. Anderson, John Staveley, W. T. Johnston, David Dudgeon, Trimble Bros., Large Bros., James White, John Turner, John McNaughton, Thos. Buchanan, G. D. Ledlow, M. H. Reid, Thos. Jackson, James Hand, Wm. A. Curry, Jas. Montgomery, G. W. Rayfield, Jos. Howard and Robert Reid. Mr. John Staveley, who was completely cleaned out, is particularly unfortunate as he had a similar experience, when the same district was visited by hail four years ago. Mr. J. J. Anderson and some others along the west side of the devastated area were also sufferers four years ago.

WALKER—HACKETT.

Mr. Joseph George Walker, manager of the Sprague sash and door factory, was married to Martha Jane Hackett, of 479 Gertrude Street, at the Fort Rouge Methodist church at 4 p. m. yesterday. The ceremony was performed by Rev. H. Irvine. The happy couple left for Kenora on their honeymoon.—Winnipeg Free Press.

SPEERS—WILKINSON.

At Cheltenham on Wednesday of last week a very pretty wedding took place when Miss Mildred Wilkinson, daughter of Mr. Hugh Wilkinson, became the bride of Mr. Richard Speers, of Mono Mills. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Mr. Gray, assisted by Rev. J. G. Cheyne, in the presence of sixty guests, friends and relatives of the young couple, both of whom are very popular. The bride wore a handsome gown of white silk mull, with bridal veil and wreath. She was unattended. After the wedding breakfast had been served Mr. and Mrs. Speers left in an automobile for Toronto and other points. On their return they will reside at Mono Mills. Sincere wishes for their happiness accompany them to their new home, in which the Conservator joins heartily.—Brampton Conservator.

MARRIED THE GIRL.

High Constable Hughes took a jaunt to Cobourg a week ago Monday and returned on the evening train accompanied by William Hackett, a young man who formerly resided here and who was wanted by the local authorities on a charge of seducing a girl under 21 years of age, under promise of marriage. The prisoner was brought before P. M. Pattullo the same evening, pleaded not guilty and was remanded until Friday. Before the time for his trial arrived Hackett decided to marry the girl. The ceremony was performed by Rev. G. A. Rix, in the jail on Friday morning. Hackett escorted his bride to her mother's home, then went to his own home and is said to have left town Friday evening. He has not been seen about town since and it is beginning to look as if he has heartlessly deserted the bride he has vowed to love and cherish. There is general sympathy for the girl who is decidedly prepossessing in appearance and modest in her demeanor. She is in a delicate condition and in the natural course of events will become a mother within a few weeks.

Official Programme Canadian National Exhibition FREE THIS YEAR

It has been found that the farm laborers' excursions already run from Ontario points have not produced as many laborers as expected and, as the harvesting operations in Ontario are about over for this year, two additional excursions are being run from all stations in Ontario by the Canadian Pacific Railway at rate of $10.00 to Winnipeg and points east of Moose Jaw on Main Line and Branch Lines on Tuesday, August 30th, and Tuesday, September 6th. Special trains will be run through from Toronto to Winnipeg with no change of cars, thus avoiding transfer troubles and customs arrangements en route. Tickets will be issued to women but there will be half rate tickets for children.

WITH THE BOWLERS

Three rinks of Orangeville lawn bowlers took part in the Dominion Bowling Association tournament in Toronto last week. The tournament was the largest and best ever held in the Queen City, over one hundred rinks competing. The McKeown rink admittedly a strong quartette, experienced the hard luck that comes occasionally to the best of bowlers and went down and out in one, two, three order. The Hurndall and Carson rinks made a very creditable showing, the latter getting as far as the seventh round in the Toronto Cup competition. The games in which the local rinks figured and the results were as follows :—

WASTE LANDS AND ALFALFA.

An agricultural exchange tells of an interesting experiment in alfalfa growing in New Jersey. "In that state," our authority says, "are many acres of sandy land that heretofore have been largely unproductive. A few years ago the experiment was tried of seeding these lands to alfalfa. One farmer has over fifty acres of these sandy lands growing alfalfa, and has successfully demonstrated that this splendid fodder plant can be effectively used to bring undeveloped sandy lands under profitable cultivation. In Ontario there are some sandy areas on which it is impossible to make a living by ordinary farming methods. The government has taken over some of these lands and is having them reforested. Might it not be possible with some of the better land in these areas, to seed to alfalfa and thus make it profitable farming land? The plan adopted in New Jersey is heavy liming. In addition there must be proper inoculation of the soil and the use of good alfalfa seed. The sand areas in Ontario are located within a short distance of the leading markets, and the experiment might well be tried of endeavoring to grow alfalfa on a part of them at least. Reforesting is valuable, no doubt, but it will take many years before the lands, so treated, will return a revenue. If alfalfa can be grown, the lands can be made to return a revenue in a few years."

COACH LEFT THE RAILS

The last coach of the regular C.P.R. passenger train left the track on the Horseshoe Curve a week ago Friday morning. Two of the passengers, Mrs. Colbeck, of East Luther, and Clifford Day, of Teeswater, received severe injuries and there were a number of minor casualties. After leaving the rails the coach rolled over on its side. Young Day jumped from the front end of the coach as it toppled over, but did not manage to get clear. The injured persons were given first aid by Dr. McFayden, of Charleston and were afterwards taken to the Toronto Western Hospital.

The proceeds amounted to fifty dollars and it is hoped that the ladies will make the function an annual affair.

MONO MILLS.

Mono Mills Methodist Church Circuit annual garden party was held on Tuesday night on Mr. Peter Rawn's grounds. The rain of the afternoon and the threatening appearance of the heavens during the evening kept many from attending who would otherwise have been there but there was a good turnout. A supper such as is seldom seen at an out of doors entertainment was served by the ladies. There was a debate among the ladies of Albion, Caledon and Mono as to which section furnished the greater supply of the delicacies but the majority seemed to be in favor of Albion. It was not only that the provisions were good but they were daintily served and the tables presented a most enticing appearance. The willing waiters catered to everybody's wants. After supper the programme was given on the lawn, a platform having been erected in front of the house. The chair was occupied by Mr. Wm. Riddell, ex-Reeve of Albion, who performed his duties with excellent satisfaction to all present. The Connor Brass Band discoursed good music throughout the evening, and the ever popular Caledon East Quartette delighted the audience with their numerous selections. Addresses were delivered by the Rev. Mr. Marshall, the newly appointed pastor of the circuit, the Rev. Mr. Lunau, of Palgrave, Richard Blain, M.P., and Samuel Charters, M.P.P. The latter two gentlemen were conveyed to the garden party by Mr. S. H. Mitchell, of Brampton, in his McLaughlin motor car.

Mr. Rawn's residence is surrounded by the most beautiful cedar hedge to be found in the county and the large, well kept lawn presented an opportunity to the young people to enjoy a promenade. Everything was done by the host and hostess to make the entertainment successful and their whole souled efforts were appreciated by the committee and others interested. —Brampton Conservator.

Mr. Charlie Rayfield is home from Montreal.

Miss Hunter, of Hillsburg has returned to her duties as teacher.

It was with regret that we learned of the death of Mrs. Eliza Henry, widow of the late Andrew Henry. Mrs. Henry had lived for many years on the farm on which she died and was very highly thought of by all who had the pleasure and benefit of her friendship. She will be much missed and to the sorrowing relatives goes out the heartfelt sympathy of all. The services at the house and grave were conducted by Rev. Mr. Rose, of Alton, assisted by Rev. Mr. Allen, of Toronto.

The hail storm which passed over our burgh last Monday left destruction in its trail, completely demolishing the crops on the farms through which it passed, and leaving the grain so badly broken that it will be impossible to gather it for even feeding purposes. About eighteen or twenty farmers will not require the use of the threshing machine at all. However the majority are blessed with optimistic natures and are not as down-hearted as the occasion might warrant.

Two little girls last Friday night,
Hung on to a fellow with all their might.
They hadn't had one for ever so long,
No wonder something in their heads went wrong.

The birdies' thought they were cutting a dash,
But they displayed their folly rather rash
By saying things they'd no right to say,
And so disgusting the boy in light grey.

Howard Armstrong Hill, who was in his 22nd year, was born in this village, and was the eldest son of Mr. J. J. Hill and Mrs. Hill (nee Cunnington) now of Toronto, but former residents of this village for a number of years. Howard, it will be remembered, was accidentally drowned in the Humber river on July 6th, and the body was not recovered, till Wednesday of last week, Aug. 17th, five weeks after. The funeral took place last Thursday afternoon, from his parents' residence, 103 Givenes St., Toronto, to Prospect cemetery. Service was held at the house, conducted by Rev. Mr. Despard, assisted by Revs. Creighton and Vaughan. Mr. Norman A. Craig, of Queen St., west, had charge of the undertaking arrangements. Deceased spent the first 17 years of his life in this village, and in 1906 got a situation in the mail order department of the T. Eaton Co., Toronto, which position he held till the unfortunate occurrence. Several beautiful wreaths were sent, among them the following: from The T. Eaton Co.; one from the employees of the Mail Order Department; and a special one from an individual employee of that department. There was also a contingent of four sent to the funeral to represent the T. Eaton Co. Other wreaths were received from the following:—the Young Men's Club, of which he was a member; one from the Bible Class, of Westmoreland Ave. Methodist Church; one from the china department of the Robert Simpson Co., and one from two sympathizing neighbors. The wreath from his parents was "The Gates Ajar," with the name "Howard" printed on ribbon. The remains were followed to the grave by numerous relatives and friends from Beeton, Caledon East, Woodbridge, Toronto and other places.

The Misses Alexander, of Toronto, are visiting friends here.

Mr. James Duke met with a rather serious accident on Sunday evening, the 14th inst. While riding a spirited colt along the town line it threw him and he received a bad cut on the side of his head. He was carried into Mr. Burden's and a doctor was quickly in attendance but no serious results are expected. He has been employed with Mr. W. J. Holmes during the summer.

Miss Lundy, of Balaclhava, has been engaged to teach in the school here and is boarding at the home of Mr. W. A. Bowling.

PALGRAVE.

The trustees of the village sold the village debenture for ten hundred and fifty dollars. They realized fifty dollars premium on them as the debentures were for one thousand dollars for ten years at 5 per cent. The trustees are to be congratulated upon the sale.

A cash weekly market is held every week at Palgrave, beginning on Aug. 17, 1910, and henceforth will be held every Wednesday. The village fathers have arranged for the services of four good buyers from Toronto wholesalers, who have and will pay the highest prices for all kinds of farm produce. Palgrave is geographically well situated for a good market surrounded as it is with one of the finest agricultural and dairy districts in the Province of Ontario. In the neighborhood of perhaps a thousand dollars' worth of farm produce was marketed last Wednesday by the fair maidens of the village, which for quality and finish, had no equal, and which speaks well for Palgrave's future market. Everyone patronizing our market will secure the finest accommodation and highest prices. The Imperial Bank located here is of great use and the buyers pay through it entirely. Come along and secure the highest prices paid anywhere for your produce.

The trustees have installed a splendid lighting system known as "The Rice Knight Limited." The lamps are 1500 c.p. and certainly give a very fine light when properly understood and operated. The inhabitants will no longer walk in a state of darkness—neither do they prefer it as their deeds are not evil.

Grading has been started again under the able management of Mr. George Zimmerman in the village and as soon as completed the sidewalks will be built and other permanent improvements made to our Police Village.

Mr. and Mrs. Nathan G. Henderson are at present rusticating on the Pacific coast. They will be absent until October 1, 1910.

Master Hughie Myers, who had the misfortune to fall from an apple tree one day last week and sprain one of his wrists rather badly, is getting along nicely.

Miss Della Patterson, of Orangeville, spent Sunday with Miss Alma Patterson.

Miss Vivien Martin, of Toronto, is spending a few weeks' holidays with her cousin, Miss Alma Martin.

Mr. Donald McLean has opened a paint shop and is prepared to fill all orders in his line on short notice. Mr. McLean is a good workman and has the best wishes of our citizens for success in his venture.

Locals fans agree that the baseball game played here on Saturday between Alton and Hillsburg teams, was one of the best seen on the home grounds this year. Alton won by 11 to 7, but the boys had to play their best to win. Hillsburg has a strong nine this year. They play snappy ball and every man of the team plays the game from start to finish. The locals deserve praise for their well-earned victory.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Merkeley, and children, of Shelburne, spent a week ago Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. Ben Cockerill.

We are informed that some of our townsmen can secure all the "hard stuff" they can dispose of in our village. It is hoped that an investigation some of these fine days may bring the offenders to justice.

A load of our "Queen" street citizens had a very successful trip to the huckleberry marsh near Grand Valley last Wednesday.

The Presbyterian Church was struck by lightning during the thunderstorm on Monday morning. The bolt struck the chimney shattering it and then ran across the roof ripping off a strip of the shingles and sheeting about two feet in width and demolishing a couple of the rafters. Fortunately the edifice did not take fire. It will take $100 or more to repair the damage to the building.

Profound sympathy is felt for Mr. George Tilcox, of Credit Forks, whose home was cruelly bereaved on Sunday, Aug. 14th, by the death of his young wife. The sad event followed child birth. Mrs. Tilcox was only 18 years of age and is survived by her husband and an infant child only one day old at the time of its mother's death. The remains were interred in the cemetery at Boston Mills on the following Tuesday.

There was a large attendance of sorrowing friends and acquaintances at the funeral of the late Samuel Barber, whose regrettable demise was recorded in last issue of The Banner. Rev. Chas. Langford, pastor of the Methodist Church, and Rev. G. W. Rose, pastor of the Presbyterian Church, conducted the services. Deceased was buried with Masonic honors, about fifty of the brethern of Harris Lodge, Orangeville, and Wellington Lodge, Erin, attending the funeral in a body. The impressive service of the Order was read over the open grave by W. Bros. Dr. R. Meek and J. A. V. Preston, of Orangeville. The floral tributes were numerous and included beautiful designs from the Masonic fraternity, the A. O. U. W., Methodist Church, Sunday School, Epworth League, Men's Bible Class and the family. All business places were closed during the funeral.

ROSEHILL.

Dr. Stork has been very busy round here lately, and the proud parents are smiling hugely. One of them has not been content with vulgar prose. Rhyme alone will fit the occasion.

My wife, my darling joy,
Has got a baby boy,
I feel so pleased I shall go mad;
The neighbors say it's clever,
It's better late than never,
I am so very proud that I'm a Dad.

On Friday Thos. E. Newell was working with a number of other men at the moving of a barn on his father's farm near Kilbride. He and a young man, William Bousfield, were under one corner of the barn, which was about ten feet above the ground. A supporting timber broke, the corner dropped and the building collapsed. Timbers fell across the lower part of young Newell's body, crushing the pelvic bones and killing him instantly. The removal of his body from the wreck occupied about half an hour. Mr. Bousfield had a miraculous escape. He was unhurt, but a brother of Mr. Newell fell from the building and one of his knees was hurt. Thos. E. Newell was a son of Arthur Newell, was about 23 years of age and was a general favorite. He was to have been married soon and to have taken possession of a farm given him by his father. The funeral took place on Sunday and was one of the largest on record in the neighborhood. There were about 300 vehicles in the procession.—Conservator.

WHY SOME DON'T GO TO CHURCH

Men Who Go to Church for Bread Will not Return if Served With Sawdust.

In a recent issue of the Star Weekly appeared an article by "Canidus" in which he reported the conversation of three men on a boat from Hamilton to Toronto giving their reasons for not going to church. Those who read and discussed that article will be interested in the views expressed in an English journal by a spirited layman.

"The last time I was in Switzerland," he writes, "I put up at an hotel close by a large Roman church. It used to be filled with worshippers every Sunday morning before suburban London gets its breakfast. There they were a great crowd gathered together for Mass, and by their demeanor when they came out I gathered that they had thoroughly enjoyed the privilege. You don't want a grouse club and a mothers' meeting to keep a church like that going. Worship was enough. But here in London it is the same in many churches, Anglican and Roman, where the spirit is really alive. Among Nonconformists, I can remember a class being formed in Finsbury by the Society of Friends which drew together crowds of men before breakfast. Somehow the thing can be done. People will go where there is something to go for. Whether it be worship and praise, or teaching and preaching the truth holds good. Where the spirit of life is, there you will find a congregation. Where a preacher, moved by that same spirit, has something to say, and can say it intelligently there the hushed congregation will listen with an interest and a concentration such as no other kind of assembly can match.

"Have you been in St. Paul's Cathedral on a Sunday afternoon and heard Canon Holland move that great congregation to its depths? Have you been to the City Temple on a weekday when Mr. Campbell was preaching and note how the people hung on his words, simply spoken but forcible; without rhetoric yet convincing by their sincerity. Where the spirit is expressing itself preaching, there the people will be drawn by irresistible appeal. No counter-attraction, motor cars, balloons, tennis or river picnics will have a chance. But when men go to the house of God for bread and get sawdust; when an act of praise or worship is clearly perfunctory; spoiled by slovenliness and unfaith; when the preacher does not, or cannot, handle the great truths of his creed, so as to touch the reason or the hearts of his hearers; when he can show no correspondence between the spirit of God and the spirit of man; when he can present no clear issues; when he can solve none of the great problems of our day in the light of his gospel; when he can give no help and no hope to suffering humanity; in short, when the spirit of the living God finds no medium or expression in his ministry, why should the people go there?

"The wonder is that so many do go; that the flocks keep together at all when the shepherd is not sure of his vocation, and fails in consequence to give the poor sheep a lead. All the thousand and one fussy efforts of our pastors to keep up the interest in their tabernacles and churches, for which, mind you, the lay folk do give them, because they see that they have lost faith in the gospel of their Lord, to do the work He initiated, all these misdirected efforts, I say, should be put in the dust bin with the waste refuse, and the "chosen vessels" to their proper work. To teach the ordinances, the sacraments, to render worship and to praise God, to keep the faith once delivered to the saints, this surely was what they were intended for, and not to keep an art public-house without beer; not to run a dancing saloon, or to give stage entertainments; not to promote bazaars, and resort to tricks for which a shopkeeper would get three months; not to train politicians, and tell people which way to vote; not by the patronage of the infirm and feeble-minded on Sunday by a dole of stew."

The sixth annual convention of the Provincial Association of Vegetable Growers will be held this year in London on September 14, and there will be representatives of all the associations in the province at the meeting. The convention has always previously been held in Toronto, but the London association made big representation at the last convention, and succeeded in getting London named for this year. Local gardeners will attend.

Healthy Happy Children

As everyday food for growing children, good bread and butter is much more wholesome than meat. It is lighter in the stomach, more easy to digest and furnishes every element of health and strength necessary for the growing child, provided the flour is rich in that fine quality of high grade gluten which distinguishes Ogilvie's

Royal Household Flour.

It is this rich nourishing element which makes children grow fat and happy when given plenty of bread made from this finest of all flours. Children thrive on it. It puts flesh on their bones and brings the rosy flush of health to their cheeks.

This is not so with bread made from inferior flours. It falls very far short of being whole food and fails to build up strong, vigorous growth. For the children's sake buy the best flour—Ogilvie's Royal Household. It counts for health and happiness. Best and most nutritious for pastry as well as for bread.

"Ogilvie's Book for a Cook," with 125 pages of recipes that have been tried and tested, will be sent free if you will send us your address and mention the name of your dealer.

TRANSCONTINENTAL DIALOGUES.

By AUGUSTUS BRIDLE.

(From Canadian Courier.)

The National Transcontinental Grand Opera Company is not yet stranded. The bright particular stars, Sir Wilfrid Laurier and Hon. George Graham, have played to capacity houses ever since they struck the West. Travelling in their own private train, as exclusive as any circus, this aggregation of stars of the first magnitude have kept on trail of the advance agent without having to jump a single hotel bill or leave any luggage as security — and they will not be under the necessity of counting ties to get home.

The play bill in the centre of this page presents a few random scenes from the Grand Trunk Pacific drama which a few years ago began to be written round the legend, "Cox Can't Wait," and at which several playwright people particularly in the House of Commons and the sanctums of sundry editors have been tinkering ever since. This opera contains two scenes; one from Winnipeg to Moncton; one from Winnipeg to Prince Rupert. The original cost of staging the eastern scene was supposed to be fifty-one millions. This has been amended. What the other scene cost nobody seems to care; so long as it keeps moving.

The photographs were taken at a point west of Superior Junction. Similar pictures might have been taken a few days earlier of another impressive scene on the eastern section; when the new town of Graham, north of Fort William, was christened; but the photographer was not there.

The actors are in the best of spirits.

Scene: Rather wild country; early morning; background of spruce and jackpine; tepees of some Cree Indians over by a wooded creek.

Enter from the green room—Pullman—the Premier, Hon. George Graham, Senator Gibson, Mr. E. M. Macdonald, Mr. F. F. Pardee, Engineer Poulin and Mr. McArthur (constructionist), both of the G.T.P. and Secretary Jones of the Railway Department.

Premier: "Ah! A perfect natural theatre."

Macdonald: "Oh Wabigoon! List to the murmuring jackpines."

Graham: "George! I'm hungry. I could eat a bushel of huckleberries." Goes picking berries.

Macdonald: "Hmn! Wish I had Graham's Irish temperament. He doesn't seem to realize, Gibson, that we're halted between Manitoba and the Tory editors raising the deuce about the cost of the G. T. P. eastern section. Just a few miles from here are the very rocks that George E. Foster was chucking across the House last session. A few hours more and we'll be hearing the howls from Manitoba about boundaries."

Pardee: "Don't worry, Mac. The West likes oratory."

Senator Gibson: "And there's room for thirty millions in the golden glorious West."

Graham: "Good! It's poetry they want. I could write odes here. I'll do one—"

Macdonald: "Yes, sort of a box-car sonnet, eh?"

Pardee: "How many of the thirty millions will be good Grits?"

Gibson: "That's what we're out to discover."

Graham: "Sir Wilfrid laughs. What now? Beg pardon, Sir Wilfrid!"

Premier (broadly hilarious): "Ah, Graham! How I wish Edward Blake were here. What a contrast we should show him!"

Graham: "Yes. Pity we can't use that axle-grease allusion, though. Sir John should have made that speech about the C. P. R. Still we can't kick. The G.T.P. is far more spectacular."

Macdonald: "History in politics is a queer thing. Now, George Brown would have gone in for the National Policy if Sir John Macdonald hadn't forestalled him. But we can't work that out West. Farmers out there don't believe in a protective tariff. Guess we'll stick to tariff for revenue only."

Pardee: "Well, we'll soon be out of the Tory editor belt, anyway. No matter what the western part of the road cost so long as it hauls out the wheat soon enough."

Gibson: "What a magnificent country! Dulce et decorum est pro patria—"

Sir Wilfrid: "Sh! We have not finished our work. Eh, my friends, but we are a long way from Ottawa; here in the haunts of the fur trader. Twenty-five years ago here the tomtom thumped to the whizz of the tomahawk. But now we are near the borders of a land where peace and plenty sit smiling upon every hill; where the smokes of the settlers rise like incense over a land that calls the nations of the world; and the Grand Trunk Pacific shall carry them." (Retires a few paces to inspect the track.)

F. F. Pardee: "Wonder where Oliver is now?"

Macdonald: "In the land of the midnight sun wearing Lochnieux. Ho-ho!"

Graham: "Mac—I think you mean shoepacks."

Gibson: "That's nothing. Earl Grey will wear moccasins anon."

Premier: "I say, friend McArthur—what weight of rails are these?"

McArthur: "Ninety pounds, Sir Wilfrid; made in Canada."

Premier: "Good! But I really would have thought—that a steel rail was heavier; much heavier. Hmn!"

Graham: "Say, boys, we've got time for a song before breakfast. You know I used to lead a choir down in Morrisburg. What's the matter with a quartette? Here, Pardee—you take the air; Senator Gibson, first bass—"

Pardee: "Out on first! Macdonald to bat."

Graham: "Order, fellows! We can't play baseball here. Wait till we get to the prairie. Mac—you'll take second bass. Now what'll we sing?"

Gibson: "Hmn! How about that touching parody—'Anybody Here Seen Lumsden?'"

Premier: "Ah, no! Sing 'O Canada!'"

They sing; but the combined effect is so much like "Yip-i-addi-i-ay!" that the Indians in the background begin to beat tomtoms.

Suddenly in the midst of the jubilation when the ardour of patriotism is at fever heat and the party have forgotten both politics and breakfast in the contemplation of the country, the whole country and nothing but the country—in rushes. Secretary Lemaire frantically waving a copy of a Conservative paper dropped from a handcar. He makes direct for the Premier, who adjusts his glasses.

"Treason, Sir Wilfrid!"

The Premier: "Eh?" Scanning the front page. "What's this? Never!"

All: "Why, what's the matter, Sir Wilfrid?"

The Premier—Paling a little; speaking slowly: "Ah! Merely a canard. I am sure of it. Hays would never do such a thing. No, no. There is nothing in this. I am quite sure the Globe has nothing of it. Absurd! To think, Graham, that our good Canadian wheat should ever get to the Atlantic by way of Chicago, robbing us of the eastward haul. Why, all this magnificent Winnipeg-to-Moncton section would be nothing but a white elephant!"

Graham: "Fudge! We should have annexation next. No, we'll have the Georgian Bay Canal—or my name's not George."

The Premier: "Yes. It must never be said—that the road built by Tories is more patriotic, more Imperial—than the Grand Trunk Pacific. No, my friends, every rail in this road is a new link in the Empire; every tie binds us yet more closely to the Mother Country. Have no fear. Mr. Hays will contradict this. It is a Tory hatch."

Conversation turns upon the Intercolonial, whose perennial deficit Hon. George Graham is credited with turning into a surplus, thereby depriving Tory editors of much good slang-whanging copy. Suddenly enters the Globe reporter reading aloud a headline—"Mackenzie wants the Intercolonial"; which so perturbs Mr. Graham that he thinks he is an editor again. Comes a lettergram wire from Hon. Mackenzie King to the Premier: "Hays misbehaving; am quoting you copy of his last two-line note—"

Graham: "By George! These old roads are more troublesome than the new one. Seems to me this is a railroad government—"

Pardee (slyly): "Say, Macdonald, the Minister of Labour may be Premieristic material; but it seems to me—"

Macdonald: "Hmn! Same here."

Graham, sonorously: "Come to breakfast, boys!"

The Agricultural Fall Fair Department has prepared a form of Judges' Book which they strongly recommend, in order to not only improve, but to create a uniform system.

After La Grippe

"I had suffered several weeks with LaGrippe. Had pains in my head and eyes. It felt as though there was a heavy weight on the top of my head, until it seemed that my brain would burst. I was so nervous that I could not rest or sleep. When I dozed off I would awake with a sudden jerking of my whole body. Dr. Miles' Nervine, Heart Remedy and Nerve and Liver Pills cured me. A number of friends have since realized the same benefits."

MRS. ALVIN H. LOCKS, Seabrook, N. H.

The after effects of LaGrippe are often more serious than the disease, as it leaves the system in a weakened condition that invites more serious troubles, such as pneumonia, etc.

Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine should be taken for some time to thoroughly restore nerve strength.

Worst Case Of Eczema

Cure only came when doctors gave up and DR. CHASE'S OINTMENT was used.

Mrs. Wm. Miller, St. Catherines, Ont., writes:—"My daughter Mary, when six months old, contracted eczema and for three years the disease baffled all treatment. Her case was one of the worst that had ever come under my notice, and she apparently suffered what no pen could ever describe. I had three different doctors attend her all to no purpose. Finally I decided to try Dr. Chase's Ointment and to my surprise she immediately began to improve and was completely cured of that long standing disease. That was four years ago when we lived at Cornwall, Ont., and as not a symptom has shown itself since, the cure must be permanent."

The record of cures which Dr. Chase's Ointment has to its credit have placed it alone as the standard cure for eczema and all forms of itching skin disease. Do not be satisfied with imitations or substitutes, 60 cents a box at all dealers or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Toronto.

CANADIAN WRITERS AND WRITERS ON CANADIAN SUBJECTS.

The announcement made recently by Toronto Saturday Night that that journal had arranged for the publication of a series of articles by Dr. Stephen Leacock and Dr. Andrew Macphail, once more serves to remind us that Canadian writers are now receiving deserved recognition at home as well as abroad. Dr. Macphail's published volumes, such as "Essays in Fallacy," and "Essays in Puritanism," to name only two of the many, have now a circle of readers both in Canada and in England which the most optimistic would hardly have predicted at the time of publication. The work of Dr. Leacock, who is the author of "Literary Lapses," a volume which has set the world smiling, is of a less serious character than that of Dr. Macphail. His optimistic humor sounds the note, and the reader laughs in spite of himself.

The articles, as arranged for by Toronto Saturday Night, are two in number, and will alternate from week to week. For instance, on Aug. 6th appeared an article by Dr. Macphail, entitled "Canada's Loyalty," and on the following week Dr. Leacock's first humorous sketch, "How to Make a Million Dollars," appeared. The third article of the series, appearing the week of August 20th, is by Dr. Macphail, and is entitled "Nation or Empire." The second of Dr. Leacock's is entitled "Men Who Have Shaved Me," and will be printed in Toronto Saturday Night on August 27th.

Through such journals as Toronto Saturday Night, Canadian writers on Canadian subjects are finding a home market for their work, and are no longer obliged from necessity to patronize British and American publishers.

THE THINGS THAT COUNT.

Not what we have, but what we use;
Not what we see, but what we choose
These are the things that mar or bless
The sum of human happiness.

The things near by, not things afar;
Not what we seem, but what we are—
These are things that make or break,
That give the heart its joy or ache.

Not what seems fair, but what is true;
Not what we dream, but good we do—
These are the things that shine like gems,
Like stars, in Fortune's diadems.

Not as we take, but as we give;
Not as we pray, but as we live—
These are the things that make for peace,
Both now and after time shall cease.

Each grate bar has three sides—long wear

When only one side of a grate bar is continually next to the fire all the wear is concentrated on that one side. The life of the grate bar is thus naturally just one-third as long as when the wear is distributed on three sides.

That explains why Sunshine grates have three lives. Each of the four grate bars has three sides. Each time the ashes are "rocked down" (no shaking with Sunshine) the side next to the fire can be changed. Thus the life of the grates is greatly prolonged.

When desired, the heavy bull dog teeth on the grates will seize hold of clinkers, grind them up, and drop the particles into the ash-pan.

JUDGING STOCK AT FALL FAIRS.

Prof. J. H. Sheppard, of North Dakota, in the following article, gives a great deal of valuable information of interest to exhibitors and judges:—

Fairs do more to establish the type of a given breed of live stock than any other single feature. The premium awarded at a prominent fair decides whether a sire is popular or not and frequently extends its influence to his entire kindship and to generations of his kind which are yet unborn.

The premium list classification must contemplate and the judge must keep in mind the fact that hereditary principles must be given strong consideration. Grade stock should be shown under fat stock classes and distinct from the registered animals.

Herds shown in competition, usually consisting of a bull and a cow and three heifers—a two-year-old, yearling and calf—is a class where breed and type uniformity, in addition to a high degree of excellence, are features which the classification contemplates and is centered largely on heredity.

Four animals the get of one sire are calculated to show the strength of the blood lines of a particular individual. Two, the product of one cow, is a class which measures the strength of the female as a breeder.

Breed points, which a judge makes much of, are centered on his search for hereditary capacity. Frequently a novice is astonished to find that a judge puts so much weight on a strictly fancy point. A fancy point, such as the feather on the Clydesdale, his white feet and strip in his face, have no value in themselves, but they indicate the strength of heredity in the individual, better than almost anything else does. A Clydesdale horse without the feather on his fetlocks could be just as serviceable in every useful point as one with that growth of hair, but it is a breed point that is unmistakable, and if that breed point is present on the Clydesdale and well developed, the horse is likely to have a Clydesdale's disposition, constitution, bone, ambition and other characteristic features which cannot be learned from a casual inspection. All breed characteristics are apt to be much more fully inherited when the breed points are well developed.

Constitutional vigor is another feature upon which a judge lays considerable stress. Many special terms are used to express their judgments on constitution, which is frequently combined with some other feature. Character, as it is called, is really facial expression, produced by bright, lustrous, wide-open eyes, short face, correct width of forehead and general symmetry. These combine many features and indicate several different things to the judge. From this inspection he gets a strong impression of breed characteristics; he gets an indication of the feeding capacity of the beast, digestion and assimilation perhaps; he gets an indication of sex characteristics, such as the masculine look and curly hair in the forehead of the bull, the quiet motherly expression of the female, or the lack of these features as the case may be.

In some of the shows where abattoirs are provided and where fat stock classes are included, the amount which animals will dress out, the quality of the meat and the percentage weight of the different cuts are features of the contest. In such classes the real values are determined, but the individual animal is sacrificed for the sake of adding to our sum of information.

The judging of dual or general purpose breeds of cattle has not been generally satisfactory, as should be naturally expected. This is due to the fact that the exact type of this class has not been fully agreed upon and because it is harder to determine an intermediate than a superlative one. It is easier decided, for example, which is the most pronounced beef or dairy type respectively, than to decide which one is most nearly half way between the two, reaching as nearly to both as possible. The tendency so far has been to favor the beef type of the dual purpose cow, and in consequence, the breeders of Red Polls have had to brace themselves against this show ring tendency, while the pressure of popular applause along with the judges' difficulty, has all but eliminated the dual purpose Shorthorn from the country by making her beef producing in her tendencies.

The premium list could offer prizes for bull three years old or over; two years old and under three; one year old and under two; under one year. Cow, three years old or over; heifer, two years old and under three; one year old and under two; under one year. Herd consisting of one bull, two years old or over; one cow or heifer, two years old and under three; one heifer, one year old and under two; one heifer under one year old.

Champion or sweepstakes awards can also be gauged according to the interests and finances. Champion male and champion female within each breed should be called for in every classification. If desired senior champion bull and cow and junior champion bull and heifer in addition to grand champion, may be offered, and they add to the interest.

Premium money for fourth, fifth and sixth places is well, if the fair can afford it, as it will help exhibitors who do not hope to have many first premiums to meet the expense of their attendance with their stock and this will bring them out.

The date for computing the ages of live stock should always be given. The stock shown is usually given as much advantage as possible in calculating ages, by really allowing animals, 36 months old to be shown as two-year-olds, those 24 months old as yeaeling and those 12 months old to show as calves. When the date of counting is named in the catalogue or premium list, as it usually done, this manner of calculation is fair to all competitors, although it frequently confuses visitors who do not understand the basis of calculation.

The plan of awarding prizes for herds is a mooted question. The judge usually faces groups of stock which he has already placed in competition as individuals in the classes and has frequently decided which is the better before he reaches the ring of herds. However, he sometimes finds that his decisions complicate the case. In the aged herd, for example, he may have three young animals superior in the one herd and the aged cow and bull better in the others. If that is the case, he will have to decide how much more weight the mature animals should have. It is a common saying that they should represent half of the weight and probably more stockmen will subscribe to that proposition than to any other. The uniformity of the herd in type is also a feature which is given various degrees of weight by different stockmen.

JOHN F. BURRELL.

It was with deep regret that word of the death of John F. Burrell was received on Tuesday morning. He had been ill for only a few days with appendicitis and although an operation was performed and everything possible done for him, he sank rapidly and passed away about nine o'clock on that day. He was born at Castlemore where he lived with his parents until he reached manhood. He was at one time proprietor of the hotel in Charleston and removed to Brampton thirteen years ago and remained in the Revere House here until his death. He was a well-known horseman and owned many fine animals. Mr. Burrell was noted for his genial manner and generosity, ever ready to lend a helping hand. He was extremely popular among the horsemen and the farmers of the county with whom he had long been acquainted. A widow, three sons and four daughters survive him, the former being Messrs. James, Armour and John, and the latter, Mrs. Moore, Mrs. R. Ellison, of Brampton, and two young children. The funeral will take place Friday afternoon to Brampton cemetery.—Brampton Conservator.

George Leach, Dundalk, was standing on a railway crossing when Robt. Marshall, driving at a rapid rate, ran into him. The shaft of the buggy struck him on the breast, knocking him down, the horse stepped on him and the hub of the buggy also struck him. His shoulder was broken in additions to other injuries.

ZAM-BUK SAVED THIS BABY

Mrs. M. Barrett, 600 Mercer St., Montreal, says:

"A horrid rash came out all over my baby's face and spread until it had totally covered his scalp. It was irritating and painful, and caused the little one hours of suffering. We tried soaps and powders and salves, but he got no better. He refused his food, got quite thin and worn, and was reduced to a very serious condition. I was advised to try Zam-Buk, and did so. It was wonderful how it seemed to cool and ease the child's burning, painful skin. Zam-Buk from the very commencement seemed to go right to the spot, and the pimples and sores and the irritation grew less and less. Within a few weeks my baby's skin was healed completely. He has now not a trace of rash, or eruption, or eczema, or burning sore. Not only so, but cured of the tormenting skin trouble, he has improved in general health."

Zam-Buk is sold at all stores and medicine vendors, 50c. a box, or post free from Zam-Buk Co., Toronto, for price, 6 boxes for $2.50. A certain cure for all skin diseases, cuts, burns, etc., and for piles.

THE SCHOOL QUESTION.

This important question is engaging the attention of many parents and young people just now. Just what to do is sometimes a problem. Where possible we believe every boy and girl should pass the Entrance and spend a few years in High School or Collegiate work. When this is not practicable the next best thing to do is to arrange for a course in some reliable business training school. In these schools the instruction is mainly individual so that the Third Book student or the High school graduate may make relative advancement in a good practical course of training alike beneficial in any walk of life. In such schools many find the training for the Entrance Examination sufficient foundation upon which to build a good business or shorthand course, which leads to office employment at a living salary as an introduction to a successful business life. Canada possesses many very good Business Colleges, but the one which has a continental reputation for doing good work and producing successful graduates is the well-known Central Business College, of Toronto.

A POPULAR RESORT.

A visit to Toronto Exhibition would be incomplete without a trip to Scarboro Beach Park, Toronto's $600,000 pleasure resort. On the spacious Grounds of this now famous institution are to be found all the newest and most elaborate and novel devices for creating hilarious fun and innocent entertainment. All the latest ideas from Coney Island, the metropolis of fun, have been adopted at Scarboro Beach, which is equipped with a completeness and a disregard for cost which is approached by no amusement park outside of New York. The Chutes, Cascades, Scenic Railway, Midway, and one hundred varieties of pleasure which make the hours pass pleasurably and quickly. Each week in the season a free circus act is offered, and for exhibition weeks the special attractions will be of a sensational and thrilling description, including a hazardous leap for life from the electric tower, and troupes of European gymnasts and acrobats imported at immense cost from Europe and not seen elsewhere in America outside of the New York Hippodrome and a few leading summer parks. There will also be extra fireworks displays and other special features for the delectation of Fair-time patrons. The electrical display alone is worth seeing, 100,000 incandescent and arc lights being used. King Street east cars run direct to the park, and a special express service is given. Free band concerts are given each day, Sundays included, by Raven's magnificent concert band.

After a hot discussion the C. M. B.A. Grand Lodge last week in session at Ottawa passed a resolution by a standing vote eliminating the sellers of liquor from membership, but this will not affect any present members in the business; it only looks to the future. "I consider a man who sells but does not drink as good as the man who does not sell," said a delegate opening the discussion. Rev. Father McNeil was on his feet in an instant. "I am opposed to any retail dealer in liquor being a member of our association," he said. "While I do not want to work any hardship on those who now belong, I am ready to move the motion that no new members be admitted who come under this amendment. The Church looks to the C.M.B.A. to be in the vanguard of Christianity and for one I object to any rumsellers belonging to our association. We must make our association the pillar of the church, as the holy father and archbishops and clergy throughout the country want it to be."

A commercial traveller, in whose home town a burglary epidemic was raging, recently expressed himself to a newspaper man as follows: "If a burglar breaks into your house at night, don't try to corner him." "If the visitor awakens you, make noise enough to scare him away, but don't go after him with a gun. Ten to one he'll 'get' you before you get him. It's better to lose a few dollars' worth of goods than your life. I'm giving it to you straight. The average man, wakened in the middle of the night, always badly frightened, hasn't a chance against the man with nerve enough to break into an occupied house. Every burglar is a potential murderer and will shoot to kill if you try to catch him. And why not? He's got a big, long term in prison staring him in the face if he's nabbed, and he'll take a chance on murder every time to get away. Leave the capture of such gentry to the 'cops.' They're paid to be shot at; you ain't."

W. A. Moir and Robt. F. Taggart, two desperate murderers, escaped from the Hamilton Insane asylum a week ago Sunday night. W.A. Moir shot and killed Sergeant Lloyd at the Wolseley barracks in London on Good Friday evening, 1908. Moir was partly intoxicated at the time and had been reprimanded by Lloyd. Seizing his rifle he followed the latter and shot him dead, making his escape. Moir was captured after a chase of several weeks. He was working on a farm near Guelph. At the trial it was shown that he had been subject to epilepsy. On this ground he was given a life sentence in the Hamilton asylum. R. F. Taggart, the other escaped lunatic, killed his wife in Toronto with a hammer on Nov. 25th, 1898, and for the last 12 years he has been in the criminal ward in the asylum. It appears that they had outside assistance as Moir was supplied with keys and he locked all doors after him and released Taggart. They were driven away from the asylum grounds in an automobile. Moir is a young man and Taggart is about 50 years of age.

USES OF THE SUNFLOWER.

Americans do not regard the sunflower, which is said to be one of our own native plants, as being of much practical service, but in Russia it is utilized in many ways.

There the seeds are eaten in immense quantities, raw or roasted, as peanuts are in America, and the oil obtained by pressing the seeds is an important article as food. The frequent religious feast days in Russia restrict the use of meat and lead to a large consumption of vegetable oil, and the manufacture of sunflower oil has consequently grown to considerable dimensions in that country. The best seeds yield an oil that compares favorably with olive oil for table purposes.

Even the upper classes in Russia, it is said, eat the seeds, the larger and finer ones being quite equal to most nuts in respect of palatability and wholesomeness. The stalks and dried leaves are highly prized as fuel, being in some parts of the empire the only available substitute for wood. An acre of sunflowers will yield many cords of good fuel.

The oil appears to have more of the general properties of olive than has any other known vegetable oil. It takes about a bushel of seeds to make a gallon of oil, and fifty bushels of seeds can be grown on one acre of land. As the oil sells at about a dollar a gallon, the profit is large.

At one time purified sunflower oil was used quite extensively to adulterate pure olive oil. It is a pale yellowish color and decidedly palatable. In a crude state it is used by painters to some extent, but it is inferior to linseed oil for use in paint.

In addition to the oil from the seeds the stalks when green and the oilcake make excellent fodder. The fibre of the stalks which is fine silky and strong, also has a value. In China it is woven into beautiful fabrics, and it is believed that by the use of proper machinery it might be used most profitably in this country.

The Toronto Telegram has this to say in regard to muzzling dogs, and says it truthfully: "Dogs are a good deal more comfortable with muzzles on their noses than children are with dog-bites on their faces, arms and legs. And dogs can get accustomed to having muzzles more readily than their victims can get accustomed to having hydrophobia. The muzzle order has made Toronto a safer city for children to live in. There is no good reason why the order should not be enforced."

RAILWAY TAXATION IN UNITED STATES.

Average of $382.00 Per Mile

Increase of $79 Per Mile in Three Years.

Average in Ontario is only $100 a Mile.

Railways operating in the United States paid $84,563,565, in taxation in 1908. This was an average of $382 per mile.

In 1901, seven years before, the total was $49,726,000, or $261.36 per mile; in 1905, three years before, total was $63,324,000, or an average of $303 per mile. There has been an increase of $79 per mile in three years, and of $121 per mile in seven years.

These figures are taken from the statistics of railways issued by the Interstate Commerce Commission of the United States.

The highest rate per mile in railway taxation in the United States in 1908, the latest year for which figures are available, was paid in New Jersey, where a total of $4,198,431, or $1,926 per mile was collected. Connecticut came next in the rate per mile with $1,593, Massachusetts third, with $1,394, and Rhode Island fourth with $1,204.

The lowest rate per mile was in Arizona—$148.

Pennsylvania, because of the greater mileage, although charging a much lower rate per mile than some of the other states, came first in the total amount of taxation collected — $5,896,956. There were four states all told in which upwards of $5,000,000 was received in railway taxation, these being Pennsylvania, already named, New York with $5,552,431, Illinois with $5,205,961, and Ohio with $5,102,702.

No less than thirty states collected over a million dollars each in railway taxation.

How do these figures compare with Ontario? In Ontario the average rate of taxation is about $100 per mile of road. The lowest rate in any one of the states (Arizona) is $48 above that. Arizona is not to be compared with Ontario in earning power for railways. It has just reached the status of a state, it is largely desert, and a large proportion of its population is made up of Mexicans.

In Texas, the rate of taxation is $243 per mile. Texas forms part of a group of states in which the average revenue per mile of railway is only $5,972. That is more than a thousand per mile less than the average earnings of the whole Grand Trunk system in Canada; it is less than two thirds the earnings of the whole Canadian Pacific system, and both the Grand Trunk and Canadian Pacific earn more per mile in Ontario than they do on any other part of their lines. The earnings of the Canada Southern in lower Ontario are about $20,000 per mile—more than three times the earnings per mile in Texas, where taxation per mile is $243 against $100 here.

In the group of states of which Iowa, Illinois, Wisconsin and Minnesota form part, the earnings per mile are less than the Grand Trunk; and still in those states the rate of taxation per mile is nearly four times the rate paid on the Grand Trunk in Ontario.

The following is a detailed statement of the total sum collected in railway taxation in each state and the average rate per mile :—

A rink of bowlers composed of Messrs. R. Smith, E. A. Walshaw, A. Kerr, with A. A. McFall as skip, attended the Dominion Bowling Tournament this week and met with fair success. In their match with Petrolea they won out 15 to 10 and even the haughty Brampton rink had to go down to the same tune before what one of the county town newspapers dubbed "the bush bowlers from Bolton." They played a losing game to the R.C.Y.C., 16-15, and lost by small margins to two other rinks. — Bolton Enterprise.

A Freight Collision

Bad Pitch-In In The Orangeville Yard Yesterday Morning.

Engine 1760 attached to a heavy southbound freight ran into a northbound freight drawn by engine 1755 in the north end of the Orangeville station yard about four o'clock yesterday morning. The engineers and firemen on the two trains jumped just before the crash and had the good fortune to escape unhurt. The southbound engine was badly smashed, her tender was turned crossways on the track and torn from its trucks, while the first car behind was completely telescoped. The car was loaded with building stone, which were littered along the track for some distance. The second car left the rails, but was not damaged badly. The southbound train, which was a very heavy one, most of the cars being loaded with stone and lumber, was travelling at a fair speed when the two engines struck and the force of the impact was terrific. The down train had either got out of control or else the accident was due to gross carelessness. The train was broken into two sections at Fraxa Junction. The crew brought the first section to Orangeville, ran it on the siding, and were entering the yard with the second half of the train when the collision occurred. The train from the south had just pulled in and was in the act of shunting from the main line to a siding in order to allow the southbound to pass. To get on the siding the train was obliged to run to the north end of the yard and then back down. It was while running up that the pitch-in occurred. The station hands say that the semaphore was set against 1760, but the engineer, if this was the case, either disregarded the signal and went ahead or else was unable to stop his train.

Some of the rails were badly twisted at the point where the two trains met. Ties were torn and splintered and for a distance of fifteen yards the track was littered with splinters and other wreckage. The West Toronto auxiliary reached the scene of the wreck about 7.30 a.m. The wrecking crew worked hard all forenoon to get the main line clear. It was shortly after 12 o'clock when the line was finally cleared so that the north and south passenger trains were able to get through. The pitch-in delayed the two south passenger trains, which reach here about nine o'clock, over three hours and delayed the up trains fully two hours. Hundreds of citizens gathered to view the wreck and watch the auxiliary crew clear the line. Its an ill wind that blows nobody good, and some of the people who live along the track will garner a nice supply of firewood from the wreckage. One citizen, with an eye to the main chance, was hard at work throwing boards into his back yard long before the track was clear.

FOR THE KIDNEYS.

A Guaranteed Treatment. Money Back If It Fails.

Kidney diseases are more prevalent than is generally supposed, and are not always recognized as such. What was at first but a slight derangement of the kidneys often results in indigestion, rheumatism, anaemia, chronic and very painful headache, neuralgia, eye weakness, and other diseases of a most aggravating type. Therefore, it is highly important and absolutely necessary that the kidneys and the urinary system be kept in an active and healthy condition.

After a thorough experience with the most successful forms of kidney treatments we are confident that the one remedy which embraces the most desirable, safe and efficacious curative qualities, so necessary to the successful treatment and positive eradication of kidney diseases in general, is Rexall Kidney Remedy.

We are so positive that Rexall Kidney Remedy is unexcelled, and that it will do all we claim, that we will sell it with our own personal guarantee that it will not cost the user a cent if it should fail to give entire satisfaction.

We particularly recommend Rexall Kidney Remedy for kidney ailments that are chronic and which resist ordinary treatment. We believe, if taken according to directions with regularity and persistency for a reasonable length of time, it will positively remove all aymptoms and effect permanent cure.

Surely we could not more strongly demonstrate our faith in Rexall Kidney Remedy, and our generous guarantee should convince the most skeptical that we would not dare make such a statement except we know what we are talking about. We urge you to try Rexall Kidney Remedy at our risk. Two sizes; 50c. and $1.00 a bottle. Sold only at our store — The Rexall Store. T. F. & T. J. Brown, Orangeville, Ont.

STILL IN COUNTY GAOL.

Samuel Wilson, the East Garafraxa farmer, whose arrest as a lunatic was reported in last issue of The Banner, is still languishing in the county gaol here. Police Magistrate Pattullo and Crown Attorney McKay have held a special court at Orton to hear evidence regarding the unfortunate man's mental condition, local doctors have examined him and disagreed and now Dr. Bruce Smith, Inspector of Prisons, has been requested to make a special examination. It is beginning to look as if there are other matters besides Wilson's mental condition that stand in need of investigation.

A TRAGIC DEATH.

Mrs. J. J. Haws Ends Her Life by Drowning.

A very sad and regrettable occurrence happened last Wednesday morning at Mr. Wm. Watson's, lot 31, 7th line, Erin, when his sister, Mrs. J. J. Haws, was found drowned in the water trough.

Very little is known as to the cause. Tuesday morning she drove her son, Howard Haws, to the station here to take the train for Saskatoon, when she appeared cheerful and in good health.

A sister of Mrs. Haws', Miss Emily Watson, was ill in the house at the time and Mrs. Haws was up doing some slight service for her about two o'clock, which was the last time she was seen alive.

When Mr. Watson was on his way to the barn to do the morning feeding he noticed something unusual at the water trough, and upon investigation found the body there, but believed at the time that it must be his sick sister and that she had wandered out unnoticed. He rushed to the house for help and was amazed to find that it was Mrs. Haws, who was in the trough. She was partly dressed in her street clothes.

The deceased had for some time been troubled with severe headaches and it is believed this caused a temporary fit of insanity, during which the rash act was committed.

Mrs. Haws was the eldest of the family of the late Joseph Watson, formerly of East Garafraxa, and widow of John James Haws, who died about twelve years ago.

There are left to mourn her loss besides two brothers and a sister three sons, William, of Asquith, Sask.; Howard, who had just left to join William, and Roy, a student at home.

The sympathy of the whole community goes out to them in their trouble.

The funeral took place Sunday to Price's Cemetery and was very largely attended.—The Beaver.

MRS. ANDREW HENRY.

Mrs. Eliza Henry, widow of the late Andrew Henry, who was for forty years clerk of the township of Mono, passed away at her home "Pleasant View Farm," a short distance south of Mono Centre, on Wednesday, August 17th. The deceased who was well advanced in years, had been ailing all summer with asthma and had been confined to her bed for a month or longer prior to her death. The immediate cause of death was heart trouble. Mrs. Henry was a daughter of the late William Allen, of Mono, and was born in that township 76 years ago. She had resided on "Pleasant View Farm," lot 15, con. 3, east, Mono, ever since her marriage 48 years ago. She was predeceased by her husband, whose death about ten years ago, is still fresh in the memories of many of our readers. The departed woman is survived by a family of five sons and four daughters, namely :—Robert Henry, Killarney, Man.; Dr. Edmund Henry, Estevan, Sask.; Dr. Heber Henry, Leamington, Ont.; Mr. W. A. Henry, Mono; Mrs. E. J. Cobean and Mrs. (Dr.) Island, Toronto; Mrs. (Dr.) E. W. Falconer, Sarnia, and Richard and Miss Maggie Henry, on the homestead. The members of the family were all present when the end came except the two sons in the West. Mrs. S. Wallace, Orangeville, and Mrs. Rusk, Goderich, are sisters, and ex-Reeve Rich. Allen, of Mono, and Wm. Allen, of Paisley, are the only living brothers. The late Mrs. Henry was a devoted member of the Presbyterian church. She was a woman greatly beloved by her family and the people of the neighborhood, where she spent the greater part of her life. Possessed of a kindly, sympathetic nature, there were few who could enter more fully into the trials and sorrows of those about her or were better fitted to carry a message of comfort to those laboring under the weight of some great bereavement. The funeral, which was one of the largest seen in the neighborhood for some time, was held from her late home to Mono East cemetery on Friday afternoon following her death. The floral tributes were numerous and beautiful. The services at the house and grave were conducted by Rev. G. W. Rose, of Alton, formerly of Mono Centre. The pallbearers were three sons, Wm. A. Richard and Dr. Heber Henry, two sons-in-law, Dr. E. W. Falconer and Mr. E. J. Cobean, and Mr. R. B. Henry, of Orangeville, who is a nephew.

Summer Records of Children's Deaths.

Records show that by far the greatest number of deaths among little ones occur during the hot summer months. The excessive heat, the difficulty in keeping baby's milk sweet, improper food, all tend towards bringing on those dreaded baby troubles — cholera infantum, diarrhoea, dysentry and other stomach and bowel troubles. To guard against these troubles Baby's Own Tablets should be kept in the house. An occasional dose of the Tablets will prevent these deadly summer complaints or cure them if they come on suddenly. Mrs. O. Morin, Ste. Tite, Que., says : "My baby suffered from a severe attack of cholera infantum, but after giving him Baby's Own Tablets the trouble disappeared and he regained health splendidly." The Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

WM. CUNNINGHAM KILLED

A Former Orangeville Boy Meets With Sudden Death.

William Cunningham, a C. P. R. brakeman and a former Orangeville boy, was run over by a freight train in the railway yard in West Toronto on Friday morning, August 12th, and sustained injuries, which resulted in his death. A double truck knocked him down and passed over both of his legs crushing them terribly. He was taken to the Western Hospital in an ambulance, but had lost consciousness before his arrival. Dr. H. Mason, of Annette St., attended to his injuries, but aside from an attempt to staunch the terrible flow of blood was unable to save his life.

Cunningham was running on the 2.30 train to Hamilton. He was hurrying to the station to get his train when he was run down by a freight engine. From a statement which he made shortly after the accident it appears he thought the engine was coming up the water track, but instead it came right along on the track on which he was walking. The accident happened shortly before 2.30 o'clock and Cunningham died about 9 a.m. The deceased, who lived at 293 Evelyn Ave., West Toronto, was about 22 years of age and unmarried. He was the only son of Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Cunningham, formerly of John St. His father is a cripple and last spring young Cunningham persuaded his parents to move to West Toronto so that he could live with them. He was practically the support of the household. He was devoted to his parents and was a first-class workman, enjoying the good-will and esteem of those with whom he mingled in the course of his regular avocation.

The remains were taken to his home at 295 Evelyn Crescent on Friday night and the funeral was held to the Forest Lawn Cemetery, Orangeville, on the arrival of the morning train on the following Monday. A large number of relatives and friends of the family were at the depot to meet the body. A special car had been placed at the disposal of the family and Mr. and Mrs. Cunningham, parents of the young man, and a number of the members of the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen accompanied the remains. The late Mr. Cunningham was a member of West Toronto lodge No. 255, Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen, and a number of his fellow members showed their sympathy and esteem by attending the funeral in a body. The floral tributes were numerous and very handsome. The pallbearers, who were all members of the Brotherhood were Messrs. Dan O'Mara, George Myles, W. Urquhart, W. Justason, B. Ballentyne and A. Harcourt. Rev. Mr. Wheatley, who has been taking the services in the Methodist Church during the absence of Rev. Dr. Harper, had charge of the services. The funeral arrangements were capably looked after by Mr. J. H. Hulse. Mr. and Mrs. Cunningham have the sympathy of their numerous friends here in their almost irreparable loss.

We understand that the young man was insured for $1350 in the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen and also carried an accident policy for $350. A jury was empanelled by Coroner G. W. Graham to enquire into the circumstances of the lamentable fatality. Exactly how the accident happened, no person seemed to know. W. H. Clements, the engineer, testified that he heard a man yell and climbing down found Cunningham lying on the ground with his legs under the front wheel of the tender. The injured man gave his name and told how he mistook the track on which the engine was running. He was hurried to the Western hospital, where, according to the evidence given by Dr. C. H. Thomas, he died as a result of the shock and loss of blood. Engineer Clements and George Blackford, the fireman, both asserted that the regulations regarding lights and the ringing of the bell on the engine had been observed. After fifteen minutes deliberation the jury returned a verdict of accidental death.

THOS. REBURN DEAD.

Thomas Reburn, clerk of No. 2 Division Court, Shelburne, died at Penticton, B.C., on Monday last, after a few days' illness. Mr. and Mrs. Reburn left here on July 20th, 1910. Reburn left here on July 20th, 1910, to visit their two daughters in British Columbia and he was taken ill shortly after his arrival at his destination. It is supposed that the water he drank on the way out caused the internal trouble that resulted in his death. When they left home he was in good health and no trouble was anticipated and they were in hopes of having a pleasant visit and a safe return, but Providence decreed otherwise. Deceased was a native of Mulmur township, but with the exception of a couple of years' residence on the farm after first moving to Shelburne, the family has resided here for thirty years. Deceased was a staunch Conservative and always took an active interest in politics, generally, until he was appointed clerk of the Division Court a few years ago. He was a man of kindly parts and was highly esteemed by those who knew him best. He is survived by three sons and three daughters. The sons are Thos. H. Reburn and D. J. Reburn, Shelburne; and John Reburn, Whitfield. The daughters are Mrs. Chas. Greer and Mrs. Joseph Markle, Penticton, B.C., and Mrs. Geo. Berwick, Shelburne. John Reburn, Chas. Reburn and Wm. Reburn, Shelburne; Geo. Reburn and R. J. Reburn, Whitfield, are brothers.

The bereaved friends have the sympathy of a large circle of friends in their sore affliction.—Free Press.

GOLDEN WEDDING CELEBRATION.

On Monday, August 15th, Mr. and Mrs. George Duckwith, respected citizens of Orangeville for the past forty years, celebrated the fiftieth anniversary of their marriage at their cosy and comfortable home on John St. Fifty years ago Mr. and Mrs. Duckwith were united in marriage in Easenwold, near the city of York, in England. The celebration last week was graced by the presence of quite a large assemblage of friends, including their daughter, Mrs. G. During their long residence in Orangeville Mr. and Mrs. Duckwith have made numerous friends, who will join heartily in expressing the hope that they may be long spared to the enjoyment of good health and abundant happiness.

"I HONESTLY BELIEVE 'FRUIT-A-TIVES'

The Greatest Cure For Rheumatism In The World"

KNOWLTON, QUE., Oct. 12th, 1909.

"For many years, I suffered from severe Rheumatism, and the attacks were very distressing and prevented me from doing my ordinary work. I tried many remedies and physicians' treatments, but nothing seemed to do me much good, and I was becoming very anxious for fear I would become a permanent cripple from the disease.

I tried "Fruit-a-tives" and this medicine has entirely cured me and I honestly believe it is the greatest Rheumatism cure in the world."

E. E. MILLS.

Such a statement could not be bought from a man like Mr. Mills. He thinks too much of his good name, to sell it or sign it to an untruth. Mr. Mills tried "Fruit-a-tives" after all other treatment failed—and "Fruit-a-tives" cured him of Rheumatism. In the goodness of his heart, he wrote the above letter in order that sufferers in all parts of Canada would know that there is one remedy that actually does cure Rheumatism. This testimonial was entirely unsolicited on our part. We did not know that Mr Mills was taking "Fruit-a-tives" until we received the above letter.

It is a case like Mr. Mills' that proves the marvellous powers of "Fruit-a-tives" in arresting and curing disease. It may be stated, without fear of contradiction, that "Fruit-a-tives" will positively cure Rheumatism when properly used.

"Fruit-a-tives" is the only medicine in the world made of fruit juices and is the greatest Rheumatism cure known to modern science.

50c. a box, 6 for $2.50, or trial box, 25c. Sold by all dealers or sent, postpaid, on receipt of price by Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

FLORENCE NIGHTINGALE DEAD.

The Queen of Nurses Passes Away at the Age of Ninety.

Perhaps no woman's name has become more of a household word throughout the English-speaking world than that of Florence Nightingale, the famous organizer of nursing corps in the Crimean War, and for this reason general regret will be felt at the news of her death which occurred in London on Saturday.

Although she has been an invalid for a long time, rarely leaving her room, where she passed the time in a half-recumbent position, and was under the constant care of a physician, her death was somewhat unexpected. A week ago she was quite sick, but then improved, and on Friday was cheerful. During that night alarming symptoms developed, and she gradually sank until 2 o'clock Saturday afternoon, when an attack of heart failure brought the end.

Miss Nightingale celebrated her ninetieth birthday on May 12th last on which occasion from every part of the British Empire kind thoughts were waited to the veteran Queen of Nurses. Her birth took place at the Villa Columbia, near Florence, in 1820, while her parents were travelling abroad.

The difficulty of procuring a suitable nurse during an illness in her family drew Miss Nightingale's attention to the need for training educated women to replace the "Sairey Gamps" and "Betsy Prigs." She devoted herself to the study of the question, visiting hospitals at home and abroad. Later she took in hand the management of the Home for Sick Governesses in London, and was so engaged when the Crimean War broke out.

The sufferings of the soldiers in the autumn of 1854, after the battle of Alma, sent a thrill of indignation through Britain. The Government had decided at the outbreak of the war not to send out women nurses, as the class were so disreputable. The allies had their Sisters of Charity to attend to their sick, but the British army was practically without nursing provision. In the dilemma Sidney Herbert, the War Minister, bethought himself of his friend, Miss Nightingale, and wrote asking her to organize and take out a band of nurses to the relief of the soldiers, as he believed her to be the "one woman in England" who had the knowledge and training for the sick. His letter crossed one from Florence Nightingale offering her services.

She set out October 21st, 1854, and reached the great Barrack Hospital at Scutari with a band of 38 nurses on November 4th. Within two days the huge barrack building, which lacked everything that a hospital should have, was filled to overflowing with the wounded from Inkerman. It was the testing moment of Florence Nightingale's life. She was the lady-in-chief accredited by the Government with the control of the nursing in all the hospitals, both on the Bosphorus and in the Crimea where the British soldiers lay, and in the execution of her task she brought some criticism upon her head, but she won the everlasting thanks of the soldiers.

Miss Nightingale spent a year and eight months at Scutari and in the Crimea, and not until peace was declared did she quit the scene of her heroic labors. She travelled back under an assumed name to avoid a public ovation, and went quietly to her family at Lea Hurst. The sum of £48,000, which people of all classes subscribed as a testimonial, she devoted to the endowment of the Nightingale Home, St. Thomas' Hospital, the pioneer nurses' training school. The remainder of her life was devoted to furthering the spread of hospital and nursing reform.

Miss Nightingale was the only woman upon whom the Order of Merit had been conferred and the second woman to receive the freedom of the City of London. No other subject of the King was so tenderly enshrined in the hearts of the people as was the heroine of the Crimea.

SOLD TOO MUCH WHISKEY.

A conviction which may indirectly affect some if those thirsty individuals who have been trying to put Acton's local option reputation into disrepute was made in Georgetown recently. A couple of weeks ago Provincial License Inspector Ayearst made one of his descents on the town and as a result on Saturday, August 6th, all three license holders, S. H. McGibbon, Albert Sachs and John Treanor were brought before Magistrates Kennedy, Warren and McCannah on charges of breaches of the Liquor License Act. From the evidence it appeared that each of the license holders had sold greater quantities of spirits than the law allows on one or more occasions. Three fines of $20 and costs were imposed. A later feature of the case is an appeal which is being brought out by Jas. Haverson, K.C., for Treanor, on the allegation that the sale on which the conviction was made was in reality two sales. The plea seems to be that two bottles of beer, as the appellant claims, in two distinct sales, were made within a minute. The result of the appeal will be awaited with a good deal of interest.—Acton Free Press.

WHERE THEY RISE EARLY.

Farmer Brown and Farmer Jones were near neighbors, and many a dispute took place as to who was the earlier riser. Both maintained that each excelled the other.

One day Farmer Brown determined to put the subject to a test. Rising very early one morning, about two o'clock, he proceeded to visit his friend. Great was his astonishment when he saw Mrs. Jones hanging out the clothes in the garden.

"Farmer Jones about?" he asked.

"Well," replied the lady, "he was the first part of the marnin', but I dunno where he be now."

DIES FROM BURNS.

While an elder daughter of Mr. J. Akitt, of the sixth line, Erin township, was carrying a pail of boiling water to scald the separator on Saturday morning, Lillian, the three year old daughter of the home, who had been toddling around, asked her sister to remove her bib. The elder girl set the pail of water on the floor, removed the bib, and had just turned around to hang it up, when the little one in some manner upset the boiling water on herself and sustained burns from which she died on Sunday morning. Mr. and Mrs. Akitt are heart-broken with grief over the loss of their little one. They have general sympathy. The funeral was held on Tuesday afternoon to Ballinafad cemetery and was very largely attended.

MARTIN'S MILLS SOLD.

During the past week negotiations, which had been going on for several months, were concluded for the sale of the milling and elevator properties of the firm of Martin Bros. to the of the Cereal and Milling Sompany of Toronto for a good fair price.

The transfer of the business will be made as soon as arrangements can be made, which may take a few weeks. We do not know what the intentions of the Cereal and Mining Company are, but we hope, for the welfare of the community and the town, that both the manufacturing and grain-buying features of this business may be continued and extended. That will depend, of course, on the plans of the Company, which is the same which has merged milling interests at Galt, Ayr, London, Fergus and other places. The mills at Fergus were taken over on August 2nd and will be continued in operation.—Mount Forest Confederate.

WHAT A DOG DID.

Last Wednesday afternoon Mr. S. H. Rutledge, of Henderson Bros. & Co., and Mr. H. E. Ebel, of Listowel, who travels for Geo. White & Sons, manufacturers of threshing machines, were on a business trip in the country. When on their way back into town from the north Wm. Rutledge's dog made a sudden jump at the horse from the gate. The horse jumped sideways, throwing Messrs. Rutledge and Ebel out, and then made for its own stable. Mr. Rutledge escaped with a shaking up, but Mr. Ebel was not so fortunate, injuring the muscles of his right knee so badly that he will not be able to walk for several weeks. Mr. Rutledge had him conveyed to his own residence where his injuries were attended to, and on Saturday Messrs. Henderson and Rutledge accompanied him as far as Durham on his way home.—Shelburne Economist.

SCARBORO BEACH.

Visitors to the Toronto Exhibition this year cannot afford to leave Scarboro Beach Park out of their plans. This $600,000 amusement resort, modelled after Dreamland and Luna Park, the world-famous institutions at Coney Island, is the finest of its kind outside of New York itself, and has been visited by millions of delighted patrons in the four years that it has been in existence. Its permanent structures include a scenic railway, a quarter of a mile long, a chute-the-chutes, 600 feet in length, and an underground water trip called the Cascades, which furnishes an unforgetable experience. In addition there are the Streets of Cairo, Human Butterfly, House of Nonsense, Electroscope Theatre, Johnstown Flood, Aerial Swings, Caroussel, Midway, Bumps, Laughing Gallery, and many other novelties which embrace the most thrilling and sensational acts obtainable in the amusement world, and include a death'defying dive for life from a lofty tower and several gymnastic and acrobatic European troupes imported to America as star bookings for the New York Hippodrome. Raven's magnificent band gives two free concerts daily, and there will be special fireworks and sports for the Exhibition visitors. King St., east cars land patrons at the Park gates. The Sunday afternoon and evening free band concerts at the park are a popular feature with visitors and citizens.

5000 AUTOMOBILES BOUGHT BY FARMERS.

As the result of farmers buying automobiles and using them for trips about their farms and to the nearby cities, more than ten thousand licenses for cars have been issued in Minnesota this year. According to estimates, made in the office of Julius Schmahl, Secretary of State, at St. Paul, more than ten million dollars is invested in automobiles in the North Star State.

"Estimating the average cost of cars to be as low as $1000," Mr. Schmahl said, "The total investment in Minnesota to-day is $10,160,000. More than half of this sum has been put into cars by the farmers. On May 1, 1910, the total number of automobiles in the state was 7,371. Since then, within sixty days, 2,786 additional machines have been licensed."

The cost of a state license in Minnesota is $1.50. It is generally understood that the next session of the legislature will increase this to $5 or $10, as charged in the other states.

Henry Allen, formerly of Ruskview, and later of Stayner, and Mrs. Allen, celebrated their golden wedding in Toronto on July 26th, 1910. Mrs. Allen is a sister of the late Colwell Graham, of Shelburne and Mr. Allen, is a brother of Samuel Allen, of Primrose. The latter was groomsman 50 years ago and Miss Cornelius, of Angus, the bridesmaid is still living.

WALDEMAR.

(Star & Vidette.)

Our agriculturists are busy cutting their grain. They report barley short in straw, oats fair and peas good.

Mr. James Gamble, who has been in the great west, has returned after some six weeks' vacation. He seems to be not very much enamored with the west.

Herbert, only son of John Harkness, East Garry, is not improving in health as fast as his friends would like to see him. He was in Toronto on Monday in consultation with specialists.

Our popular teacher, Miss McArthur, has again resumed her public school duties, while the branch school is without a teacher. What is the matter with the Board?

A young farmer of this vicinity had his attention drawn from his evening work the other night by the peculiar and suspicious actions of a young couple in a buggy that was passing. Investigating, he thought it was not just the proper thing for a girl of her years to act so, and making the young lad depart, took her off home to her parents. This chap may consider himself lucky, as his actions often lead to a sojourn in the penitentiary for three years. He either wants to improve his habits or take a long walk out of this district.

AT STRATHROY.

Inglenook, the beautiful home of Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Endacott, corner of Head and Metcalfe Sts., was the scene of a jolly lawn party Monday evening, when their daughter, Ethel, entertained about a score of young people in honor of her guest, Miss Edna Campbell, of Orangeville, and held a kitchen shower for Miss Ethel Parker, upon the occasion of her approaching marriage. The lawn and grounds were ablaze with light from strings of Chinese lanterns and the young people enjoyed themselves to their heart's content, chatting, promenading and tripping the light fantastic upon linen spread under the apple boughs. After a delightful luncheon, a market basket filled with sundry articles, all of a useful character, was brought in and opened, the verses and inscriptions thereon bearing wishes from her host of friends, being read aloud and causing considerable merriment. The gathering broke up at an early hour all voting the evening unique and pleasurable and the hospitality extended unsurpassed. —Strathroy Age.

THE LATE GEORGE D. McNICHOL.

The Press, of Oscoda and Au Sable, Mich., gives particulars of the death of George D. McNichol, a prominent young business man of Oscoda, who was a nephew of Mrs. Thomas Barons, of this place. Deceased had been in poor health and had made arrangements to go to the Adirondacks for a rest, when death came very suddenly, from an affection of the heart. Deceased was a son of Mr. Thomas McNichol and was born at Cataract, Ont., in 1872. He attended Orangeville High School after which he went to Michigan and accepted a position in the Oscoda County Savings Bank. Since then he has been prominently identified with the business life of Oscoda County, being president of the banking firm of George D. McNichol & Co., and also the Union Bank of Mio, Mich. He is survived by his wife and one child. The remains were brought to Erin where his father now resides and were accompanied by a representative of the Au Sable Masonic Lodge, of which deceased was a member.

CHANGE OF WORK IS REST.

A change of work is rest. Don't stick to a task you have undertaken till every muscle aches and all your nerves are throbbing, just because you have a pride in finishing, "at one sitting," so to speak. Working wearily is working at a loss. It takes double the energy to produce results when you are tired and have lost interest in what you are doing.

Keep yourself up to the mark by frequent changes of occupation. While you work, work with concentration. When it becomes next to impossible to keep your mind on what you are doing, take up something as different as possible. The people who accomplish most are not those who work themselves into a condition of exhaustion, and then are forced to stop and rest, but those who rest as they go along, by frequent and judicious changes of work.

Acton's assessment twenty years ago was $228,485, and the rate of taxation 22 mills. This year the assessment is $429,770, and the rate is 21 mills.

Backache Suffering

A wonderful medicine is this man's description of DR. CHASE'S KIDNEY-LIVER PILLS.

Mr. Fred. Gummer, Lillies, Ont., writes; "I can honestly say that Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills are a wonderful medicine. For six weeks last fall I could scarcely walk around for pains in the back and legs, and was almost completely unfit for work. Though I tried several medicines I got no better. I saw Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills advertised and bought five boxes. After I had used three boxes, I was greatly improved and by the time I had them all taken felt as well as I ever did. I would advise anyone suffering from kidney disease to use Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills.

"We have also used Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine for bad colds and sore throat and would not be without these medicines for anything."

Do You Realize the Advantages of Concrete?

THE rising price of lumber has compelled the farmer to look for a suitable substitute.

Concrete, because of its cheapness, durability and the readiness with which it can be used for every farm purpose, has proven itself to be cheaper than lumber and far more durable. Our Free Book—shows the farmer how he can do his own work without the aid of skilled mechanics. It demonstrates the economy of Concrete construction as compared with lumber, brick or stone.

"What the Farmer Can Do With Concrete"

This Book Tells How Concrete Aids Farmers.

It shows how Concrete can be used to advantage on the farm in the construction of almost every practical utility.

Send for this book to-day. You'll find it intensely interesting, even if you don't intend to build for a while. It contains much useful information that will put you in the way of saving money. A HARD JOLT.

Recently one of our most fastidious young men bought a pair of overalls and found in them the name of the sewing girl who had made them. He very promptly wrote her a letter with all the effusiveness necessary in such a case and in due time received a reply which, however, was void of the romance usual in such cases. Here it is—"I am a working girl, it is true, but I make a good living and I do not care to support a husband as I would probably have to do if I married some silly noodle who gets mashed on a girl he never saw. Permit me to further say that I do not know how my card got in that pair of overalls, and that when I do marry, if ever, it will be some fellow who can afford something better than a pair of 47 cent. breeches."—Exchange.

COST OF LIVING NOW AND FIFTY YEARS AGO.

The Standard of Empire, while acknowledging that the cost of living has been increasing of late years, says the cost is still much less than it was fifty years ago.

The Standard is undoubtedly correct in its assertion. Clothing is certainly cheaper than it was half a century ago; it is quite as cheap as it was thirty years since. Tea and sugar are not over half the price they were when the present generation was young; boots and shoes do not cost nearly as much now as then; hardware is cheaper, travel—taking the time necessary to cover a given distance into account—is very much less costly; and fully five times as much reading matter can be obtained for a dollar as could be obtained in the 'sixties.

True, it costs a good deal more to live now than it did then; but this is because we have more to live with. Pianos are as common to-day as accordeons were in the days of the pioneers of Ontario; parlor suites have taken the place of plain wooden chairs; Brussels carpets have supplanted rag mats, and furnaces have displaced the old box stove. Moreover, relative to income, good living need not cost more than very poor living did in the days of our fathers.—The Weekly Sun.

During the electric storm on Monday afternoon Mr. Henry LeGard, of Flesherton, who was on a load of grain was struck by the lightning and thrown to the ground unconscious, in which condition he remained for some time. The prongs of the fork in Mr. LeGard's hands were badly twisted and the severe shock he received was a close call. His speech is still affected and he is but slowly recovering from the shock.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years it was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.

He was unmarried and was 25 years of age.

THE BANNER

THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 1, '10

The action of the Methodist General Conference, referred to elsewhere in this issue, means a long step in the direction of Church Union. The attitude of the Methodist governing body was surprisingly pronounced in favor of the idea of union. A number of the leaders of the church expressed their opposition to the proposal, but their views appeared to have little weight with the Conference and it is evident that the tide of opinion is running strongly in favor of union. There are many reasons for this, but the most important is doubtless the fact that the Protestant churches are becoming thoroughly imbued with the missionary spirit. The church leaders are realizing as never before the urgent need for men and means to carry the gospel message to the unsaved millions in heathen lands. They realize that in this great field the energies of the Church can be much more profitably employed than in unnecessary competition, and overlapping in the home field. Church Union will undoubtedly give a powerful impetus to missions.

The World's Work, a New York magazine, has an interesting and suggestive article on the prevailing automobile craze. The output of automobiles in the United States in 1910, our authority states, is estimated at 210,000 cars, with an average value of $1,250. The estimates for 1911 put the output at 300,000 cars, with about the same average value. This means that next year the enormous sum of $375,000,000 will be expended in automobiles, without taking into account the large amount of money that will be required for the operation of more than half a million cars that are already in commission. The following quotation from the article indicates some of the dangers connected with the craze :—

"In the city of Minneapolis, it appears, one automobile firm holds mortgages on 1500 homes. In a southwestern city the amount of mortgage liens against property held in the hands of automobile dealers and manufacturers was so great that banking houses who were asked to handle municipal bonds of the city refused to have anything to do with them. In one of the best middle-class suburbs of New York, where for years, through normal times and panic alike there has been a steady demand for homes, not a single home property has changed hands in four months past; and the dealers in real estate are of the opinion that there will not be any recovery until the craze for automobiles passes into history."

REGULATION OF MONOPOLIES.

So long as competition is active, commercial and industrial freedom takes care of itself. If one man or company restricts opportunity or unduly increases prices or limits products, a competing man or company quickly takes advantage of such changes, and industrial freedom and equality are (at least potentially) maintained. There is no need of governmental regulation or interference. Business in the long run takes care of itself. But, just as soon as the monopoly of any product or of any service begins, the conditions change. There is no longer a condition that insures industrial freedom or equal opportunity, even potentially. The monopilist has the power to abridge it. As soon as monopoly begins, therefore, there arises the necessity for governmental regulation. This is the large general principle which the public sees and feels and will not give up; and this continued agitation in all its forms is the expression of this feeling—of the conviction that the public regulation of monopolies is necessary for industrial freedom.—The World's Work.

THE SITUATION IN SPAIN

The situation in Spain is still attracting world-wide attention. It is difficult at this distance to understand the exact positions of the national and clerical parties. The country has been dominated for centuries by the Roman Catholic Church to an extent that would scarcely be tolerated anywhere else in Europe. Clergy, monks and nuns form an important part of the population and own an immense amount of property. They pay no taxes and are engaged in various trades and manufactures in competition with ordinary labor. The unfairness of this competition and the hardships it works on the laboring and manufacturing classes can be readily understood. The object of Premier Canalejas and his supporters is the destruction of this mediaeval organization of society and the liberation of the daily lives of the people from clerical domination. The Government is not attacking the Roman Catholic Church as such, but rather the abuses and evils which Roman Catholicism has fostered. From a Canadian standpoint, the position of the Vatican appears indefensible. If the Government wins in the present struggle, Spain may be expected to enter upon an era of progress that may in time restore her to her former place of influence among the nations of Europe.

PRIZE LIST CORRECTION.

The attention of our readers is called to the following correction in the Dufferin Exhibition Prize List. The special prize offered by Mr. W. L. Wettlaufer for the best ten pounds butter in crock should read $5.00, not $10.00.

MUNICIPAL GOVERNMENT.

Ideas respecting municipal government vary greatly in different countries. In Canada for instance, municipal representatives are not as a rule paid for their services. Salaries are attached to the offices of Mayor and Controllers in the large cities, but in the rural and smaller urban municipalities the men who compose the councils do not receive any remuneration for their services. The popular belief seems to be that the municipal servant gets sufficient recompense from the honor and prestige that the office is supposed to bring him. Provided he is fairly well thought of, any citizen, who is willing to devote his time to the service of a municipality on these terms, stands a reasonably good chance of becoming a member of the municipal council. He must be a good fellow, fairly well thought of and popular and he may or may not be possessed of good business and executive ability. The business qualifications of municipal aspirants are not as a rule enquired into any too closely by the average elector, who apparently has not fully grasped the fact that the government of a municipality, in order to be successful, must be conducted on strictly business lines in the same manner as a private enterprise. The German idea is entirely different. The Germans regard municipal government as a business, to be conducted on business lines. Consequently, the larger towns and cities are constantly on the look-out for men, who possess expert knowledge and skill of a technical or professional character. A man, who has proved himself a good mayor in one town, is frequently invited to another. The larger towns look to the smaller ones to provide them with trained and experienced municipal officers. It sometimes happens that two or more cities compete for the services of a particularly expert man. We can hardly imagine a city in Canada or the United States advertising for a mayor. The following advertisement appeared in a number of German newspapers recently :—

"The place of mayor of Madgeburg is vacant. The salary is 21000 marks ($5,250) a year, including the rental of a dwelling in the city hall. Besides his salary the incumbent will receive 4000 marks ($1000) for his official expenses. Candidates should apply before September 1st."

This looks like a case of the office seeking the man. German cities, we are told, are the best governed in the world, so that there is evidently room for improvement in our Canadian municipal system.

THE SCARCITY OF TEACHERS.

So much has been said of late concerning the scarcity of teachers that it may be well urged that the dearth of instructors for our young is not to be measured by the want advts. that are such a conspicuous feature of the big city dailies. It often happens that an advt. appears for the purpose of filling a vacancy caused by the resignation of a teacher in order to accept a more remunerative position. The new teacher as a rule gets as much, if not more than would have retained the services of his or her predecessor. Another vacancy is created and another advt. appears. The first move affects the Board until a bran new teacher is engaged. The columns of advertisements in the dailies indicate therefore that teachers are compelled to move in order to get an increase of salary. Some few years ago Dufferin resented the proposal to fix a minimum salary of $400, but the higher salary has come of its own accord by the "supply and demand" process then advocated. We must have teachers and good ones, at any price, and we must raise the standard until teachers come up to the exacting requirements of modern times. The government is justified in raising the standard till the endless wrangling with the teacher ceases, or until the ratepayers admit efficiency. That millennium for the school marm and school master does not seem to have purpled the horizon as yet.

It would appear that more confidence between teachers and parents and more wholesome, encouraging, table talk with the children, and more reasoning on the part of the parents—for a teacher with forty pupils has little time to reason—should be practiced and parents should desist from directly or indirectly making their children believe that going to school is an unavoidable adjunct to childhood and youth.

A terrible electric storm passed over the Wiarton district early a week ago Monday morning. Simmie's sawmill at Clavering was burned, while many barns on all sides within a radius of 25 miles met a similar fate.

Official Programme! Canadian National Exhibition FREE THIS YEAR!

It has been found that the farm laborers' excursions already run from Ontario points have not produced as many laborers as expected and, as the harvesting operations in Ontario are about over for this year, two additional excursions are being run from all stations in Ontario by the Canadian Pacific Railway at rate of $10.00 to Winnipeg and points east of Moose Jaw on Main Line and Branch Lines on Tuesday, August 30th, and Tuesday, September 6th. Special trains will be run through from Toronto to Winnipeg with no change of cars, thus avoiding transfer troubles and customs arrangements en route. Tickets will be issued to women but there will be half rate tickets for children.

METHODISTS APPROVE.

General Conference Favors Basis of Church Union.

Report of Committee Carried by An Overwhelming Majority.

The report of the Committee on Church Union was laid before the Methodist General Conference on Thursday evening by the Secretary, Rev. J. W. Cooley. The report, which was adopted after an interesting debate, by an overwhelming majority, read as follows :—

"We recommend the General Conference to send the documents and basis of union agreed upon by the Joint Committee to the District Meetings for consideration, and the Annual Conference of 1911 for consideration and adoption or rejection. Conferences to report their decisions and votes thereon, with any additional information deemed desirable by them, to the General Conference of 1911. Also that the General Conference authorize the General Conference Special Committee, after the reports of the decisions and votes on the proposed basis of union have been received from the Annual Conference, if they warrant such action, further to send the documents of the basis of union to the Quarterly Official Boards and also to the membership of the Church for consideration and adoption or rejection during the year 1911-12. The results of the decisions and votes of the Quarterly Official Boards and of the membership to be reported in 1911 and transmitted through the District Meetings and Annual Conferences of 1912 to the General Conference Special Committee, which shall further be authorized, if the tabulated results warrant the further action, to call a special meeting of the General Conference further to consider the matter of consummating the proposed union."

In moving the adoption of the report Chancellor Burwash recounted the steps which had led to the present action. He thought that the federation of Church colleges had much to do with fostering the union spirit. The new duties laid on us in building up a great nation furnished strong reasons for conserving our resources and uniting our energies. He pointed out that the basis of union was not intended to be the constitution of the united Church, but a statement of principles in accordance with which the constitution would be framed later.

Mr. J. M. Aikins, Winnipeg, made a strong speech in seconding the resolution. He said that the basis should be read and interpreted, not in a critical way, but in a plain, commonsense manner. The spirit of union was in the air. In various countries the Governments are federating; we in Canada believe that one Government is better for the people than two or three. Combinations and trusts are only bad when their objects are wrong. At present there is great waste through denominational rivalry.

Prof. Patton, Montreal, said he was in sympathy with the aim, but opposed to the basis of union. He criticised the doctrinal statement and said : "Almost no man can believe the whole of it." He objected because the doctrinal standards could be changed every two years, while in the Methodist Church the doctrines and rules cannot be wrecked, even by the chief court, a safeguard which has saved it from extremes and extravagances. The policy of the basis attacked by the leadership of the minister, placing it largely in the hands of the people.

Mr. Joseph Gibson read paragraphs from the basis touching doctrines which he believed fully answered Prof. Patton. He thought it a marvel that such a document had been prepared, and looked upon the basis as a miracle in ecclesiastical history. He hoped that the Churches concerned would have grace enough to sink their differences, and work together. This would be an object lesson to the world.

Rev. David Hickey, Nova Scotia, made a vigorous attack on the doctrines of the basis, referring especially to articles three and six, which he regarded as Calvinistic. He said the statement was practically the same as adopted by the Presbyterian Church in the United States, which was profoundly Calvinistic. He thought articles six and twelve were contrary to the Methodist standards. Mr. Hickey then proceeded to read from letters which he had received from eminent theologians, sustaining his views, but the Conference became impatient and several members exclaimed : "Take it as read."

Mr. Justice Maclaren and Mr. N. W. Rowell, K.C., dealt with the legal aspects of the question. The former expressed the opinion that if union is consummated the individual Churches may be able to remain out and keep their property. He did not believe that Parliament at Ottawa would pass over the property of the minority to the majority. If any considerable number of Methodists refused to accept union they would be entitled to a share of the Book Room property. The action of the British Parliament in regard to the "Wee Frees" of Scotland was quoted. The speaker feared that similar results might follow in Canada if the present basis of union is accepted.

Mr. N. W. Rowell said that the points raised by Mr. Justice Maclaren were of great importance and should receive careful attention. He submitted that the situation was entirely different from that in Scotland, for before any union was consummated an act of Parliament would have to be passed. In Scotland they had proceeded without this, which had involved them in great trouble. Everybody agreed that this matter should be carefully guarded. If we cannot get an act of Parliament there would be no union, therefore we need not trouble ourselves with the experiences in Scotland or in the United States. In considering the institutions in relation to property, Mr. Rowell quoted from the basis and showed conclusively that the reference of subsection 5 of paragraph 2 on "law" related exclusively to special cases where congregations held property "solely for their own benefit." This would not exempt the Methodist or Presbyterian churches, parsonages, or colleges that are held in the ordinary way. With the exception of a limited number of churches everything is covered and safeguarded. The Committee on Law had taken every precaution in regard to this.

Speaking on the merits of the case generally, Mr. Rowell referred to the world's great missionary conference in Edinburgh, and spoke of the note that struck a responsive chord in the hearts of the delegates—namely, a closer unity of the different branches of the Christian Church that they might more fully do their duty toward the non-Christian world. Missionaries say :—"However important you may regard your differences in the home land, we do not want them. On fundamentals we agree ; to magnify these is the best way to make the Gospel effective. If union is good on the mission field it ought to be good in the home land. If we can carry on the work of God more efficiently by uniting with the other Churches, then union will be entirely in harmony with Methodism." Mr. Rowell delivered a masterly address, which was received with great enthusiasm.

The vote on the recommendation of the committee was then taken, 220 voting for it and thirty-five against. This expresses approval of the basis of union and sends it down to the Annual Conferences, District Meetings, Quarterly Boards and membership for consideration and action.

Upon the vote being announced the Conference rose and sang the Doxology.

James Sargent, of East Luther, had a yearling steer killed by lightning the other morning. The electric fluid struck the animal on the back, passing down between the hind legs, and leaving a red mark.

MONO MILLS.

About fifty of the members of the congregation of St. John's Church, Mono Mills, met at the home of Mrs. W. J. Mills, on Wednesday evening of last week. They met to show their esteem for her daughter, Miss Ethel Allen, and their appreciation of her services as organist. Miss Allen was presented with a handsome club bag with fittings and manicure set as a recognition of her faithfulness. She leaves this week for New York where she purposes training as a nurse. Her departure leaves a vacancy which will be very difficult to fill. She has at all times taken an active part in all work of the church and Sunday-school.

The address was read by Mrs. Wilson Duke and Mrs. O. Potter made the presentation. W. J. Mills replied on behalf of Miss Allen very appropriately. Speeches were made by Messrs. W. G. Duke, A. R. Mills, Thos. Duke, Vancouver, John Jackson, J. Vance and A. Armstrong, of Vancouver. Mr. Thos. Duke expressed pleasure at seeing the church of his boyhood in such a flourishing condition. Recitations were given by Miss Ella Taylor, vocal solos by Geo. Burden and Jamie Duke, Vancouver, vocal duets by Misses Allen and Rusk; piano duets by Miss Allen and Mrs. E. O. Duke, piano solos by Bartley Mason, Fenelon Falls. Joseph E. Gray, student-in-charge, very efficiently performed the duties of chairman. After luncheon, all joined hands and sang Auld Lang Syne.

The following is the address:

To Miss Ethel Allen,—

It was with feelings of regret that we learned that you are about to sever your connection with our church. For the past two years you have faithfully and efficiently presided at the organ. Regularity and punctuality have at all times characterized your performance of duty. We know that on many occasions your work as organist called for great self-sacrifice. The only incentive which prompted you in your duties was the divine call to service. As organist we shall miss you greatly. In other departments of church work we shall feel your loss also. Since childhood you have been actively associated with our church. First as a Sunday-school scholar you were regular and attentive. Then later as Sunday-school teacher you have done noble work. When years have rolled away many children will repeat texts learned under your instruction, and your teaching. In the Women's Auxiliary you have taken an active part. You were ever ready to help on all good causes in connection with our Church and Sunday-school. You always supported every worthy object in both religious and secular life. We shall miss you but our loss will be a gain to some other sphere. We appreciate all your efforts to help on God's work in our midst. Especially do we wish to show our appreciation of your services as organist. As a slight token of our deep and sincere appreciation, we ask you to accept this club bag with fittings and manicure set. When you look upon this we hope you will think of your many sincere and devoted friends at Mono Mills. We pray that God's richest blessings may rest upon you throughout life. We wish you Godspeed on your journey and in the profession, which you have chosen.

Signed on behalf of the congregation of St. John's Church, Mono Mills.

W. G. DUKE,
S. J. PATTERSON.

LAUREL.

Mr. James Buchanan, an old resident of this section, passed away at his home on lot 9, con. 5, Amaranth, on Sunday, August 21st, at the ripe age of 88 years. The deceased had been in ill-health for several weeks and his death was not unexpected. The late Mr. Buchanan was born in Sligo, Ireland, his parents coming to Canada while he was a mere boy. The family settled in the neighborhood of Brockville, but the subject of this sketch moved to Amaranth shortly after his marriage 53 years ago. He and his young wife settled on lot 9, con. 5, where they have since resided. Much of Amaranth was at that time unsettled and there were comparatively few cleared farms in the township. Mr. and Mrs. Buchanan shared in the struggles, hardships and unceasing toil that were the common lot of the early settlers. By dint of patient industry and frugality they in time cleared up their farm and made themselves and family a comfortable home in what is now a fine section of agricultural country. The late Mr. Buchanan was a quiet, hardworking man, who enjoyed the respect and good-will of the neighborhood. His death is generally regretted and the sympathy of the community goes out to the bereaved wife and family. He is survived by a widow, whose maiden name was Elizabeth Hamilton, and a family of two sons and four daughters. The latter are Mrs. A. Blackwell, Tororto; Mrs. George Young; Mrs. Thos. Johnston and Robert Buchanan, of Amaranth, and John and Miss Mary Buchanan on the homestead. There are also two grandchildren, Mrs. S. Rainbow, now living in Torento, and Miss Lizzie Dennison, who have lived with their grandparents, since the death of their mother many years ago. Altogether there are twelve grandchildren and one great grandchild living. The late Mr. Buchanan was an uncle of Mrs. W. H. Lambe, Orangeville; Mrs. J. Garbutt, Bowling Green; Mrs. R. Hamilton, Toronto; Mrs. W. Sickling, Laurel; Mrs. W. McCabe, Shelburne; Mrs. James White, Whittington, and Messrs. Robert, Samuel, and E. Hamilton, of Laurel. The funeral was held to Laurel cemetery on Tuesday of last week, Revs. J. R. Bell and T. R. White conducting the services. The remains were borne to their last resting-place by the two sons, the three sons-in-law and Mr. Mr. S. Rainbow.

MONO MILLS.

Mr. Selwyn Mills, of Pittsburg, third son of Rev. Samuel Mills, of California, formerly a well-known resident of Mono, visited friends here on Saturday last.

Mrs. Robert Mills, whose illness was noted in last week's issue of The Banner, died on Saturday morning last, and was interred in St. John's cemetery, Mono, on Monday afternoon. A large gathering of friends and neighbors assembled to pay a last tribute of respect to one of the oldest pioneers of the community. The deceased lady who was predeceased by her husband some years, was a native of Armagh County, Ireland, and came to Mono with her parents when nine years old. Her maiden name was Alexander and three brothers survive her: Joseph, of Toronto, who with his wife and daughter, were with her when she passed away; John, of Palermo, who was also present, and James, of Palsley. Besides these members of her own family she leaves to mourn her loss four daughters, Mrs. Wm. Jackson, Mrs. Wm. Lee, of Moosomin, Sask.; Miss Sarah, of Winnipeg, and Miss Lizzie, at home, and seven sons:—Rev. Samuel Mills, of California; Wm. James, Robert John, Joseph, Stephen, of Erin; Alfred and Albert. Rev. Samuel Mills was unable to be present, the remaining six sons acting as pallbearers. Rev. A. C. Collier, of Winona, conducted the burial services. Concerning one who has lived to the advanced age of 92 years in our midst, it is unnecessary for the writer to make any comment on her life. Those who knew her most intimately esteemed her most highly. A faithful affectionate mother, whose family are an honour to her and a neighbor to whom none ever appealed for a kind act in vain, her removal is one of the irreparable losses which time in his relentless passing brings to all.

Mr. Wm. Henry and wife, of Washington, D.C., are visiting the former's parents here.

Mr. James Jeffers and wife, of Toronto, are spending a two weeks' holiday with friends here.

Messrs. Clifford and Orville Ellesley, of Nassagewaya, are the guests of Stork Bros., our popular general merchants.

Members and adherents of St. John's Church, Mono Mills, gathered at the home of Mr. W. J. ANOTHER WOMAN CURED

By Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Gardiner, Maine.—"I have been a great sufferer from organic troubles and a severe female weakness. The doctor said I would have to go to the hospital for an operation, but I could not bear to think of it. I decided to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Sanative Wash—and was entirely cured after three months' use of them."—Mrs. S. A. WILLIAMS, R. F. D. No. 14, Box 39, Gardiner, Me.

No woman should submit to a surgical operation, which may mean death, until she has given Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made exclusively from roots and herbs, a fair trial.

This famous medicine for women has for thirty years proved to be the most valuable tonic and renewer of the female organism. Women residing in almost every city and town in the United States bear willing testimony to the wonderful virtue of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It cures female ills, and creates radiant, buoyant female health. If you are ill, for your own sake as well as those you love, give it a trial.

Mrs. Pinkham, at Lynn, Mass., invites all sick women to write her for advice. Her advice is free, and always helpful.

GRAND VALLEY TOURNAMENT.

Thirty-one rinks took part in the first Tournament of the Grand Valley Lawn Bowling Club last week. The greens were in a beautiful condition and, while the weather was dark and lowering, there was not enough rain to interfere seriously with the playing. In this respect the bowlers were singularly fortunate, as it rained quite heavily in Orangeville on Tuesday afternoon, the opening day. Four rinks went up from Orangeville and two of them got into the final games in the Association and Consolation series. In the Association final, Hill defaulted to Dr. Beacom, of Harriston, on account of a disagreement over the time for the game. The Beacom bunch declined to play Wednesday night and insisted upon having the game played Thursday morning in time to get home on the 11 o'clock train. Stone, of Elora, nosed Kirkwood out in the Consolation final. Pow, of Grand Valley, won the trophy and got a great ovation from his clubmates at the close of the game. The results of the games in which local rinks participated were:—

A GROWING TIME.

The Progress of the Temperance Cause in Europe.

All over Europe there is to be found a growing interest in the question of temperance reform, and a growing antagonism to the liquor traffic. Prohibition sentiment is specially strong in Scandanavian communities. The bar is a thing of the past in the greater part of Norway and Sweden. Our readers are familiar with the legislative action that has been going on in Finland and Iceland, and other places.

The prohibition movement that is making so much progress in Canada and the United States, was preceded by an era of great activity in the extension of temperance organization along social lines, and the vigorous total abstinence propaganda. Great Britain and Europe now seem to be undergoing the same preliminary educating process, on a scale even more comprehensive than that with which we are familiar. This fact finds expression in the progress of the Good Templar movement which has a strong hold upon the British people, and which is winning great victories on the continent. A summary of some of its recent successes is put as follows in the August issue of the International Good Templar:—

Good Templary continues to make satisfactory progress on the Continent of Europe. At the recent session of the Grand Lodge of Sweden, a membership—Adult and Juvenile—of 227,261 was reported. This great total far surpasses that of any other country, and speaks volumes for the splendid work being done. Our Swedish Brethren leave nothing to chance. Everything in connection with the Order is done so enthusiastically and with such thoroughness that failure is impossible. The action of the Crown Prince of Sweden has given great satisfaction to our Brethren. The Prince opened a summer fete in connection with one of the District Lodges, strongly commended the work of the Order, made a fine speech on the benefits of abstinence both for the individual and the nation, and expressed the hope that his country would be the first to adopt Prohibition. He stayed and watched the country dances and sports, and partook of the repast provided for the guests.

The Grand Lodge of Germany II. has had a most successful Annual Session, at which increases of nearly 5,000 in the Adult section and over 5,000 in the Juvenile section were reported. The future of the Order in the Fatherland is full of promise, and great headway against the long-established drinking customs is assured.

In other jurisdictions the Order is making its influence felt for good. In Norway steady progress is being made. Good Templary is healthy in Denmark, and the Danish-speaking Grand Lodge of Germany keeps itself in evidence. Hungary and the Netherlands are slowly but surely growing in strength and usefulness, and Switzerland is more than maintaining its own. Roumania is coming rapidly to the front, and at no distant date a Grand Lodge, and possibly two—German and Roumanian speaking—will be instituted. The International Chief Templar has paid another visit to Russia, and has again rendered good service. If the authorities only gave the necessary permission; the Order would soon have a firm footing in that immense territory.

The good accomplished by the Order on the Continent, and the hopeful outlook, is most gratifying, and calls for the highest commendation to the thousands of willing workers, who, without thought of reward, save the privilege and joy of lessening human misery, and making their respective countries sweeter and brighter, have labored right nobly for good Templary. What is being so well accomplished in Europe can, by the same methods, be accomplished in other lands. The success referred to ought to be an inspiration and encouragement to Good Templars everywhere, and should stir many to emulate the zeal and persistency which has secured such excellent results.—Pioneer.

Any dish that has held dough, milk, cream or eggs should be rinsed in cold water before being placed in hot water, as hot water tends to cook such things and make them more difficult to remove.

Wash and starch your curtains in the usual way. Pin down on the lawn with toothpicks, stretching into position as you proceed. You will find they will look as good as new and the process much easier and quicker than with frames.

CAMPBELL—KNIGHT.

On the afternoon of August 10th, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. David Knight, of Pretoria, Manitoba, their daughter, Martha, was married to Mr. Hugh Campbell, of Durban. A delightful day graced the occasion and the wedding took place under the trees. The Rev. Alex. Kemlo, of Durban, solemnized the ceremony, assisted by Rev. N. Herbert, of Benito. Miss May Harvey was bridesmaid and Mr. Joseph Knight supported the groom. The bride looked very handsome in a dress of blue silk mull with cream lace insertion and wore a veil with white roses. The bridesmaid was gracefully in pale blue nun's veiling, trimmed with lace. Each wore a pearl brooch, the gift of the groom. The wedding ceremony was very happily arranged. Miss Scribner played a wedding march, and the bride was conducted by her father from the house to an evergreen arch erected on the lawn. Supper was served to about fifty guests and was made a very pleasant function closing with a "health to the bride" to which the groom responded, thanking the company for their good wishes. The bride received many beautiful presents from friends in the neighborhood and from Winnipeg and Ontario. Mr. and Mrs. Campbell will reside at Durban.

AN AUGUST WEDDING.

The home of Mr. and Mrs. Amos Fuller, Fead St., was the scene of a quiet but very pretty wedding on Wednesday afternoon, Aug. 17th, when their eldest daughter, Ethel, was united in marriage to Kenneth Alexander Cameron, of the H. S. Howland Hardware Company, Toronto. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Mr. Wheatley, pastor of Stayner Methodist Church. The bride, who was unattended, was given away by her father. The ceremony took place in the drawing room, which was decorated for the occasion with flowers and palms. The bride was prettily attired in myrtle blue silk trimmed with lace. Miss Mabel Fuller, sister of the bride, played the wedding march and also sang "Because." The ceremony was witnessed by some forty guests, mostly friends of the bride and groom. After the service the guests partook of a dainty wedding breakfast. The newly wedded couple left on the evening train for a trip down the St. Lawrence and a visit to New York City, the bride travelling in a tailor-made suit of navy blue with picture hat to match. On their return they will take up their residence in Toronto. The bride, who is a charming young lady, was the recipient of numerous handsome wedding gifts, expressive of the esteem and good wishes of her many friends.

Is Your Loaf Like This?

IF your flour is of the right quality, it ought to produce uniformly good bread. When the loaf comes out of the oven it ought to be appetizing and inviting in appearance. The crust should be crisp, tender and sweet as a nut. The pores of the bread should be regular showing uniform expansion by the yeast and every loaf should be light, plump and should expand over the top of the pan. Bread made from Ogilvie's

ED. HUXTABLE WEDS.

He and His Bride Have Gone on Honeymoon Trip to the Orient.

Tuesday morning, Aug. 2, 1910, at 9.30 o'clock at the residence of the bride's father, Mr. W. C. White, Jordan Avenue, Miss Adaline White and Mr. E. J. Huxtable, of Douglas, Arizona, were united in marriage, Rev. L. E. Barton officiating.

The handsome White home was decorated in parlor, hall, library and dining room with a wealth of growing plants and beautiful roses. In the parlor the recess of the bay window served for a shrine where the marriage vows were plighted, and was banked with ferns and palms, over which a wedding bell of clematis and ferns was hung.

A large party of friends gathered promptly at the hour in token of their sincere interest in the happy event.

Miss Annie Moore, the childhood and girlhood friend of the bride, played the wedding march. Little Misses Elsie and Frances Cottrell preceded the bridal party and stretched the white satin ribbons that formed the aisle to the altar. Messrs. Hudson Trotter and Homer Spraggins were the ushers and were followed by the matron of honor, Mrs. John Tubeville, in a lingerie gown with an arm bouquet of American Beauties. The bride and groom followed, and standing under the marriage bell, Mr. Barton, using the ring service, pronounced the solemn words that made them husband and wife.

The bride wore a lingerie gown of simple beauty, and was most attractive. She carried a bouquet of Bride roses. Her going away gown was of blue cloth with chiffon blouse, with accessories to match.

Mr. and Mrs. Huxtable left at once for San Francisco, where they will sail on the 9th. for a trip to the Orient. On their return they will go to their home at Douglas, Arizona.

A large selection of costly and beautiful gifts attested to the high esteem in which the bride is held in her home town.

Miss Adaline is one of West Point's most popular and best beloved daughters. Sunny and joyous in her temperament, she looks at the world with a smile on her face and the world returns it right heartily. In addition, she possesses a strong reserve fund of good sense that will be invaluable in meeting the graver issues of life. She leaves a whole city-ful of friends, who sincerely regret her departure to the far West, and their best wishes go with her.

Mr. Huxtable is a substantial business man of his city, who, while a complete stranger here, in the short stay when he came to claim his bride, made a most favorable impression on all who met him. —West Point (Mississippi) Leader.

Mr. Huxtable, who is a brother of Mr. T. R. Huxtable, Manager of the Dufferin Light & Power Company, attended High School here several years ago and is well-known to a number of our citizens. We learn from the Los Angeles Examiner that the newly wedded couple have gone on a honeymoon trip to Asia. The Examiner says :—

When the Mongolia sails out of San Francisco bay on Friday afternoon she should have orange blossoms for decorations and old shoes and rice as good luck missiles, for she will be a honeymoon ship.

Among the members of the "Examiner's" Oriental Tour on board will be a number of bridal couples who have selected this as the best honeymoon trip.

Mr. and Mrs. E. J. Huxtable, of Douglas, Arizona, head the list of newly weds and are staying at the King Edward Hotel.

They were married on August 2, in West Point, Mississippi. Mrs. Huxtable was Miss Adaline White and was prominent in society, women's club, and church circles; her parents have large plantations and commercial interests in that State.

While they have done several thousand miles of travelling already they, with the others of the company, are anxious for the jaunt to the Orient.

"We selected this tour," said Mr. Huxtable last evening, "as the best means of combining a pleasure trip with the benefit we will derive from visiting the most interesting portion of the world."

Mr. and Mrs. Carl Raab, of El Monte, are another couple of honeymooners in the party.

So among the lures of Japan and its mixture of yesterday, to-day and to-morrow, amid the mysterious, baffling complexities of existence in China, seeing the new era in the Philippines, and the transformation that the flag has brought about in Hawaii, these couples will traverse smiling seas and romantic regions in their quest for added happiness.

A special train carrying the Oriental Tour party from this section will leave here to-morrow afternoon at 3 o'clock from the Arcade depot.

Itching Piles For 27 Yrs.

Despaired of ever getting relief until cure came 3 years ago with use of DR. CHASE'S OINTMENT.

Mr. John Johnson, Cawley, Alta., writes: "Three years ago I was cured of blind, itching piles of twenty-seven years' standing by using Dr. Chase's Ointment. I used to think that death would be the only relief I could ever get from the terrible misery of piles.

"Dr. Chase's Ointment is worth sixty dollars a box instead of sixty cents. I am a different man since using it. I am farming all the time now and never miss a day. Words fail to express my gratitude for the cure this Ointment made for me. I cannot tell half as much about it as it deserves. Any one doubting this can write direct to me."

Do not accept an imitation or substitute in place of Dr. Chase's Ointment, for there has yet to be discovered a treatment which so promptly gives relief from itching and so thoroughly cures every form of piles. 60 cents a box, at all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Toronto. Write for a free copy of Dr. Chase's Recipes.

WHAT A HORSE WENT THROUGH

Chas. Greensides' dray horse has been having an interesting time of it lately. A few days ago as the horse was being used to draw hay for James Murphy the animal broke through the barn floor and disappeared into the cellar. There was no means of egress and it was only by tearing a hole through the foundation that the horse was liberated. That he is a lucky as well as an unlucky brute is proven by the fact that he came out of it practically unscratched. On Tuesday his owner had the horse plowing in W. H. Steele's orchard when the fates caused the animal to tread so heavily over an old well, about 6 feet deep, that the covering gave way and the horse's hind quarters sank so far into the opening that it was only with the help of many hands and strenuous work that he was once more placed on his four big feet. Once more the brute's hard luck had a lucky finish, for again he came through unscratched and was hauling the dray around the streets a few hours after as if nothing had happened. Mr. Greensides will no doubt begin wondering if he hadn't better take out an accident policy on his horse's life.—Mt. Forest Representative.

DANDELIONS AND DESTINIES.

Any bright summer morning the lawn is full of them, dandelions, of course, not destinies. Destinies don't grow in the grass, supposedly; they are found higher up, overhead where the stars are, not under foot with the plantain, ragweed and other undesirable garden growth.

And yet I don't know. Sometimes I think one's destiny is very close at hand, perhaps nearer than we dream, so as almost to be in danger of being neglected, overlooked and even trampled on.

But you can't overlook the dandelions, at any rate, though you would trample on them to utter extinction. It's a consummation devoutly to be wished, most certainly, as you realize to your sorrow when the winds blow the down hither and thither all across the place, and each morning's sun shows a new crop of bright heads crowding up to try to monopolize the light and sending their roots down to monopolize the soil.

Dandelions are a large and scattering subject. Thoughts about them spring up almost anywhere. And you can begin digging them almost anywhere. I began, one summer morning, in the first outdoors I came to. It was a nice, summery outdoors, and I wasn't altogether alone. Many dandelions make bright work, as many pairs of hands that make work light.

Dandelions are not my business. Ideas, I suppose, are as much my business as anything. But in my business on this particular morning ideas were scarce, and dandelions were exceedingly plentiful in the front lawn. So I threw down my books and borrowed a potato knife from the cook.

There are times in life when we must deliberately turn away from the more momentous concerns to concerns of apparently no concern whatever, leave our desks littered with unanswered letters, our minds choked with unsolved problems, and our business partners discussing vast matters of high finance—and perhaps our wives wrestling with unpaid bills — leave all this, I say, and put on the oldest pair of trousers we own and the loosest sweater we can find, and borrow a potato knife from the cook and go out into the strange world outside our own doorstep and dig dandelions; get down on our hands in the furthest corner over by the hedge and work away hour after hour, across to the pansy bed and down to the road and back to the hedge in a slowly widening area, working fast and furious and as far as we can, thinking not at all except of the next plant to come up in our fingers, seeing nothing at all except the little gold disks and the jagged green leaves and the fat, gray buds that try to hide their heads; breathing deep from the lungs down; and working steadily and with increasing mental comfort as our unaccustomed fingers cramp and get ready to blister, and all our physical comfort decreases—working steadily, blade in, weed out, blade in, weed out, blade in, weed out, new reach of knife and three weeds in the basket, and so on and so on, all across the place.

The obvious assets of dandelining can be classified under three heads :

First, to be out in the open air. This speaks for itself, and when you come indoors again the new color and contentment in your face speak for you. It is a great thing to sweep your lungs with the new broom of winds that haven't already been at work in a couple of thousand intercostal interiors as dusty and as musty as your own. It is a great thing thoroughly to empty your mind and fill it with new air not half as hot as that which it previously contained. It is a great thing to get on the grass and on your knees, thoroughly happy, comfortably busy. And the dandelions will do it for you, any day.

Second, to work with your hands. We people of books and offices generally begin with a proud scorn of manual labor—and end with a humble reverence for it. Most of the abandoned farms, I notice, are taken up by deserted business men and neglected university professors. College and culture as well as commerce and cash-accounting have yet much to learn from the soil. The shovel and the hoe can still teach us many lessons that both the ticker and the Greek lexicon fail with. A philosopher who was fortunate enough to have a garden—and he had it to thank for anything that was of abiding value in his philosophy—happily summed up all the greatness of his sagacity in one wise little phrase, "When in doubt, dig." That's how dandelions help destiny. If you don't believe it, try and see. "When in doubt, dig."

Third, to simplify your mental processes. It's a very modest amount of brain matter that is required for dandelions. It is about as simple as one, two, three, after you've been up in the higher mathematics. It's like the elementary act of buying an evening paper after wrestling for four hours with an intricate law exam. on "Sales." And your mind appreciates the change. After a big battle with destiny, a scrimmage among the dandelions is a welcome interlude.

Often and often the very best thing you can do for destiny is to leave it alone and go out and look for something else. For he that is willing to lose his life in the petty concerns of this ordinary day will surely find it again amid the glories of the larger life that is eternal. Do the every-day drudgery of life and destiny will look out for itself. It won't leave you on your knees in the back yard, when the soldiers are marching past the front door to battle; it will call you out into the street to join the procession, and may even put you on a horse up in front of the band, as it did with one Cincinnatus in Roman days long ago.

Look out for the dandelions, then, and I've an idea that destiny will look out for itself. Take the little things of life as they come—and see to it that they come bright and fast and sunshiny—and the big things will be pretty sure to turn up of their own accord, when and where they're due, which in all probability will be when and where you want them most. In the meantime get out of doors all you can. Learn to use your hands, no matter how humble and simple a trade. And do your thinking in the straightest line you can—if doesn't have to be a long line. Keep your mental machinery as simple and as elementary as you please, but keep it busy; and make it turn out deeds just as fast as it can think.

Look out for the dandelions, then, and destiny—the chances are—will look out for you.—The Congregationalist.

Semi-Steel Fire-Pot—Not Gray Iron

A FIRE-POT of a furnace should be able to endure tremendous heat and to repel the attacks of sulphur fumes.

The material commonly used for a fire-pot is gray iron. The Sunshine fire-pot is Semi-Steel.

Now, avoiding technical terms, gray iron has what may be called "open" pores. Through these "open" pores the destructive sulphur fumes attack the iron and hasten disintegration.

On the other hand, Semi-Steel is a close-grained material, with a smooth-as-glass surface which practically seals or "closes" up the pores. Semi-Steel easily repels the attacks of gas fumes and thus greatly prolongs the life of the fire-pot.

A Semi-Steel fire-pot weighs 25 per cent. heavier than the same size and pattern in grey iron. It is therefore better able to endure tremendous heat.

Semi-Steel is made by an exclusive McClary process. You can only get a Semi-Steel fire-pot with a McClary furnace. That is one strong reason why you should have the Sunshine installed in your home. Our agent in your locality will tell you many other reasons. Ask him.

Remember, the Sunshine is guaranteed, by the largest makers of furnaces in British Empire, to heat your home to your entire satisfaction. 45

INACTION BRINGS FAILURE.

It is not necessary for a man to be actively bad in order to make a failure of life; simply inaction will do it. Nature has everywhere written her protest against idleness; everything which ceases to struggle which remains inactive, rapidly deteriorates. It is the efforts towards an ideal, the constant struggle to get higher and further which develops manhood and character.

There are few men who cannot appreciate the higher ideals to follow after which brings pleasure and honor and the struggle after the more excellent things is surely worth making. What enjoyment is there in life in the absence of the activity that develops a broader manhood and the soul growth that uplifts and broadens the individual, stirring up within him the resolve to be a workman in the field of social effort for the benefit of his fellowmen. This one thing I do, said St. Paul, I press forward "leaving the things that are behind" I reach towards the mark—the high calling—the ideal, the effort for human betterment. And he fought for the realization of his purpose "not as one that beats the air but in season and out of season so that by any means he might save some." Yes he aimed to be an instrument in the work of uplifting others and could say I have fought a good fight, kept the faith of a good resolve, and obtained the crown.—Ex.

THE UNRESTED.

This is the age of vacations. It is the proper thing now for all sorts and conditions of persons to take a holiday and seek much needed rest. Very many of those who can do it take advantage of the diminishing of duties that belongs to the hot weather and leave their counter and desk or hand it over to a substitute, and for a time forget they ever had a position in the working world. But there are some who can yet will not drop their burdens to take any holiday. Year in and year out they keep at their task, except when they stop to pour scorn upon their less hardy fellows who feel that a vacation is indispensable to their existence. Of those who can rest and will not, we have only this to say, that with all their conscious fitness for their work they are losers by their unremitting application. Any occupation that calls for concentration of energy and vigor of personal attention causes, in some degree, attrition to the nerves, and that worn and wearied condition is bound to make us less capable workers. A holiday ought to be regarded as an investment rather than as an indulgence. A holiday that enlarges one's world and takes the mind into new rooms of thought is to a worker what a fresh vein of ore is to a miner, or what a new star is to an astronomer.

But the great majority cannot take a vacation. No chance for it comes to them. Their work, perhaps, cannot be turned over to another, or their employers do not believe in holidays, or the expenses of a holiday will mean the reduction of the home necessaries. Many parents can only afford to give the children a short change of scene that they may not feel the taunts that the well-to-do offer to their poorer neighbours. And often this gift of paternal affection means more work for the bread-winner in order to make ends meet.

The unrested are very many and they are all about us. They have the will and the wish to go to some quiet place and rest awhile; but it ends there, and through the heat and sultriness of the summer they face their task with contented courage. Their endurance is admirable, worthy of applause. Those who come home from the sea and the hills browned and invigorated are blind if they fail to see the heroic that shines in the pale faces of these unrested stay-at-homes. Those who would have gone if they could do not bewail their limitations nor boast of their faithfulness. Their perceptance of the unresting life is not a matter for pride in their judgment. A profound feeling that they are filling their appointed place seems to possess them. They apparently find recreation and recuperation in the cheerful way they accept the inevitable.

All honor to these unrested ones. Their door opens the year round to the appeal of their friends. Their place is occupied in person in the church whether the minister be the regular one or a stranger. The prayer-meeting keeps its continuity through their loyalty. The Sunday School is equipped each day by their presence. They rest not summer nor winter from their good works of faith and love. In city and town and village they are to be found. They are the props of the state and the pillars of the church. We can never know how much they mean to the stability and strength of life until they go to their long home and we go mourning about the streets.—The Presbyterian.

THE FOOT-NOTE GOES.

General Conference Makes Important Change in Discipline Rule.

The principal interest at Thursday's sessions of the Methodist Church General Conference was the abrogation of the famous foot-note on discipline, around which a controversy has raged at the last three quadrennial gatherings, and the substitution therefor of a new foot-note which will have the effect of morals of the church. In effect, the former foot-note, which epitomized the rules for the conduct of church members specified those amusements and practices which were regarded as inconsistent with the faith. The new one merely urges the living of a Christian life and the non-indulgence in amusements and practices, unspecified, which are regarded as inconsistent with Methodism.

At the night session the discussion on church union opened, and it was apparent that the mind of the Conference, while largely in favor of the aim in view, holds widely divergent opinions on the basis upon which this aim should be consummated. This discussion will probably last until the closing day of the Conference.

The foot-note, around the abrogation, substitution or retention of which a bitter discussion raged, came through a report from the Commission on Rules appointed at the last quadrennium. This commission was composed of 35 men, among them the most prominent figures in Methodism in the country. The report suggested a substitution for the foot-note, but it was not of a character to meet with favor at the Conference.

THE FOOT-NOTE ABOLISHED.

Paragraph 35 of the Discipline read:

"Note.—The general rules are to be understood as forbidding neglect of duties of any kind; imprudent conduct; indulging in wilful tempers and words; the buying, selling or using of intoxicating liquors as beverages; dancing; playing games of chance; encouraging lotteries; attending theatres, horse racing, circuses, dancing parties; patronizing dancing schools; taking such other amusements as are obviously of a misleading or questionable moral tendency, and all acts of disobedience to the order and discipline of the church."

THE FOOT-NOTE SUBSTITUTED.

On motion of Prof. W. Andrews, of Sackville, N.B., seconded by Rev. Dr. White, of New Westminster, and almost unanimously adopted by Conference, the foot-note has been abrogated and the following substituted:

"For as much as these rules are to be interpreted by the enlightened Christian conscience, according to the principles of Christian liberty revealed by God's Word, our members are earnestly admonished that they guard with great care their reputation as servants of Christ, and in the case of those amusements and practices which are of a hurtful and questionable tendency that they do not engage in those injurious to their spiritual life or incompatible to their allegiance to Jesus Christ, their Master."

Rev. Dr. J. G. Speer, Toronto, urged that for the foot-note a paragraph should be substituted to read that it should not be assumed that rules were set forth as a legal enactment to hold the people of the church in bondage, but that they were as a guidance to the spiritual life that it was hoped all the members of the church would lead. Dr. Speer said that they had basic principles to the members on the grounds of moral conduct.

Dr. J. S. Ross, Hanover, understood that the province of the commission was to cut out antiquated phrases in discipline, and not to make radical changes in the conduct of the church life. Neither Conference nor members of the church at large had ever expected that this issue would come up. When it first appeared in the press a great surprise must have been felt among the adherents of Methodism in Canada. No Conference had asked that the issue be raised; it was a flank attack on the very principles of the moral conduct of the church. What would the people of the church throughout the Dominion think when they woke up in the morning and found that the prohibitions regarding moral conduct had been eliminated from the discipline?

At this point the speaker asked Chancellor Burwash, the chairman of the Commission on Rules, to explain the reason for its recommendation. He pointed out that at the last general Conference petitions had been received to warrant the commission dealing with the question. Indeed, it was for [illegible] the committee [illegible] existence.

In their deliberations three courses were open to them. One was to retain the foot-note; the second to leave it out, and the third to amend it, or provide a substitute. If the Commission had left out the foot-note altogether, the majority of the members in the church would think they were taking back ground on this important question. In his reading of the foot-note he believed the church was inconsistent with itself, for many of its young people went to the theatres, and there was no interference. What the church wanted was the spiritual idea, which would render any such rules unnecessary. As the discussion had already shown, the matter of the precise form of the foot-note had called forth the expression of a variety of opinions. If the Conference abrogated the foot-note without providing a substitute it would lay itself open to the criticism of the entire church.

The decision was received with loud applause, but that the decision was regarded as a really momentous one was evident from the excited groups of delegates who collected to discuss the controversy and its outcome.

PALE ANAEMIC GIRLS.

The languid, semi-invalid girl is no longer popular. Firm flesh, rounded form and a healthy glow to the complexion are the results of using Dr. A. W. Chase's Nerve Food. Mrs. Goddson, 104 Sebastapool St., Montreal, Que., writes: "My daughter's appetite was bad and she was pale and bloodless. Since using Dr. A. W. Chase's Nerve Food there is a marked change in her condition. She is stronger and healthier in every way."

Grat Wise, aged 28, fell from a trestle of the National Portland Cement Co. works at Durham a week ago Saturday, a distance of 70 feet. His back was injured and his condition was reported as critical.

"Young man," said the pompous old codger, "If you would be successful in this world, begin at the bottom and work up." And the well digger walked sadly away scratching his head and wondering how that could be.

The charges against Mr. Manley Chew, M.P., for North Simcoe, of supplying liquor to Indians on the Christian Island reserve, Georgian Bay, have been dismissed. When the cases were called by Magistrate Clark, of Orillia, no one appeared for the prosecution. Counsel for the defence stated that he understood the charges had been abandoned. The Magistrate accordingly issued an order dismissing them.

JOHN DAVIS DEAD.

John Davis, formerly a well-known resident of Amaranth, living on lot 28, con. 8, in that township, died at Woodstock a week ago Monday. He moved to Woodstock about nine years ago and has since been engaged in fruit farming. Deceased was a brother of George Davis and Thomas Davis, of Amaranth. Mrs. T. Burnside, of Amaranth, and Mrs. Malcolm Davey, of Earlton, New Ontario, are sisters.

MOTHER AND CHILD DIED.

A great sorrow has fallen upon the home of Mr. William Bryan, lot 9, con. 6, Amaranth, which has been twice bereaved within the last week, first by the death of an infant child and then by the sudden and utterly unexpected taking away of Mrs. Bryan. On Saturday a four months' child, Ross Campbell, succumbed to valvular heart trouble. Arrangements were made to hold the funeral to Greenwood cemetery Sunday afternoon. Sunday morning Mr. Bryan went over to his brother's place to arrange for pallbearers for the funeral. On his return he was horrified to find that his wife, whom he had left in apparent good health, had died during his absence. The body was reclining on a lounge, the stricken woman having apparently lain down to rest on feeling the symptoms of the fatal seizure. Dr. Campbell, of Grand Valley, who was summoned, pronounced death due to heart collapse. The deceased woman, who was only 40 years of age, is survived by her heart-broken husband and a family of four young children, two boys and two girls. She was a daughter of the late James Trimble, one of the early settlers in Amaranth, and a sister of James and Joseph Trimble, of that township. Ed. and George Trimble and Mrs. Samuel Tweedy, all living in the West, and Mrs. John Maltby, and Mrs. Robert Brown, Amaranth, are also brothers and sisters. She was a devoted wife and mother and is spoken of as an excellent neighbor. Her unexpected demise, following so soon after the loss of her child, has cast a deep gloom over the entire community and aroused a feeling of the most profound sympathy for Mr. Bryan and the motherless children. Under the sad circumstances the funeral of the child was deferred until Monday afternoon, when the remains of the mother and her little one were laid at rest together in Greenwood cemetery. Notwithstanding the fact that the farmers of Amaranth are in the midst of their harvest, the funeral was probably the largest held in the township for years. The services at the house and grave, which were usually impressive and affecting, were conducted by Rev. J. R. Bell, assisted by Rev. T. R. White. The pallbearers were Messrs. James and Joseph Trimble, John, James and Robert Bryan and John Woulfe.

ELECTRICITY ON THE FARM.

Electric Power Peculiarly Adapted to Farm Use—The Influence of Irrigation.

That the modern farmer wants electric power on his farm is shown by the increased use of electricity in rural districts. Here and there all over the United States—in New York, Illinois, California, Colorado, and in fact in almost every state of the Union—are to be found to-day farms partially or completely equipped with electric power.

The increasing difficulties of securing competent farm labor make it imperative, said Herman Russell, in an address before the National Electric Light Association, New York, recently, that the farmer install labor-saving machinery.

Electric lights mean comfort in the farmhouse and a lessening of the fire hazard. By providing suitably lighted buildings, work can be done more efficiently; that is, more work and fewer hours. Electric power with its factors of safety, reliability, cleanliness, flexibility and ease of application is peculiarly adapted to farm use—to pumping water, driving conveyers, running churns, separators, feed cutters, milking machines and grinders; to operating hoists, spraying machines, saws and machine tools; even to doing the household washing and ironing, and providing a cold storage plant. For these purposes, and many more, electric power is now used on the farms of the country. In Europe, where much greater progress has been made than in this country, ploughing, cultivating, etc., are being done with the aid of electricity.

Makers of electrical machinery are paying special attention, Mr. Russell said, to the rural field, and are making small complete electrical outfits for farm use.

Recently there has sprung up in many sections, particularly in the Western States, a demand for power for pumping water for irrigation purposes, and all over the best water is being pumped by electricity from wells, rivers, lakes and ditches, for irrigation use.

Large government and private company undertakings are now supplying water in this way for thousands of acres. Individual farmers, wherever electric power can be obtained, are installing pumping outfits and irrigating their own land, thereby saving the cost of water rights and maintenance charges, while obtaining water at a very reasonable cost when they want it and where they want it—a condition not always reached with gravity systems.

The electric development for irrigation pumping is proceeding in two ways: Either a large pumping plant suitably located is installed, and all the water for a given acreage is pumped at this point to a higher level and then distributed by gravity—the power used being electric, with either steam or hydraulic generation; or, electric power is furnished from a central plant to the individual farmers, who supply their own water, either from streams, wells, gravity ditches or lakes, as the case may be. In either case electric power does the work, the difference being simply one of application.

The use of gasoline engines for driving small generators, which in turn are used to charge storage batteries supplying electric light, is becoming very common.

VOTED $100,000.

Owen Sound Property Holders Show Faith in Shipbuilding Project.

Also Sanctioned Loan of $20,000 to Furniture Factory.

Voting took place in Owen Sound on Saturday on two by-laws for industrial purposes, and both were carried. One by-law was to grant $100,000 toward a shipbuilding and dry-dock plant, which is being floated in Great Britain, and which will involve an expenditure of $1,900,000. The town will bonus the proposition for $50,000, and take stock for a similar amount. The arranging for capital is in the hands of a prominent English Engineer, who has been closely identified with Admiralty and other engineering projects in Great Britain. The Government has given its assurance of the subsidy of 3 per cent. interest on the investment, the location in Owen Sound Harbor being favored owing to the short season during which navigation is closed here, the average of the past ten years not being over ten weeks.

The other by-law was to authorize a loan of $20,000 to a furniture manufacturing company, composed of local and outside capitalists, headed by Mr. Minsener, of Stratford. Owen Sound has the largest exclusive chair and table factories in the Dominion, and the new concern is to supplement these industries and facilitate shipping where assorted carload shipments are necessary. The opposition to both by-laws was inconsiderable.

HOW ONE WOMAN REGAINED HEALTH.

Utterly Helpless and Friends Did Not Expect Her To Get Better.

The great fame of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills is due to the fact that they have restored to active health and strength hundreds of people, when all other treatment had failed to cure, and who had come to believe themselves hopeless, chronic invalids. The case of Mrs. Henry Britton, 1284 Alexander Avenue, Winnipeg, Man., adds another striking proof to the truth of this assertion. Mr. Britton writes as follows concerning his wife's long illness and ultimate cure through the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. "It is a simple thing to recommend Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and yet it is difficult to express fully one's heartfelt gratitude for such a marvellous remedy, as they have restored my wife to health and strength after the best efforts of the medical fraternity had failed. For years prior to our coming to Canada, and since that time up to about three years ago, my wife had been subject to severe illnesses from what the doctors said was chronic anaemia. She was utterly and entirely helpless, and so weak that she had to be lifted in and out of bed for weeks at a stretch. The trouble was aggravated by recurrent rheumatism and heart trouble. She had no appetite or strength for anything. I employed the best medical attendance and nurses procurable. The doctor gave her tonics and ordered beef tea and wine. The tonics and medicine would relieve her for a time, and then she would slip back once more into the old state—but worse if anything. Then we began giving her advertised remedies, but all seemed of no avail. One evening while reading a newspaper I happened to see an advertisement of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. It told the case of a young woman who had been a great sufferer from anaemia, and who testified to having been cured through the use of these Pills. The case seemed to describe very closely the symptoms of my wife, and although I had pretty nearly lost all hope of her ever being well again, I decided to get a supply of the Pills and urged her to use them. My wife was thoroughly disheartened, and said she expected it was only another case of money thrown away. However she began taking the Pills, and I thank God she did, for after she had used them for a time, she felt they were helping her. From that time on her appetite came back, her color began to return, and she who had been looked upon as a hopeless invalid began to take a new interest in life. She continued taking the Pills, and through them her health continued to improve, until at last we were able to heartily congratulate her upon her complete restoration to health. Some three years have since passed, and in that time she has never been bothered in the slightest degree with the old trouble. Her cure has astonished everyone who knew how ill she had been, and we acknowledge with heartfelt thanks our gratitude to Dr. Williams' Pink Pills which literally brought her back to health from the brink of the grave."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills cure such cases as this in just one way — they actually make new blood, which fills the depleted veins and brings new strength to every nerve and every organ in the body. Nearly all the everyday ailments of life come from poor or watery blood, and it is because Dr. Williams' Pink Pills make new blood that they cure anaemia, indigestion, headaches, sideaches and backaches, rheumatism, neuralgia, general weakness and the ailments that growing girls and women do not like to talk about, even to their doctors. If you are weak, sick or ailing, no other medicine will cure you so quickly as Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. Sold by all medicine dealers or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

WOULD YOU CARRY YOUTH INTO AGE?

Expect a good long, useful life.

Hold young thoughts persistently.

Simply refuse to grow old by counting your years or anticipating old age.

Refrain from all kinds of stimulants and sedatives; they will shorten your life.

One of the best preventives of old age is enthusiasm and interest in affairs of the day.

Keep in the sunlight: nothing beautiful or sweet grows or ripens in the darkness.

Avoid fear in all its varied forms of expression; it is the greatest enemy of the human race.

Nature is the great rejuvenator; her spirit is ever young. Live with her; study her; love her.

Avoid excesses of all kinds; they are injurious. The long life must be a temperate, regular life.

Contemplate beauty in all its forms, and you will drive everything that is ugly out of your life.

Keep mental cobwebs, dust and brain ashes brushed off by frequent trips to the country, or to travel.

Don't allow yourself to think on your birthday that you are a year older, and so much nearer the end.

Never look on the dark side; take sunny views of everything; a sunny thought drives away the shadows.

Be a child; live simply and naturally and keep clear of entangling alliances and complications of all kinds.

Cultivate the spirit of contentment; all discontentment and dissatisfaction bring age-furrows prematurely to the face.

Keep your mind young by fresh, vigorous thinking, and your heart sound by cultivating a cheerful, optimistic disposition.

Don't live to eat, but eat to live. Many of our ills are due to overeating, to eating wrong things, and to irregular eating.

Don't be too ambitious; the canker of an overvaulting ambition has eaten up the happiness of many a life and shortened its years.

Throw aside your dignity, and romp and play with children; make them love you by loving them, and you will add years to your life.

Think beautiful thoughts— harmony thoughts, beauty thoughts, truth thoughts, thoughts of innocence, of youth, of love and of kindness.

Love is the great healer of all life's ills, the great strengthener and beautifier. If you would drink at the fountain of perpetual youth fill your life with it.

Eat plenty of fruit and fresh vegetables in summer, and cut down your meat diet. Drink a liberal allowance of pure water at all times, but not ice water.

Pure air both indoors and outdoors is absolutely essential to health and longevity. Never allow yourself to remain in a poisoned or vitiated atmosphere.

Avoid anger, discord, hurry, or anything else that exhausts vitality or over-stimulates; whatever frets, worries, or robs you of peace or sleep will make you prematurely old.

Refuse to allow the mind to stiffn the muscles by the suggestion of age limitation. Age is a mental state brought about by mental conviction. You are only as old as you feel.

Form a habit of throwing off, before going to bed at night, all the cares and anxieties of the day—everything which can possibly cause mental wear and tear or deprive you of rest.

Age is conservative. Keep your mind open to truth and receptive to all that is broadening and ennobling by reading and thinking, and your sympathies alive and generous by taking a warm interest in the lives and welfare of others.—Sel.

While little Harold Morrow and a number of other boys were playing in the lumber yard of the Preston Furniture Co. recently, Harold had his leg broken and otherwise badly bruised and crushed about midway between the knee and the foot. It was a compound fracture. The lads had been playing with the lumber car which the men run by hand on tracks laid in the yards, and must have run over the boy's leg. Doctors Mulloy and Hogg set the limb but the flesh was so badly bruised that it would not heal and the limb was later amputated just below the knee.

THE EVERLASTING POWER.

There are thousands and thousands of square miles in the United States which, except for the power of falling water, would suffer the pinch of industrial depression within the next fifty years. There are many other regions where only the development of water-power can bring thick settlement. In the West it means the building up of the country. East of the Mississippi, where eight-tenths of the people live and nine-tenths of the manufacturing is done, it is more important. It means in many districts the continuance of prosperity.

For the public welfare it is imperative that the power of the water as it descends from the hills be turned to man's use. Moreover, from the natural condition it is almost necessary that it be developed as a monopoly, at least so far as each district is concerned.

It seems, therefore, that for the public good it would be wise to recognize the monopoly feature, and in the beginning to devise means for controlling its power over the business and fortunes of the people whom it serves.

What water-power may mean to a state is exemplified by the possible developments in Georgia. If a layer of coal that would yield millions of tons a year were discovered in north Georgia, every train moving South would be filled with men hurrying to the scene; a stream of gold would flow toward its development; steamship lines would again be running into Charleston, Brunswick, and Savannah, carrying immigrants to loose the stored-up power.

Mr. George M. Chapin, of Atlanta, has investigated for The World's Work the situation and its possibilities.

Georgia is crossed by a series of ridges spreading fan-shaped from the northeastern part of the state in a southerly direction, dividing it into six great basins. Crossing the state almost as the crow flies, from Augusta to Columbus, runs what may be called the southern fall-line. Between it and the mountains to the north is the larger part of the water-power of Georgia—almost 550,000 horse-power at the minimum flow of the streams as they now run.

The Horse-Power of Six Great Basins

Name of Basin	Min.H.P.	Min.H.P. for Six High Water Months
Savannah	175,462	269,184
Ogeechee	3,895	9,730
Altamaha	47,088	78,272
Appalachicola	173,786	281,550
Mobile	57,524	95,804
Tennessee	33,895	65,333
Total	491,650	799,873

To this must be added the power of many small streams which brings the total of the minimum flow to 548,000 horse-power for twenty-four hours in the day.

At one end of the fall-line is Augusta. It was made a manufacturing city by the power of the Savannah River. Sixty-five years ago the canals were built which are now supplying the 12,800 horse-power which lights the city, runs its street-car lines, and is sold to the mills for $5.50 per horse-power for a sixteen hour day.

At the other end of the fall-line is Columbus. Within thirty-four miles of the city the Chattahoochee falls 370 feet, which will make possible the development of 125,000 horse-power. Ten thousand horse-power is now at work.

In the rest of Georgia 144,000 horse-power is now harnessed; but this, according to Mr. M. R. Hall, of the United States Geological Survey, represents only about 80,000 horse-power in the table printed above, because it is not based upon a 24-hour day but upon various systems of development—"some plants use the actual flow only, others storing half of the time and using twenty-four hours' flow in twelve hours; and others still, as is the case with most of the modern hydro-electric plants, being capable of producing for a portion of each day three or four times as much power as could be produced continuously twenty-four hours a day."

With one-sixth of the power of the minimum flow of its rivers in use, Georgia (like most of the Atlantic States) is awaiting development—and development is coming. Rights on the headwaters of the Chattahoochee, the Chestatee and the Etowah Rivers are held by interests affiliated with the Westinghouse Company. An Atlanta company proposes to dam the Rugelo for 18,000 horse-power. There are plans for the further use of the Savannah River, and on the Broad River a 40,000 horse-power plant is planned—and there are many other smaller enterprises on foot, enough perhaps to double the use now made of the rivers.

The real significance of it all lies in the relation of the cost of this power to the cost of power generated by coal. The minimum cost of steam power in Atlanta is $35, ranging upward according to the efficiency of the plant. The insufficient supply of electric power which reaches Atlanta now is sold at $34.40. At Augusta the price is $5.50. The Southern Power Company in the Carolinas charges large consumers a minimum of $22.

What is the need of regulation? There is a little town in the West where the people live by pumping water from driven wells to irrigate their orchards. The pumps are run by electricity furnished by a company owning the only water-power in the vicinity. There is no other electric power to be had, and the price of coal is prohibitive. The company now follows the enlightened policy of charging a reasonable rate, and the orchardists prosper. But if it should change hands and adopt a more narrow-minded policy, it could if it wished, by following further this method, finally get control of the land itself. Perhaps this may seem a remote danger, and yet men who would lend money on irrigated land elsewhere would hardly lend money on these orchards—unless a contract for a certain rate on the power was made to cover the term of the mortgage.

TREES.

From my bedroom window I look out upon a little forest of trees and they are never the same; it is one forest in the morning, another in the afternoon, and at night yet another and still more beautiful one filled with strange magic and mystery. Very early all through the singing months I am wakened with the songs of the birds—first the robin, as he hails the last at night save for the nightingale and hooting owl—and I often wonder whether I love my trees best in the Spring or in the Winter. A row of houses is the same all the year round, it knows no changes, and is the most monotonous of outlooks; but the trees have always something new to say, it is impossible ever to tire of the trees. If one morning I were to wake and find my forest with its colony of friendly rooks and wise owls gone, I should not want to look out of my window any more; it is a very little wood, but it holds as many pleasures for me as ever Adam found in Eden.—E. H. Martin.

We are assured that Mr. Hackett has no intention of abandoning his bride. We make this correction voluntarily and from a sense of justice to the young man.

AN AUSTRALIAN HEADER.

A machine, called an Australian Header, was given a trial in a field of grain on Mr. R. J. Patterson's farm near Fraxa Junction yesterday. The machine cuts, threshes, cleans and bags the grain. This class of machine is in general use in Australia and South Africa and it is thought it can be operated successfully on large farms in Canada, either in Ontario or the Western Provinces. The experiment, which, we understand, was quite successful, was witnessed by quite a number of the farmers of the section. The machine is made by the Massey-Harris Company, and yesterday's trial was under the supervision of the Orangeville agency.

IMPROVEMENTS TO BANNER OFFICE.

Important alterations have been made in the premises occupied by The Banner during the last few weeks. The printing office has been enlarged and thoroughly renovated. The business has been handicapped for want of room for the steadily increasing plant. This has now been remedied and with the additional room and the facilities it affords, we hope to be able to give our readers an even better newspaper and our advertisers and job work patrons a better service than in the past. The editorial office has also been changed and enlarged and a vast improvement has been made in the arrangement and appearance of the book and stationery store, which we have been running for some years in connection with the newspaper. For the last few weeks, the staff has been doing its work amid the confusion of rearrangement and often to the accompaniment of the carpenter's hammer or saw, but we have generally managed to get the paper out on time and keep abreast of our other work. Everything will be completed now in a few days and we shall be only too pleased to have our subscribers or advertising patrons call and see for themselves how much brighter and cheerier The Banner's home has been made.

HIS 90TH BIRTHDAY.

Mr. Thos. Temple, for many years caretaker of St. Andrew's Church, celebrated his ninetieth birthday on Friday. The old gentleman is still active and vigorous, both mentally and physically. He comes down town nearly every forenoon and is usually around again in the evening to get a copy of The Globe, his favorite daily. The Banner wishes him many happy returns.

A CHANGE OF NAME.

The August number of "THE ATHLETIC WORLD," a new name for "OUTDOOR CANADA" Magazine has just been received at this office. Since this publication was taken over by W. J. Taylor, Limited, Woodstock, Ont., each issue has shown a marked improvement over its predecessor. Its change of policy to that of a national athletic periodical is this month carried out both in name and nature. Besides the change of title the size has been increased and the contents augmented. Judging by the August number, full as it is of good, up-to-date reading pertaining to things athletic, a conspicuous place is assured "THE ATHLETIC WORLD" among the leading Canadian national publications.

GONE TO ST. GEORGE.

Miss Elsie Campbell, late of the Orangeville Public School staff, left yesterday evening for St. George, where she has been engaged to teached at a salary of $575 a year. Miss Campbell is an excellent teacher and was also an active church worker. She will be missed in town and her numerous friends unite in wishing her every success in her new sphere of duty.

ORANGEVILLE HIGH SCHOOL

Principal Steele, of the High School, has prepared a neat four-page leaflet, which gives in concise form a great deal of information about the High School work for the coming term. The leaflet contains a list of the prescribed subjects and text books with the prices of the latter and also gives the various courses taught and the subjects that must be taken in each instance. It will prove invaluable to students, who may obtain copies on application to Mr. Steele.

THE OTHER KIND OF DEER.

When Israel Lane returned from the wedding of David Fletcher, who is known in the Balmy Creek country as a mighty hunter, he immediately sought the village store, where the bridegroom's cronies were gathered, waiting for news of the ceremony.

"Well," said one of the number, "how'd it go off?"

"Pret' fair, thanks to me," replied Israel.

"What'd you do?" demanded another.

"I saved parson considerable of a shock and Mame some blushes," said Israel, with calm satisfaction. "Just before they were ready to stand up in the parlor, I says to Dave — I don't know what made me; guess it was meant to be—I says, 'Le's see your license.'

"Well, Dave handed it over, and I discovered it was a hunting license. 'What's this?' I says, handing it back. 'You ain't got to hunt any longer; you've got her.'

"It seems," concluded Israel, "that Dave just said he 'wanted a license,' and, of course, the clerk thought he wanted the usual kind."

AUTOMATIC STAMP VENDORS

Automatic stamp vendors will in all probability be in general use in towns and cities of Canada within a few years. Five of the machines reached the Toronto post office from Ottawa this week and will be given an experimental trial. The instructions engraved on the face of each of the machines read:

"To obtain a two cent stamp insert in the upper left hand slot two Canadian cents, one after the other. To obtain a one cent stamp insert in the upper right hand slot one Canadian cent."

The machine is made in the form of an oak cabinet, 20 x 19 x 9 inches, and is designed to be bolted down to a bracket or pedestal. It is so contrived that when the Canadian cent is placed in the proper slot it will release the stamp required. All other coins travel through the machine back to the hand of the customer.

RESTRICTIONS WILL CONTINUE.

The Dominion Government is not yet disposed to remove the restrictions which have been placed on the transportation of dogs from one part of the country to another. Dr. J.G. Rutherford, Dominion Veterinary Director-General, has written to Superintendent Edwin Tinsley, of the Ontario Game and Fisheries Department, that owing to the fact that the Provinces had not all been very careful to enforce the muzzling regulations, the Dominion authorities did not feel that it was safe yet to permit the free moving of dogs from places in the zone of infection. Mr. Tinsley says the restriction may be kept in force for some time yet.

3,000 YEARS AGO THE EGYPTIANS CURED DISEASE WITH FRUIT

To-day, Canadians Are Doing It With "Fruit-a-tives"

—The Famous Fruit Medicine

We are apt to consider the age we live in as the most wonderful age that the world has ever known. It is, in many respects. Yet the ancients surpassed us in some things. Engineers of our 40-story sky-scrapers still marvel at the massive pyramids and the sphinx. So, too, the Egyptian physicians of 3,000 years ago, used fruit juices as a medicine for treating blood trouble, liver and kidney disease, and stomach weakness. Their method of mixing fruit juice as a medicine, is also one of the lost arts. A well known Canadian physician, however, perfected a method of utilizing fruit juices, which is one of the greatest discoveries of modern medical research.

"Fruit-a-tives" is the natural cure for Chronic Constipation, Biliousness, Indigestion, Torpid Liver, Kidney Disease, Pain in the Back, Bad Complexion, Rheumatism, Nervousness, Headache and Neuralgia.

50c. a box, 6 for $2.50, or trial box, 25c. At all dealers, or from Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

WORLD'S CHAMPION WALKERS.

Great Congress of Athletes in Toronto in September.

With the world's championship walking race as its "Headliner," the programme for the Canadian National Exhibition championships on September 10th, will provide a great afternoon's sport. The list of events will be short snappy races, with international competition. Elwood Hughes has arranged with many of the best athletes in America to appear in their different events. Two or three special invitation events with the "best in the land" as entries will lend all the excitement necessary.

The big Foster International Marathon will start early and the finish take place in front of the grand stand in the middle of the afternoon. All the best distance runners are now in training for this big race.

The following are the open events: 100 yards; 220 yards; 880 yards; 1 mile; 5 mile; 1 mile Boys, 18 years and under; 1 mile Bicycle; 3 mile Bicycle; 3 mile Walk Handicap; 1 mile Relay, Teams of 4 men each.

The prizes will represent a championship in each class, as these games are to be a permanent affair at the Exhibition. The value of the prizes will be $20, $15 and $10.

Mayor Geary, of Toronto, who is the Exhibition Director in charge of these games, is taking special interest in them and is leaving them the most interesting ever seen in Canada.

"Where's your father?" asked the canvasser of a city daily last week.

"Up the river fishing," answered the boy.

"Where's your brother?"

"Down the river fishing."

"What are you doing?"

"Digging bait."

"Hasn't your family anything to do but amuse itself?"

"Mister, if you think we're doin' this for fun wait and hear what maw says if we come home without any fish."

While Albert Moyer, a thresher, who lives one mile east of Vineland, was moving his threshing outfit from J. Rittenhouse's barn, he was almost instantly killed. The engine and separator became uncoupled, allowing the separator to come forward, crushing Mr. Moyer against the engine and badly scalding him. He was extricated within a few minutes, but life was extinct. A grown up son survives him.

POULTRY KEEPING THE GREATEST INDUSTRY.

American Yearly Egg Production Exceeds 1,290,000,000 Dozens.

(By Jno. A. Gunn, Montreal, in Canadian Farm).

Of all the live stock the farmer keeps, nothing compares in profitableness to the hen. From a recent tabulated statement made by Prof. Elford, I have gleaned the following valuable information: He estimates that the profit from the hen amounts to 239 per cent., on milch cows 95 per cent., apples and fruit 88 per cent., wheat 31 per cent. In other words, if we allowed the yearly percentage of income from poultry to be represented by 100, the standard of the various branches would be as follows:—Poultry 100 per cent., wheat 54 per cent., dairy 39 per cent., live stock 39 per cent., apples 36 per cent.

In the adjoining republic, they have for some years been systematizing their collection of statistics governing the production of various lines of produce, and I think that our Government should endeavor to make more progress along this line; we should be better posted in Canada.

I am indebted to the courtesy of my friend, Mr. Snyder, of Froste & Snyder, New York, one of the leading produse houses in the United States, for the following statistics based on figures received from Washington: These show that the production of eggs in the United States in 1899 was 1,293,662,433 dozen, or equivalent, figuring into cars of 400 cases each, 107,805 cars. Considering the minimum length of a refrigerator car as 36 feet, containing 400 cases, were these cases in one train, it would extend from Montreal to Fort William, Ont., a distance of nearly 1,000 miles. A gradual and steady increase in production as well as consumption has transpired since then, taking the year 1909, the estimated, and I think under-estimated production will be 80,000,000 cases, and conservatively figuring, the value would amount to $528,000,000. If these were placed in cars as previously stated, it would furnish a train 2,653 miles long, or would cover a distance from Montreal to Nelson, B. C.

Everybody eats eggs, and it has been estimated that the average consumption equals one case of eggs of thirty dozen per year per capita.

You will conclude from these figures that the hen occupies no mean or subordinate position in the country to the south of us. Mr. Snyder estimates that the hen can produce in three months, and have a week to spare, wealth equal to all the capital of the 50 banks that clear through the New York clearing house, with a capitalization of $127,000,000.00. It is estimated that the hen can, in 60 days, produce value equal to the total production of all the gold mines in the United States. The United States also boasts of its enormous production of pig iron, by far the greatest of any country in the world, and yet the hen produces as much in six months as all the mines do in a year. If the total value of the production of the hen was diverted to the paying off of the national debt of the United States, it is computed that she could accomplish this in one year and ten months.

Now this is not taking into consideration the value of the hen itself, which, as you know, is a great financial factor. While we have not been able to collect the same data as regards the statistics of Canada, it is reasonable to assume that they show a value similar to that of the United States, considering the population, consequently I can be excused when I say that the poultry and egg business is one of the, if not the most, important branches of industry we have.

Now everybody knows that we sound the praises of men who have shown an extreme mark of patriotism, or who have benefited their country along any particular line by labor saving machinery, or the introduction of some device that will prove a national source of wealth to his country, and I think the opportunity exists for everyone here to prove himself a true patriot by putting into practice and endeavoring to influence others to do so, those means which are calculated to save losses and insure the very best possible results being derived from this very important branch of industry.

Let us analyse the present conditions; let us look for a few moments at the weak links of the chain. The farming community have always been more or less suspicious of the wholesale dealers. Instead of looking upon them as one whose interests are parallel with their own, they looked upon them as one who was always ready to sacrifice their interests in favor of his own, but to-day, with the larger information at command and the profusion of newspaper and other literature, they are beginning to realize that their interests are parallel.

To insure the very best results being derived, there must be honesty of purpose and strict integrity in all transactions, too much emphasis cannot be laid upon this. There are farmers who are good members of our churches, who plume themselves on being strict and upright in all their transactions, and yet who do not hesitate in marketing eggs of a doubtful character, and even those that are known to be bad. The present system compels the merchant to accept these and pay for them in full as though they were of first-class quality. I will not attempt to pass judgment on transactions of this kind, but it is certainly time, and the position is ripe for special legislation to make this impossible.

Take the position of the trade today in comparison with what it was ten, fifteen and twenty years ago. There are numbers who will recollect the time when eggs were marketed and sold at 7, 8, 9 and 10 cents per dozen, to-day the average is double the price.

Have you thought what an important part the wholesale dealer have played in this development. They took the eggs, sorted them, graded them and prepared them for the various markets, created new markets and stimulated the demand for the goods, which has enhanced the value and consequently enab les us to realize higher prices, therefore admitting of our paying more to the farmers for them. As you are doubtless aware, there are certain seasons of the year when the production is very much in excess of the demand, someone had to take care of the eggs during this time, when the production is so much in excess of the demand, and for that purpose we have built our cold storages.

All these factors have contributed to enhancing the value of this commodity. Just imagine, for one moment, what would be the position of the market if the dealers stood aloof in the spring, how many car loads, in fact how many train loads of eggs would have to go to the dump or be used for fertilizing the farms. I figure that the total number of cases stored in Canada last year during a time when eggs were in excess of the demand, amounted to 210,000 cases, or 6,300,000 dozen, for which top price was paid and with no guarantee to the dealer that he was going to get his money back, which very often happens.

ALLEN LOUGHEED.

It was with deep regret that residents of Peel County learned the death of Mr. Allen Lougheed, of Pincher Creek, Alta. Mr. Lougheed, who passed peacefully away at the home of his daughter, Mrs. McClelland, was in his 93rd year. He was born in Toronto Township and lived there for eighty-four years, leaving his native country at what most men consider a ripe old age to reside in Toronto, and four years later left to take up land in Alberta, where he remained until his death last week. Deceased was a gentleman of sterling character and possessed the esteem of all who had the good fortune to know him. He had many friends in the county, and outlived many. His wife died more than forty years ago. A family of six sons and four daughters were born to these pioneers of the county, four of the former having passed to the world beyond. The survivors are Messrs. Joseph Lougheed, of Brampton, and Richard residing in British Columbia, and the daughters are Mrs. Cruikshank, of Orangeville; Mrs. McClelland, of Pincher Creek, Alta.; and Misses Jennie and Lizzie Lougheed, in Toronto. Mr. Lougheed was born in what was practically a forest. He saw the township cleared and settled, roads constructed and towns and villages spring up in the wilderness. He served in the Rebellion of '37 under Col. Price. He was a staunch friend and neighbor, ever ready to assist and render aid. He has passed to his long rest deeply regretted.—Conservator.

ROBERT PEEBLES.

At his home in Hanbury, New Ontario, Robert Peebles, formerly of Caledon, died on Aug. 15th, at the age of 62 years. Mr. Peebles was born in Wentworth County, where he spent the early part of his life. He afterwards lived for a number of years at Terra Cotta, Halton County, and for sixteen years prior to his departure for New Ontario, lived at Inglewood. Four years ago he moved with his family to New Ontario, where he secured a farm and intended carrying on farming and a lumber business. Shortly after leaving Inglewood the malady from which he had been suffering for some years became acute and he failed gradually. Mr. Peebles was well-known in the Township of Caledon, where he served in the council and also on the Board of School Trustees for different periods. He was a powerful man and was quite successful in his farming and stone quarrying enterprises at Inglewood. Generous in disposition, kind and friendly, ever ready to lend a helping hand in time of need or trouble, he is deeply mourned. He was a member of the Presbyterian church and took an active interest in church and Sunday School work. He had the respect and confidence of the people of the township and was very highly esteemed by a large circle of intimate friends. In politics he was a strong Conservative. The body was brought to his old home at Strabane for burial, the interment being made within a mile of his birthplace. Rev. Roberts conducted the services.

Mrs. Jno. Walker of the 12th Mavborough, fell a few days ago and broke her right leg just below the knee joint. She was standing on a table fixing some plants, when it gave way and she was thrown to the floor.

Don't dope the baby!

SHUT OUT THE SCRUB.

Essential as it is that the suitable young females and brood mares should be kept on the farms, there is need for more discrimination in the selection of the stallions to which these mares should be bred. We hold no brief for the importer or for the man who is producing first-class Canadian-bred horses. At the same time one cannot overlook the fact that there are too many nondescript, useless stallions travelling through the country. The farmer is all too ready to patronize the cheap stallion. No one can blame him for endeavoring to get the service of a stallion as cheaply as he can, but the service of some of the stallions that have been doing duty in many parts of the country the past season, would be dear at any price. Any stallion that is not worth more than a three dollar service fee, which it is reported some stallion-owners charged, should be put out of the breeding business. There cannot be any advancement in horse-breeding under such conditions. This is not saying that all the higher priced stallions are of the right stamp. There may be inferior animals brought across the water, but the percentage that a farmer could not breed his mares to with some assurance of getting an offspring that would be worth raising is very small indeed. There is this about it, the breeding would have something behind it. To be eligible to record in the Canadian National Records the breeding of any animal must be equal to the standard of any country the world over. If some legislation were enacted compelling all stallions standing for service in this country to record in the Canadian National Records, much would be gained in raising the standard of horse-breeding in this country. Some of the western provinces have legislation of this kind. Ontario has no legislation of any kind. Any kind of a stallion can do business without let or hindrance.—Canadian Farm.

Nerves at High Tension

Slight extra strain means collapse—Restoration obtained by using DR. A.W. CHASE'S NERVE FOOD

The successful men and women are often of the high-strung nervous type—keen and active—but with too little reserve force.

A little extra worry and anxiety and snap goes the nervous system. Weeks and months are often required before energy and vigor are regained.

Rest helps, so does fresh air and exercise, but the blood must also be made rich and red by use of Dr. A. W. Chase's Nerve Food.

Mr. Wm. Branton, Victoria St., Strathroy, Ont., writes:—"My nervous system seemed all unstrung. I could not sleep, had no appetite, my digestion was poor and I had jerking of the limbs. Dr. Chase's Nerve Food helped me and I continued until I had taken twenty-four boxes. This treatment has made a radical change in my condition, building up the system and strengthening the nerves." AN OUTER DAM BUILT OF CONCRETE

Ridding the Farm of Rats

IT comes as a surprise that any one should ask where the "rat" came from.

To most of us the rat has been familiar from our boyhood. The destructive little brute caused us no small excitement in our early days on the farm. He was always nosing around among the oat or the wheat bins, and eating holes in the bags of grain. In fact, nothing was sacred to him.

We early learned that he was an exceedingly intelligent animal. After we had caught a certain number of his family in the trap, we could catch no more, although from the damage caused by his tribe we well knew that he was just about as numerous as before those erring sons of his wandered into our trap after the enticing piece of cheese.

That he was a valorous animal and a great fighter, was demonstrated every time we emptied the trap in front of the dog. Towser made a jump for him, but unless the old dog was pretty smart the rat would send him yelping down the field. Also, when we cornered a few of the rat family in a bin and went after them with the pitchfork, we, ourselves, sometimes were made to beat a hasty retreat.

If the rat were as big in stature as we are, it is doubtful if we would have the snap we have controlling the animal kingdom. Mr. Rat would dispute the possession of our own homes with us. Small as he is, he disputes it with us now. We have been trying to squelch him for many years past, and he has been defeating us at every turn. He is more numerous than ever before, and is doing more damage than we ever supposed.

A recent estimate of the damage he does in Canada each year was placed at a fabulous amount. It was more millions per year than most farmers have dollars in their pockets when they go to market.

It has now come to this, that the scientists all over the world are discussing means to get rid of the rat. In Paris a campaign has begun, but has not met with much success. In London something of the same nature is going on.

The rat is said to have come over in a ship from China. All we can say is that we heartily wish he had taken the next ship back. Unfortunately, he obtained a foothold in England, and multiplied at such a rate that he is now found all over the world. It is a strange explanation of the coming of the rat, but that is how we are told he came to be here.

Fortunately for the farmer, the rat seems to be originally a town animal. Apparently he is not a suburbanite, save by education. He prefers to inhabit underground passages and sewers and pick up a living wherever he can find it. Yet he is now spreading out into the country more and more, and unless the farmers do something to combat his advance he will be a serious menace to their prosperity, before many years have passed Around farm buildings is constantly to be had a surplus supply of food. The rat can find more to eat in a well-stocked barn than he could possibly know what to do with. There are eggs to be broken open and sucked, and young chickens to be eaten. There are loads of flour bags, and, in fact, the farmer leaves no stone unturned to make things really comfortable and enticing for the town-starved rat. The rat appreciates this, and takes up his quarters on the farms, bringing with him, very often, the germs of disease from his dirty city haunts.

The question is, What is the farmer going to do to combat the advance of the rat? What is mankind, as a whole, going to do about it? It is a serious question, and we know of but one answer. It is this: Make buildings that he cannot enter. Construct buildings of concrete, a material which will not rot and through which it is absolutely impossible for the rat to eat his way.

In a cold country like Canada, it ought to be possible to starve the rat to death during the winter. Certainly it is possible to starve him on the farm. In summer he may forage in the fields, and it is complained that he is now numerous enough to be a serious menace to the crops. But if the farmers will employ concrete in the construction of their buildings they ought to be able to make it exceedingly difficult for the rat to take shelter in their barns. Keep the rat out of the barn and he will try to get into the house. Keep him out of the house and he will be decimated by starvation during the winter, when there is nothing for him to eat outside.

Fortunately, a liberal use of concrete in the construction of buildings will not cost the farmer anything. In fact, after he has found out the advantages of using concrete, he will feel rather grateful than otherwise to the rat for having been the cause of his education in the matter. When it is remembered that barn floors or feeding floors constructed of concrete will never wear out, that they will keep out mud and dirt, that they may be washed down and kept clean, that by a proper juncture between floors and walls, all apertures through which rats may enter may be done away with, one begins to appreciate some of the advantages of the use of concrete.

A ROOT CELLAR AND A FEEDING FLOOR—BOTH OF CONCRETE, THE MODERN BUILDING MATERIAL

One has only to let his mind rest a short time on the subject and use a little ingenuity to be convinced that there is absolutely no excuse any longer for many of the disadvantages attending life on the farm, now that a material which is cheap and which may be moulded into almost any form, by any reasonably intelligent person, is available. In this one matter of defence against rats, there is not a progressive farmer in the country who could not surround with an indestructible covering his granaries and root houses and other places where he stores his flour or other articles of which rats are so fond, and of which they make such havoc. Just figure up what that would mean, not only in the matter of appearance, but in an actual saving of money, and see if you do not think it is worth trying. Don't go to too heavily at first. Make a test case on some of your grain bins, or on some of the smaller places where grain or flour is stored. Don't make it an expensive operation. No doubt you will go further as soon as you have found out the advantages.

TERRIBLE ACCIDENT.

Neil Campbell, Ashfield, Loses Left Hand—Lost Right Hand Two Years Ago.

On Monday last a terrible accident befel Mr. Neil Campbell, of Ashfield, when he lost his left hand. He went over to John McLeod's on the boundary to a threshing. There was a straw cutter attached to the machine and Mr. Campbell noticed that the straw was not coming out. He thought the cutter was choked and put his hand in to pull out the straw. The rapidly revolving knives caught the hand and sliced it up to the wrist before the machine could be stopped. The accident is all the more dreadful as a little over two years ago Mr. Campbell had his right hand cut off at the wrist with a saw while cutting wood.

He was hurried home and medical aid summoned and the wounded member was dressed. He is bearing up well under the shock. His brother, Mr. Duncan Campbell, Kincardine, went down on receipt of the news. He returned on Tuesday and has strong hopes that an excellent constitution will pull his brother through. — Kincardine Reporter.

Belleville constables, trailing a party whom they thought might be Taggart, found only an Indian looking for ginseng.

Two gentlemen and a lady, of Niagara Falls, N.Y., were out in a motor boat on the river in the evening, with the searchlight of their launch lighted. A monster sturgeon 6 feet long and weighing 150 lbs. attracted it is thought by the light, leaped from the water and landed in the boat, slightly injuring the young lady in its leap and floundering around in the bottom of the boat, put the motor out of business. The boat then began to drift and was in danger of finally being swept over the falls when another launch happened along and towed the party ashore, where the fish was measured and weighed.

A Cincinnatti man is being criticised for sending a floral horseshoe to his chum's funeral. But at least it was not so suggestive as the act of the Chicago man who sent a floral fire extinguisher to the funeral of a business rival.

IS McBRIDE THE COMING LEADER?

A unique interest attaches to the September number of Busy Man's Magazine because in it is to be found a striking prophecy about the future of the Hon. Richard McBride, Premier of British Columbia, based on the extraordinary likeness he bears to the three great political leaders. These three men are Benjamin Disraeli, Sir John A. Macdonald and Sir Wilfred Laurier. This striking likeness is brought out clearly in the portraits of the four men which illustrate the article and which are placed together for purposes of comparison. Richard McBride is still a young man but even to-day he bears a marked resemblance to all three men referred to and in his mannerisms he is astonishingly like Sir John A. Macdonald. All interested in the political situation in Canada, Conservative and Liberal alike, should not fail to see this convincing prophecy.

AUTO SPEEDING LAWS.

No motor vehicle shall run upon any highway within any city, town or incorporated village at a greater speed than ten miles an hour, or upon any highway outside of the town or incorporated village at a greater speed than fifteen miles an hour. Notwithstanding the provisions of the above section, if any person drives a motor vehicle on a public highway recklessly or negligently, or in a manner which is dangerous to the public, having regard to all the circumstances of the case, including the nature, use and condition of the highway and to the amount of traffic which actually at the time might reasonably be expected to be on the high way, that person shall be guilty of an offence under the act.

TROUBLE OVER TITLE.

The administrators of the estate of the late John Jaffray are having trouble over the farm on which the deceased resided and to which he was supposed to have a good title. The administrators contracted to sell the property to W. J. Hunter and now the latter declines to carry out his agreement to purchase on the ground that the title is not good. The farm was originally owned by the late James Hunter, who devised it to his son, David, on the condition that he should not sell or mortgage the place during his lifetime. In contravention of the restrictions of the will, David conveyed to one, Thos. Williamson, who in turn conveyed to the deceased. W. J. Hunter now claims that under the will Jaffary had at most a life estate, that is, he held the property only during the life of David Hunter. To enforce the agreement and to secure a judicial declaration as to the validity of these conveyances, the administrators of the Jaffary estate have petitioned the High Court of Justice, under the Vendors' and Purchasers' Act, for an order declaring the title sufficient and ordering W. J. Hunter to carry out his agreement. The motion is set down for hearing at Osgoode Hall on Monday, September 19th. The case is one of very considerable importance and we hope to be able to give our readers full particulars of the outcome at a later date.

DIVISION COURT.

Several cases of greater or less interest were disposed of in the Division Court on Tuesday. The more important were:—

Christian vs. McInnes — Herbert Christian sued J. E. McInnes, blacksmith at Camilla, on an account for $44, made up of a balance due on a note, a board bill and an open account. Plaintiff got judgment for $38 without costs. McInnes came back by suing Christian for $60 damages for trespass. During one of their disputes Christian went into plaintiff's blacksmith shop and chained up a blower. The evidence showed that after the receipt of a lawyer's letter a day or so later he went back and removed the chain. Judgment was given in favor of McInnes, the Court allowing him $3 damages and costs. C. R. McKeown acted for Christian and A. A. Hughson for McInnes.

McDonald vs. Kannawin.—Geo. McDonald, a young man residing in Mono, sued S. Kanawin, a Caledon farmer, for $69 for wages. Defendant alleged that during the early spring McDonald worked with him for his board and later made a contract to stay with him seven months for $60. This contract, he averred, McDonald broke by failing to complete his time. Judgment was given plaintiff for $21. W. J. L. McKay for plff.; Geo. Robb for deft.

McFarlane vs. Marshall—Peter McFarlane, a local liveryman, hired a rig to Thos. Marshall, Jr., to go to Shelburne. Marshall promised to be home at 8 o'clock, but did not get back until midnight, and then returned with a broken whip. McFarlane agreed in the first instance to let the rig out for $2, but wanted Marshall to pay $1.50 extra for the overtime and broken whip. Marshall failed to see where he was liable and the liveryman brought action in the Division Court. The case was dismissed. W. J. L. McKay for plff.; C. R. McKeown for deft.

Unfortunate Ending to Labor Day Lacrosse Match.

The Labor Day lacrosse game between the Torontos and Tecumsehs terminated in a very unsatisfactory manner. At the close of the third quarter, there was a disagreement over Referee Brennan's action in penalizing some of the players and Manager Jimmie Murphy of the Torontos took his men off the field. The score was then 7 all. Tecumsehs lined up alone in the last quarter and were awarded the match by 8 to 7. Local enthusiasts, who saw the game, while regretting the action of the Torontos, are of the opinion that they were getting a raw deal from the officials. They say the Scarboro Beachers have by all odds the better team and with impartial officials, should beat the Tecumsehs handily. Lol Solman has evidently hypnotized most of the Toronto dailies, judging by their reports of the game, which are one-sided and quite unfair to the Toronto team. The News, however, is a noteworthy exception. Its report and comment are very fair and show very plainly the real cause of the trouble. It says:—

Manager Murphy contends, and very rightfully, too, that Goal-keeper Kinsman should have been ruled off. The latter precipitated the trouble that culminated in the fracas, which was responsible for the unsatisfactory wind-up of the game. Dandeno may not have had any right to the crease, but there was no excuse for Kinsman striking him after the goal had been scored. In the first place Dandeno apparently had only followed his shot in. There was no need for it anyway, as the point had already been registered. That was patent. The mix-up then commenced and Referee Brennan, when the trouble had subsided, in plain view of everybody, tagged Kinsman as one of the players to receive a penalty. It was only natural then that the Toronto officials should object strenuously when informed that the referee had placed the blame on some other individual and that the goal-keeper was to go scot-free. Either the referee was misled in regard to the identity of the offenders or he deemed the Tecumsehs would be too badly handicapped by being without their net-guardian. No other conclusion can be arrived at.

The officials missed much more than they saw. They did not see McKenzie strike three Toronto players in succession, or Stagg belabor Rountree repeatedly over the legs. Many passages of arms in the mix-ups that were apparent to everybody were ignored. Not only that, they erred in the matter of consistency. In the early part of the struggle they did not stop the play whenever they had occasion to shoo a player guilty of unfair practices to the fence, but instead singled the offender out without interrupting the even tenor of the contest. They reversed this procedure in the third period and the Torontos were deprived of a goal which they earned. There was an altercation at the Toronto end. The referee interfered, but in the meanwhile the ball went up the field and the blue-shirts tallied. Then the official stated that he had blown his whistle, but no one heard it if he did, and the goal did not count. A few minutes later in an attack on the Tecumseh goal, the ball dribbled from Kinsman's stick apparently between the posts but the goal-umpire, in an effort to observe the scrimmage closely, rushed to the side of the nets, and in the meantime the rubber-thing was scooped out of danger.

ORANGEVILLE PRESBYTERY.

Orangeville Presbytery held a rather slimly attended meeting in St. Andrew's Church here on Tuesday. Considerable business was nevertheless transacted. Arrangements were made for a Presbyterial visitation this autumn in the interests of systematic giving. An invitation was received from Claude session to the Rev. J. A. Matheson, moderator of Presbytery, to represent the Presbytery at the celebration of the diamond jubilee of the congregation. The jubilee will be commemorated by services on Sunday, October 16th, and a social gathering on the Monday evening following. The following students were certified to their respective collages: Mr. Donald Nicholson, of Maxwell, final year, theology, Montreal; Mr. Max Goodrich, Kingscote, 1st year, arts, Montreal; Mr. D. C. Foster, Cheltenham, 1st year, theology, Queen's. With the assistance of the General Secretary, Mr. J. C. Robertson, the Presbytery will hold a number of S. S. Institutes during the autumn. Rev. W. M. Morris, Orangeville, and Rev. Dr. McKenzie, Shelburne, were appointed a committee to visit the Maxwell field with a view to arranging for a settled pastor. Marked progress has been made in this field, which has been in charge of Mr. D. Nicholson, of Montreal College, this summer. A call from Markdale and Berkeley congregations to Rev. R. M. Phalen, of Horning's Mills, was laid before the Presbytery. The call, which was absolutely unanimous, carries a stipend of $900 with free manse and two weeks' vacation. Messrs. McQuarrie, Hunter and McCauley, of Horning's Mills, appeared before the Presbytery to oppose the translation. After hearing the interested parties, Mr. Phalen signified his intention of accepting the call and Presbytery accordingly agreed to the translation. Mr. Phalen will preach his farewell sermon on September 25th and the interim moderator, Rev. Dr. McKenzie, of Shelburne, will declare the pulpit vacant on the first Sunday in October.

—Drs. Kyles and Rooney have opened an office in the James May building, four doors west of Queen's Hotel. Calls at office or residences during night or day will receive prompt attention. 53-3m

HEWITT—LEE.

A pretty, though very quiet wedding took place at the home of Mr. Charles Lee, York St., at 2.30 o'clock Tuesday afternoon when his youngest daughter, Edith, was united in marriage to Mr. Joseph J. Hewitt, of Medicine Hat, Alta. The ceremony was performed by Rev. A. C. Watt, of Bondhead, an old friend of the bride's family. The only guests present were members of the bride's family and a few intimate friends. The bride, who was given away by her father, was gowned in cream silk mull with satin and lace trimming. A dainty wedding breakfast was served after the marriage. The bride, who is highly esteemed by her numerous friends, received a large number of beautiful wedding gifts. In the evening, Mr. and Mrs. Hewitt were driven to the C.P.R. depot, taking their departure on their wedding trip to the accompaniment of rice, confetti and good wishes with which they were freely showered by the friends who had assembled to see them off. They will spend some time in Toronto, Detroit and Minneapolis, before proceeding to their home in Medicine Hat. The groom, who was at one time a member of the local hardware firm of Adamson, Hewitt and Sproul, is now a prosperous hardware merchant in Medicine Hat. The Banner joins the many friends of the bride and groom in extending its heartiest congratulations and good wishes.

FORD—McGREGOR.

A very pretty wedding took place at the residence of the bride's parents, Erin, Ont., on Wednesday afternoon, August 31st, the contracting parties being Mr. J. A. L. Ford, of Fergus, and Miss Stella J. McGregor, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. McGregor, of Erin. Rev. R. Fowlie, Presbyterian minister, was the officiating clergyman and about 65 guests, relatives and friends of the bride and groom, were present. The wedding march was played by Miss Jessie Overland. The bride, who was unattended, was attired in a gown of embroidered cream French net, over cream satin, trimmed with net insertion and pearl trimmings. Little May Black, of Belwood, cousin of the bride, acted as flower girl and ring bearer. After congratulations, dinner was served, after which the happy couple left by the evening train for Toronto, where they will reside. The bride's going-away suit was of cream serge, with felt hat to match.

COULTER—RYALL.

A quiet but pretty wedding was celebrated at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Oliver Dynes, 204 Macpherson Ave., Toronto, Wednesday, August 31st, 1910, at 10 a.m., when Miss Alice Drusilla Ryall, formerly of Mono, was united in marriage to Mr. Walter W. Coulter, of Bobcaygeon. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. H. S. Matthews, assistant pastor of St. Paul's Methodist Church. The bride, who was given away by her brother, Mr. W. A. Ryall, was unattended, and looked charming in a gown of brussels net and duchess lace with satin ribbon trimmings, veil and orange blossoms. She carried a bouquet of flowers and wore a sunburst of pearls, the gift of the groom. The bridal chorus from Lohengrin was rendered by Wilfred D. Dynes, nephew of the bride. After partaking of a sumptuous wedding breakfast, the happy couple left on the 2 o'clock boat for Niagara Falls, Buffalo and other points, the bride travelling in rose colored rajah silk, with cream silk coat, hat and plume to match. The sincere wishes of their many friends for their future happiness accompany Mr. and Mrs. Coulter to their new home.

WESTLAKE—DUFF.

A pretty wedding took place at Cookstown, Ont., on Wednesday afternoon, August 31st, at 3 o'clock, when the marriage of Miss Esther E. Duff, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Geo. E. Duff, of Cookstown, and Mr. Frank Westlake, of Toronto, and son of Mr. Thomas Westlake, was solemnized by Rev. W. M. Morris, of Orangeville, Ont. Miss McClain, of Toronto, played Mendelssohn's wedding march. The floral decorations were white asters and golden glow. The bride's gown was a French embroidered robe, her tulle veil caught with orange blossoms. She carried a shower of bride's roses and lily of the valley. Miss Dora T. McKee, of Buffalo, N.Y., was bridesmaid, wearing pale green chiffon over pale green messaline satin, and carried pale pink Killarney roses. Mr. Walter Sherring of Toronto, was best man. The groom's gift to the bride was a pearl sunburst, to the bridesmaid a pearl ring, and to the best man a pearl stick pin. The bride and groom left for a trip to Muskoka. Mrs. Westlake travelled in a navy blue tailored suit, and hat to match. On their return they will reside at 29 Hambly avenue, Toronto.

HENRY—BRODIE.

Pink asters, palms and ferns adorned Avenue road Presbyterian church, Toronto, where, at three o'clock p.m. Saturday, the marriage was celebrated of Marjorie Helen, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Brodie, of Kendall avenue, to Mr. Norman F. Henry, son of Mr. and Mrs. K. J. Henry, of Rockliffe, Ottawa, and nephew of Dr. James Henry, Orangeville. Rev. John Stephen was the officiating clergyman, Mr. Ralph Plant being at the organ, and during the signing of the register Mrs. Herbert Plant sang "O Fair, O Sweet, O Holy." Accompanied by her father, the bride entered the church attired in a simple gown of soft white satin, with filmy tulle veil crowned with her mother's blossoms. Her flowers were lilies of the valley and roses, and she wore a gold chased bracelet, the gift of the groom. Miss Lesley Forbes was her sole attendant and her gown was of embroidered white net over satin, with white Charlotte Corday hat with pale blue plume and tiny pink roses. She carried Killarney roses and wore a gold bow knot, her favor from the groom, who gave the best man, Mr. Willis O'Connor, of Ottawa, gold cuff links. The ushers, Mr. Kenneth Greene and Mr. Austin Reiffenstein, also of Ottawa, received gold scarf pins. A reception at the family residence followed the ceremony, Mrs. Brodie wearing pearl grey crepe de chene, with velvet and net toque. When, later, the newly wedded pair left for Bermuda, the bride wore navy blue rajah, with hat to match. The new home of Mr. and Mrs. Henry will be 125 Kendall avenue.

A PETERBORO WEDDING.

A quiet and pretty event was solemnized at St. John's Church, Peterboro', on Thursday, September 1, at 9.30 a.m., when Lulu Alford Steward, eldest daughter of Mrs. Lewis Steward, was united in marriage to Mr. Oscar Alexander Bracken, of the C.P.R., Toronto, son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Bracken, Boston Mills, and nephew of Mr. Hugh Bracken, Mono. The ceremony was conducted by the Rev. Canon Bairdsen, M.A., rector of the church, assisted by the Rev. H. A. Bracken, M.A., Toronto, brother of the groom. The bride was given away by her brother, Arthur. She was attired in cream silk eolienne, the bride's mother in grey silk eolienne, and the groom's mother in black silk. Miss Harriet E. Kimpton, of St. Mary's School, Knoxville, Ill., at the organ, rendered Lohengrin's Bridal Chorus and Mendelssohn's Wedding March. After a dainty luncheon at the home of the bride's mother the bridal party left for Montreal and Quebec. On their return they will reside in Parkdale.

Summer Time A Time Of Danger.

Summer time is a time of danger to all babies—but more especially to those living in the towns and cities where the heat is so excessive as to make it almost impossible to keep baby's food in proper condition. It is then that the little one suffers from those stomach and bowel troubles that carry off so many precious little lives. During the summer the mother must be especially careful to keep baby's stomach sweet and pure and his bowels moving regularly. No other medicine will be of such great aid to mothers in summer as Baby's Own Tablets. These little Tablets never fail to regulate the bowels; sweeten the stomach and make baby well and happy. Mrs. D. Devlin, St. Sylvester East, Que., says: "I think Baby's Own Tablets are the best medicine for little ones for stomach and bowel troubles and I would not be without them." The Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

PALGRAVE.

Anyone who thinks that Bolton, Tottenham or Orangeville are the only places that can have a market is much mistaken for Palgrave can and has a splendid market every Wednesday—and pays just as good prices as are paid any other place in the Province of Ontario. The village has also excellent accommodation for the market. A very large and commodious building has been provided by Mr. Eli Clarke and with a big staff of buyers on hand every market day the market is bound to go ahead. The people are industrious and progressive in this vicinity and realize and appreciate a good market at their door every week, and every farmer who has not been in the habit of bringing his produce to market would do well to consult his own best interests and come. The Palgrave market will no doubt be all that is desired as the country adjacent demands it. We are expecting a very large and successful market next Wednesday as special buyers will be present. Come and secure the highest prices for all kinds of farm produce.

The cementing gang, under the able supervision of Mr. Geo. Zimmerman, is doing excellent work in the village at a minimum cost.

The ratepayers of the Police Village of Palgrave will no doubt be treated by the Board of Railway Commissioners of Canada to a subway and by so doing will remove one of the worst death-traps along the line.

Mrs. (Dr.) Reynar and son, Hadley Vicars, are at present holidaying in Toronto.

A large number from this vicinity attended the Exhibition this week.

Threshing is in full blast in this neighborhood and farmers report an excellent yield of grain.

The Rev. Mr. Lunau will not be present with us next Sabbath. His place will be filled by the clergyman in charge of the Meno Road Circuit.

NORTH AMARANTH.

It becomes our sad and painful duty this week to record the sudden death of a respected resident of this community in the person of Mr. Hugh Smith. On Tuesday, August 30th, the deceased, in company with his two sons, Ernest and Roy, was engaged in drawing in grain on lot 26, con. 6, Amaranth, five lots north of his home. After completing the day's work, Mr. Smith harnessed a horse to drive home. Ernest was closing the barn doors. The deceased was apparently coming to assist him, but just as he ascended the driveway, he dropped dead without a word. The late Mr. Smith was born near Weston, Ontario, on Sept. 22nd, 1851, but came to Amaranth when a child with his parents, where he has resided until his death. He leaves to mourn his loss a sorrowing wife and six children, three sons and three daughters, all at home except Fred, who is in the West and was unable to be present. The deceased was held in high esteem by all who knew him. Upright in all business transactions, his word was at all times as good as his bond. The funeral, which took place on Thursday afternoon to Shelburne cemetery, was largely attended. Rev. T. R. White conducted the services at the house and grave. The funeral was under the auspices of the Orange Order, of which deceased was a member. He was also a member of the Chosen Friends, carrying an insurance of $1500 on his life. The pallbearers were:—Norman and Wellington Hinton, Wm. Keyes, Wm. Simpson, D. Cameron and Robt. J. Smith. His mother predeceased him four years ago. His father, who is eighty-nine years of age, is still living. R. J. Smith, Campania and R. H. Smith, of Nelson, B.C., are brothers. Mrs. N. Myers, Maple Grove, Mrs. W. Keyes and Mrs. D. Cameron, of Corbetton, are sisters. We extend to the bereaved widow and fatherless children our heartfelt sympathy in their deep affliction.

CAMILLA.

(Intended for last week.)

Misses Helen and Mona Denton, of Orangeville, were the guests of Miss Birdie Curry, on Sunday.

Mrs. Laking, of Owen Sound, is visiting her brother, Mr. J. C. Howard. Mr. Oscar and Miss Ida Canning, of Violet Hill, were also guests at Mr. Howard's Sunday.

Mrs. Eversfield and daughter, and Miss Grady, of Toronto, were the guests of Mrs. A. Bremner last week.

Mrs. Besley, of Newbury, Mich., is visiting her mother, Mrs. James Buchanan.

A goodly number from our vicinity intend attending the exhibition during the next two weeks.

Rev. Mr. Cochrane, of Toronto, occupied the pulpit in St. Andrew's Church, Sunday afternoon, and gave his hearers a sermon that created a decidedly favorable impression of his abilities as a preacher.

Miss Mayme Buchanan is attending the millinery openings in Toronto.

We wish that when one person has a petty grudge or some form of jealousy of another and they wish to air their feelings through the public press that they would think it worth their while to write some news along with their poetic fancies and not have it put in along with the regular correspondent's contribution and mislead some into believing that it was all written by one person. Not that we consider our contributions in any way superior, but they are at least free from any reflections on anyone or anything that would wound anyone's feelings or create trouble of even a minor nature. Admitting that last week's verses were clever, we do not think they contained any of the former characteristics, nor yet had they any of the qualities of mercy.

We would like to know when a few of the second hand people of the neighborhood will be through gossiping about W. H. Jessop. The guilty parties are the scum of the community and their gossip only serves to oil their shoes which look pretty foxy at times. As the Bible says we will have such people with us as long as the last rays of Halley's comet.

Anniversary services were held in the Presbyterian Church on Sunday. The Rev. Mr. McIntosh, of Elora, was the preacher in the morning and evening, and delivered excellent sermons on both occasions to large congregations.

Mr. Jas. Madigan is now laid up with a sore eye. Last week he was engaged in plastering the ceiling of Mr. McKitrick's new house on the 15th line and had just applied the last layer, when a piece of mortar fell into his right eye. He is still suffering much pain, but the doctor has now hopes of saving the organ.

Mr. Henry Hanna spent last week visiting relatives in St. Catharines and Toronto.

One of our young men in the western part of the township received a pleasant surprise recently, when he was made the recipient of a valuable present. The gift, which is one not usually donated, is more precious than gold or rubies and is deservedly greatly cherished by the recipient. It is nothing more or less than a bouncing baby boy.

Tea was served from six to eight o'clock. The remainder of the evening was spent in games and other amusements. After spending a delightful evening the party dispersed at the usual hour.

RADIANT HAIR.

New York Society Women's Hair Matched Only by Parisians.

While much attention is given to choicest gowns by New York society women, the turbulent fad just now is the care of the hair.

For many years the clever women of Paris have been famed for the magnificent beauty of their hair.

"Glorious hair," a Virginian calls it; "so radiant and luxuriant that it not only attracts but fascinates and compels unstinted admiration."

But now that the elite of New York, ever anxious to improve their beauty, have learned that Parisian Sage, a remarkable and almost marvelous hair nourisher and beautifier, is almost entirely responsible for the charming hair of the ladies of France, the demand for it has become enormous.

...Parisian Sage is now sold all over Canada and in Orangeville, by T. Stevenson, who is glad to guarantee it to eradicate dandruff, stop falling hair and itching scalp in two weeks or money back. Large bottle 50 cents.

To revive cut flowers after packing plunge the stems into boiling water, and by the time the water is cold the flowers will have revived. Then cut afresh the ends of the stems and keep them in fresh cold water.

Is Your Loaf Like This?

IF your flour is of the right quality, it ought to produce uniformly good bread. When the loaf comes out of the oven it ought to be appetizing and inviting in appearance. The crust should be crisp, tender and sweet as a nut. The pores of the bread should be regular showing uniform expansion by the yeast and every loaf should be light, plump and should expand over the top of the pan. Bread made from Ogilvie's always comes up to the highest standard of excellence when made right. It is always uniform, and good to look at as well as good to eat.

Summer and winter, day after day, month after month, "ROYAL HOUSEHOLD" is milled by exactly the same process from exactly the same standard uniform grade of the best Red Fyfe wheat. And this uniformity is guaranteed by rigid safeguarding tests at the mills before the flour is shipped.

Get ROYAL HOUSEHOLD FLOUR from your grocer and stick to it.

"Ogilvie's Book for a Cook", with 125 pages of recipes that have been tried and tested, will be sent free if you will send us your address and mention the name of your dealer. 38

Each grate bar has three sides-long wear

When only one side of a grate bar is continually next to the fire all the wear is concentrated on that one side. The life of the grate bar is thus naturally just one-third as long as when the wear is distributed on three sides.

That explains why Sunshine grates have three lives. Each of the four grate bars has three sides. Each time the ashes are "rocked down" (no shaking with Sunshine) the side next to the fire can be changed. Thus the life of the grates is greatly prolonged.
